1M: 000

ETMMETERS Libris FROM THE Guymilens DEAD to the LIVING, (Mr. THO. BROWN,

By Capt. AYLOFF, Mr. HEN. BARKER, &c.

VIZ. FROM

fo. Haines of Merry Memory, Philip of Austria., to the Dau to his Friends at Will's.

Perkin Warbeck, to the pretend. ed Prince of Wales.

Abraham Cowley, to the Covent-Garden Society.

Charon, to the Illustrious and High born Fack Ketch Efg; Fames the 2d. to Lewis 14.

Julian, 'late Secretary to the Muses, to Will. Pierre of Lincolns-Inn Play-house.

Scarron to Lewis Le Grand.

Hannibal to the Victorious Prince Eugene of Savoy.

Pindar of Thebes, to Tom. Durfey.

Catharine of Medicis, to the Dutchess of Orleans.

Queen Mary to the Pope.

Harlequin, to Father Le Chaise.

Clergy of France.

phin.

fuvenal, to Boileau.

Diana of Poiltiers, to Madam Maintenon.

Hugh Spencer the younger, to all the Favourites and Ministers whom it may con-

Julia, to the Princess of Con-

Christina, Queen of Sweden, to the Women.

Rabelais, to the Phyficians.

The Mitred Hog; a Dialogue between Furetiere and Scar-

Beau Norton, to his Brothers at Hippolliro's.

Sir Bartholomew S-Serjeant S —

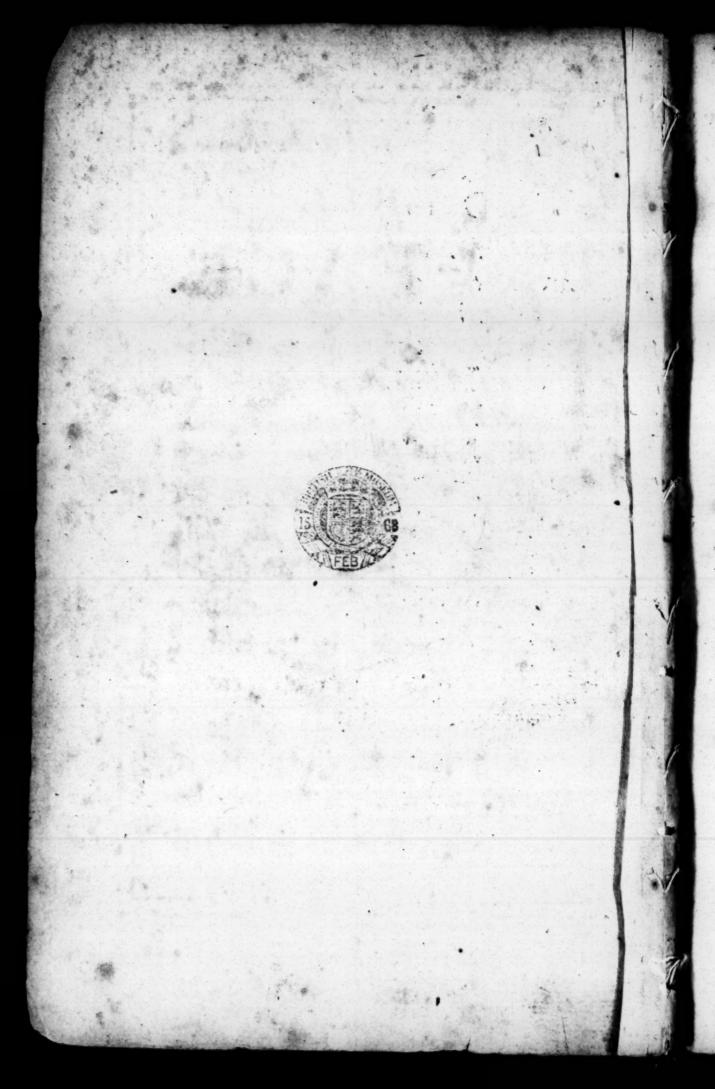

The Duke of Alva, to the And several others with their Answers.

> Infanti Melimela dato fatuasq; mariscas, Sed mibi, qua novit pungere, Chia Sapit.

> > The Third Edition.

Mart.

London, Printed in the Year, 1703.

THE

PREFACE.

mous Monsieur Fontenelle, in imitation of Lucian, publish'd his Dialogues des Morts; which Work his Country-men cry up for one of the finest pieces of Wit, that any Age or Nation has produced; tho' with all due submission to Monsieur Fontenelle, be it said, I look upon him to be as much inferiour to the Grecian Dialoguist, both in the poignancy of his Satyr, and force of his Expression, as the A 2 Lan-

Language of Paris is to that of

But to fay no more upon this point, these Dialogues of the Dead, · feem to have given our Author his first hint of Writing Letters from the Dead to the Living. I cou'd never yet inform my felf who it was that writ these Letters, which first aw the light in Holland, and perhaps 'tis not material to know; but this is certain, that he must be a Refuge, that was turn'd out of France upon the score of his Relig ion, as any body may fee that will be at the trouble of Reading his first Letter from Antiochus the Great, to Lewis the 14th.

Son

C

fi

A

· Some People perhaps will be of. fended at his familiar Treatment of his own Natural Sovereign, and Object that such Language is by no means becoming a Subject towards his Prince, let his provocations be never so violent: For my part, I will not enter into the Merrits of the Controversie; but whatever obligations a Frenchman may lie under to Lewis the Great, I am fure we Englishmen, as well as the rest of Europe, may justly be al. low'd to lay afide all Ceremonies of Decency and respect to a haughty infolent Tyrant, who has disturbed the tranquillity of Christendom above Fourty years, and who fe late unparallell'd Violation of the

r

Treaty

Treaty of Ryswic, all Orders of Men among us have resented with that Indignation as becomes them.

But if our Author feems any where to have drawn his Satyr undeservedly, I must needs say 'tis against Monsieur Boileau, who as he is the most Learned and Judicious Poet that France can boast of, so he does not Merit, in my opinion, fo severe an Invective for a little trifling Panegyrick upon Madam de Maintenon. It may be alledged in our Author's favour, that the Hugenots always considered that Lady as the chief occasion of their Oppressions and Sufferings, and consequently cannot forgive a Man that has bestow'd any Commendations tic

Cl

U B

W

w

B

th

C

g ri

L

of

h

y s e tions upon her. Be it so as they pretend, yet since the Nobility and Clergy of Erance, have pay'd such servile adorations to this Female Upstart, what wonder is it that Boileau, a Poet of fortune, has mix'd with the throng of her Admirers?

As for the Translation of these Letters, it was performed by my worthy aud ingenious Friend Capt. Barker, who was pleased to submit the Correction of it to me, tho he might very well have spared the Complement, since he is a much greater Master of French than my self, and to do him justice, has carried his Translation up to all the force and spirit of the Original: He it was that first gave me a sight

A 4

of

Friends in Town kmow, that long before I faw them, I had fallen upon the fame defign my felf, and intended to have executed it, as foon as fome other Affairs, wherein I am concern'd at prefent, wou'd give me leave. The few Verfes indeed that are intermingled with the Profe, are of my Composing; and tho' I must confess they are none of the best, yet I may without vanity affirm they are not inferiour to the French.

As these original Letters were not enough to make a just Volume of themselves, I was easily perswarded, at the instance of some Friends, to usher them in with a few of my

OWII

y

g

)~ 1-

n

I

e

d

e

d

e

5,

11

own, which I accordingly did, and at my vacant hours scribled some four or five Sheets, which I hope will not be unacceptable at this present juncture. Two worthy Gentlemen of my acquaintance, one of whose names the Reader will find before his performances, tho the other wou'd not let his be known, were pleas'd to contribute something out of their own store towards this Collection. Whether we have fallen short of the French Author, that we entirely leave to the Reader's better Judgment: However, if this imperfect Essay finds a kind reception in the World, perhaps it may give me encouragement to publish a set of Letters hereafter from the Dead to the Living; all of English Compolition. One

One Letter, I am afraid, will give Offence; wherein, there is fomething unhandsomely Reflecting on King Charles the First, and which had never passed the Press had I had the Inspection of it: But before I conclude, it may not be amiss to acquaint the Reader, that I have a Collection of Letters, all by my own Hand, now under the Press, part whereof are Tranflated from the best Masters, both Ancient and Modern, and the rest Originals of my own, address'd to feveral Gentlemen of my acquaintance; and tho' they have met with some unexpected Interruptions, will be certainly published within a Fortnight at farthest.

T. Brown.

TABLE

OFTHE

CONTENTS.

Letter of News from Mr. Joseph Haines, of merry Memory, to his Friends at Will's Coffe-house in Covent-Garden, by Mr. Tho. Brown Page I Answer to Mr. Joseph Haines, High Germain Astrologer, at the Sign of the Urinal and Cassiopea's Chair in Brandipolis upon Phlegethon, by the same hand.

Perkin Warbeck, to the Illustrious Prince of Wales, by Capt. Ayloss

P. 4 Mr.

A Table of the contents.

Mr. Dryden to my Lord D-by the same Hand, p. 43
Mr. Abraham Cowley, to the Covent-Garden Society, by the Same Hand. p. 46 Charon, to the Illustrious and High born Charon, to the Illustrious and High born Jack Ketch Esq; by the same Hands p. 48
P. 48
James the 2d, to Lewis the 14th by William Morrice Esq; p. 50 Lewis the 14th's Answer, to King James, by the same Hand. p. 56 Julian late Secretary of the Muses, to Will.Pierre of Lincons-Inn-fields Play-house, by another Hand. p. 61 Will. Pierre's Answer to Julian, by scarron to Lewis le Grand, by Mr.
Tho. Brown, p. 76
Hannibal to the Victorious Prince Fugene

가는 살이 하는 사람들은 경기가 없는 것이 없는 것이다.
A Table of the Contents.
Eugene of Savoy, by the same Hand. p. 99
Pindar of Thebes, to Tom Dy, by
the same Hand. p. 101
The following 30 Letters, by Mr. Hen. Barker.
Antiochus to Lewis the 14th.
p. 107
Lewis the 14th's Answer, p. 111.
Catharine de Medicis, to the Dutchess of Orleans, p. 114
The Answer of the Dutchess of Orleans to Catharine de Medicis, p. 118 Cardinal Mazarine, to the Marquis de Barbefieux, p. 120
The Marquiss Barbesieux Answer to Mazarine. p. 124
Mary of England to the Pope, p. 126
The Pope's Answer to Mary of England, p. 130
Harl-

ATable of the Contents.

Harlequin to Father le Chaise, p. 132 Father Le Chaise's Answer to Harlequin. p. 137
The Duke of Alva to the Clergy of France. p. 139
The Answer of the Clergy of France to the Duke. p. 143 Philip of Austria to the Dauphin.
p. 145
The Dauphin's Answer to Philip of Austria. p. 148
Juvenal to Boileau. p. 151 Boileau's Answer to Juvenal p. 155 Diana of Poictiers, to Madam Maintenon. p. 158
Madam Maintenon's Answer, to Diana of Poictiers. p. 163 Hugh Spencer the younger, to all Favourites and Ministers whom it may concern. p. 165

ALCO DE COMO DE COMPANIO DE COMPOSITION DE COMP
A Table of the Contents.
The Answer of the Chief Minister of the King of Ivetot to Hugh Spencer. p. 169
Julia to the Princess of Conti p. 171
The Princess of Conti's Answer to Julia p. 175
Dionysius the younger, to the Flatterers of what Degree or Country Soever p. 179
The Answer of the News-mongers to Dionysius p. 184 Christina Queen of Sweden to the Women. p. 186
The Answer of a young Vestal to the Queen. p. 193 Francis Rabelais to the Physicians at Paris.
Mr. Fagon first Phisician to Lewis the 14th, to Rabelais p. 202
The Dutchess of Fontange to the Cu mean Sibyll. p. 209

2 - 7 of 9 ce 3 n 5 of 8 1 5 1-8 1a 3 il it 5 be

A Table of the Contents.

The Cumean Sibyll's Answer to the Dutchess of Fontange. p. 2:0

The Mitred Hog; a Dialogue between Abbot Furetiere and Scarron, by Mr. Barker. p. 213

Beau Norton, to his Brothers at Hipollito's in Covent-Garden, by Capt. Ayloff. p. 249

Sir Bartholomew—, to the Worshipful Serjeant S—, by the same Hand. p. 258

LETTERS.

m

P

LETTERS

FROM THE

Dead to the Living,

By Mr. Tho. Brown.

A Letter of News from Mr. Joseph Haines of Merry Memory, to his Friends at Will's Coffee-House in Covent-Garden.

Gentlemen;

1e

0 n

ツろーツラ

p-

ne

8

Si

Had done my self the Honour to write to you long ago, but wanted a convenience of sending my Letters, for you must not imagine it is as easie a matter for us on this side the River Styx, to maintain a correspondence with you in the Upper World, as it to send a Pacquet from London to Rotterdam; or from Paris to Madrid: But upon the News of a fresh

A Letter from Mr. Joseph Haines, fresh War ready to break out in your part of the World (which, by the bye, makes us keepHoly-day here in Hell)Pluto having thought sit to dispatch an extraordinary Messenger to see how your Parliament, upon whose Resolutions the Fate of Europe seems wholly to depend, will behave themselves in this critical Conjuncture, I tip'd the Fellow a George to carry this Letter for me, and leave it with the Master at Will's, in his way to Westminster.

I am not insensible, Gentlemen, that Homer, Virgil, Dante, Don Quevedo, and many more before me, have given an account of these Subterranean Dominions, for which reason it may look like Affectation or Vanity in me to meddle with a Subject so often handled; but if new Travels into Italy, Spain and Germany, are daily read with approbation, because new matters of enquiry and observation perpetually arise, I don't fee why the present state of the PlutonianKingdoms may not be acceptable, there having been as great Changes and Alterations in these Infernal Regions, as in any other part of the Universe whatever.

When I shook hands with your upper Hemisphere, I stumbled into a dark, uncouth,

f

1

a

ti

A

b

fi

fi

H

fi

to 0

O

0

our ye,

uto

or.

ar-

ate

vill

ın-

ry

he er.

10-

na-

int for

on ect

in-ad

of

fe,

he

le.

nd

as

at-rec

יח-

th,

couth, dismal Lane, which, if it be lawful to compare great things with finall, somewhat resembles that dusky dark cut under the Mountains, called the Grotto of Puzzoli in the way to Naples. I was in fo great a Consternation, that I don't remember exactly how long it was, but this I remember full well, that there were a world of Niches on both fides of the wall, adorned and furnished with Harpies, Gorgons, Centaurs, Chimeras, and fuch like pretty Curiofities, which could not but give a Man a World of Titillation as he travell'd on the Road. The Threeheaded Geryon, put me in mind of the Master of the Temple's Three Intellectual Minds: and when I faw Briareus with his Hundred Arms and Heads, out of my Zeal to King William and his Government, I could not but wish that we had had so well qualified a Person for Secretary of State ever fince the Revolution; for having fo many Heads and Hands to employ, he might eafily have manag'd all Affairs Domestick and Foreign, and been both Dictator and Clerk to himself: Which, besides the advantage of keeping fecret all Orders and Instructions, (and that you know, Gentlemen, is of no small importance in Politicks) would B 2 have

Summ in his Civil Lift.

4

Being arrived at the end of this doleful and execrable Lane, I came into a large, open, barren Plain, through which ran a River, whose Water was as black as my Hat: Coming to the banks of this wonderful River, an old ill-look'd wrinkl'd Fellow in a tatter'd Boat, which did not feem to be worth a Groat, making towards the Shoar, beckon'd and held out his right hand to me: Knowing nothing of his Business or Character, I could not imagine what he meant by doing fo; but upon fecond Thoughts, thinking he had a mind to have his Fortune told, You must understand, old Gentleman, says I to him, that there are three principle Lines in a Man's hand, the first of which is called by the learned Ludovicus Vives, Secretary to Tamberlain the Magnificent, the Linea Biotica, or, Line of Life; the second, The Linea Hepatica, or, Liver-line; the third and last, The Linea Intercalaris, so called by Sebastian Munster and Erra Pater, because it crosses the two aforesaid Lines in an Equicrural Pa-Hold your impertinent stuff, says the old Ferry man, Errame no Erra Paters, but speak to the point, and give me my Fare, Fail p be bu if ma tif

So

w w ni

fa fo

Sico

ti

1

able

leful

irge,

ran

as Z

von-

kl'd

not ards

ight

his

zine

1 fe-

ind

der-

that an's

arnber-

or,

epa-

The

tian

fes

Pa-

ays

ers.

my

are,

Fare, if you design to come over. By this I perceiv'd my mistake and knew him to be Charon: So I dived into my Pockets, but alas, I found all the Birds were flown, if ever any had been there, which you may believe, Gentlemen, was no small Mortification to me. Get you gone for a Rafcally scoundrel as you are, says Charon, some Son of a Whore of a Fidler, or Player I warrnt ye; go and take up your quarters with those Pennyless Rogues that are Sunning themselves on yonder hillock. To see now, how a Man may be mistaken by a fair outside! When I came up to 'em, I found them a parcel of jolly well-look'd Fellows, who, one would have thought, were wealthy enough to have fined for Sheriffs: I counted, let me see, Six Princes of the Empire that were younger Brothers, Ten French Counts, Fourteen Knights of Malta, Twelve Welsh Gentlemen, Sixteen Scotch Lairds, with abundance of Chymists, Projectors, Ensurers, Noblemens Creditors, and the like; that were all Wind-bound for want of the ready Rhino. Two days we continu'd in this doleful condition; and as Dr. Shertock fays of himself, in relation to the 13th. Chapter of the Romans, here I stuck, and had stuck till till the last Conflagration, if it had not been for Bishop Overal's Convocation-Book: e'en so here we might have tarry'd world without end, if an honest Teller of the Exchequer, and a Clerk of the Pay-Office, had not come to our relief; who understanding our Case, cry'd out, Come along, Gentlemen, we have Money enough to defray twenty such trifles as this; God be praised, we had the good Luck to die before the Parliament look'd into our Accounts. With that they gave Charon a broad Piece each of 'em, fo our whole Caravan confifting of about feventy Persons in all, that had not a Farthing in the World to bless themselves, ferry'd over to the other fide of the River.

As we were crossing the Stream, Charon told us how an Irish Captain would have trick'd him. He came strutting down to the River side, says he, as sine as a Prince, in a long Scarlet Cloak, all bedaub'd with Silver Lace, but had not a Penny about him. Dear joy, cries he to me, I came away in a little haste from the other World, and left my Breeches behind me, but I'll make thee amends by Chreest and St. Patrick, for I'llrefresh thy ancient Nostrils with some of Hippolito's best Snuff, which cost me a week ago a Crown an ounce. I told

tol

110

be

du ma

bio

bo

ab

pr

gr On

m C

th

a

r

b

f

tl

0

C

been e'en

orld

the fice,

ong,

fray

sed,

lia-

hat

of 10t

es,

r.

on

ve.

vn

a

e-

a

to

е,

d

or, I

told the Hibernian, that old Birds were not to be taken with Chaff, nor Charon to be banter'd out of his due with a little dust of Sot-wood, and giving him a reprimand with my Stretcher over the Noddle, bid him go like a Coxcomb as he was about his business. The wretch fanter'd about the banks for a Month, but at last, pretended to be a French Man, got over gratis this Summer among the Duke of Orlean's Retinue. But what was the most furprising piece of News I ever heard, Charon affured us upon his Veracity, that the late King of Spain was forc'd to lie by a full Fortnight for want of Money to carry him over : for Cardinal Portocarero had been so busie in forging his Will, that he forgot to leave the poor Monarch a Farthing in his Pocket, and that at last, one of his own Grandees, coming by that way, was so complaisant as to defray his Prince's passage; and well he might, says our furly Ferry-man, for in five Years time he had cheated him of Two Millions.

We were no sooner landed on the other side of the River, but some of us fil'd off to the right, and others to the left, as their business called them: For my part I made the best of my way to the samous City

B 4

Brandi-

h

in

C

11

Brandipolis, seated upon the River Phle. gethon, as being a place of the greatest Commerce and Refort, in all King Pluto's Do-Who should I meet upon the Road but my old Friend and Acquaintance Mr. Nokes the Comedian, who received me with all imaginable Love and Affection? Mr. Haines, says he, I am glad with all my heart to see you in Hell; upon my Salvation we have expected you here this great while, and I question not but our Royal Master will give you a reception besitting a Person of your extraordinary Merit. Mr. Nokes, faid I, Your most obedient Servant, you are pleas'd to Compliement, but I know no other Merit I have but that of being honour'd with your Friendship. But my dear Jo, crys he, How go affairs in Covent-Garden does Cuckoldom flourish, and Fornication maintain its gound still against the Reformers? and the Playhouse in Drury-Lane, is it as much frequented asit us'd to be? I had no fooner given him a fatisfactory answer to these questions, but we found our selves in the Suburbs, so my Friend Nokes, with that Gaiety and openness, which became him fo well at the Play-house, Jo, says he, I'll give thee thy welcome to Hell; with that he, bleom-Dothe nce ved aivith my his oying rit. ant, t I of nip. airs ish, till ayfre. ner iefę the hat nim

lil

hat

he,

he carry'd me to a little blind Coffee-house in the middle of a dirty Ally, but certainly one of the worst furnish'd Tenements I ever beheld: There was nothing to be seen but a few broken Pipes, two or three founder'd Chairs, and bare naked Walls. with not so much as a superannuated Almanack, or tatter'd Ballad to keep 'em in countenance; fo that I could not but fancy my felf in some of Love's little Tabernacles about Wild-street, or Drury-Lane. Come Mr. Haines, and what are you difposed to drink? What you please, Sir. Here, Madam, give the Gentleman a Glass of Geneva. As foon as I had whipt it down, my Friend Nokes plucking me by the Sleeve, and whispering me in the Ear, Prithee Jo, who dost think that Lady at the Bar is? I consider'd her very attentively, by the same token she was three times as ugly as my Lady Fright-all, Countels of—and three times as thick and bulky as Mrs. Pix the Poetress, and very fairly told him, I knew her not. Why then I shall surprise you, This is the famous Semiramis. The Devil she is! answer'd I: What is this the celebrated and renowned Queen of Babylon, she that built those stupendous Walls and pensile Gardens, of which

I

V

2

a

or

B

T

m

th

pl

ch

th

W

T

nı

m

th

to

fe

to

y

0

01

W

of

Ca

le

fh

b

which ancient Hiftorians tell us fo many Miracles; that Victorious Heroine, who eclipted the Triumphs of her Illustrious Husband; that added Æthiopia to her Empire; and was the wonder as well as the ornament of her Sex? Is it possible she should fall so low as to be forced to fell Geneva, and fuch ungodly Liquors for a Substance ? 'Tis e'en fo, says Mr. Nokes, and this may ferve as a Lesson of Instruation to you, that when once Death has laid his Icy Paws upon us, all other distinctions of Fortune and Quality immediately vanish. These words were no fooner out of his Mouth, but in came a formal old Gentleman, and plucking a large wooden Box from under his Cloak, Will you have any fine Snuff, Gentlemen, here is the finest Snuff in the Universe, Gentlemen; anever failing Remedy, Gentlemen, against the Megrims and Head-ach. who do you take this worthy Person to be, fays Mr. Nokes? But that I am in this lower World, cry'd I, I durst swear 'tis the very individual Quaker that fells his Herb Snuff at the Rainbow Coffee-House. Damnably mistaken says Mr. Nokes, before George, no less a Man than the Great Cyrus, the first Founder of the Persian Monarchy. I was

ny

ho

ous

her l'as

ble

to for

es,

ru-1as

di-

1e-

no

ea

k,

n,

n-

n,

nd

to

tis

118 ſe.

re

16,

y. as

I was going to bless my felf at this discovery, when a Jolly Red-nos'd Women in a Straw Hat pop'd into the Room, and in a shrill Treble cry'd out, Any Buckles, Combs or Scizers, Gentlemen, and Tooth-picks. Bottle-Screws or Tweezers, Silver Buttons or Tobacco-stoppers, Gentlemen. Well now, my worthy Friend Mr. Haines, who do you think this may be? The Lord knows, reply'd I, for here are fuch an unaccountable choppings and changings among you, that the Devil can't tell what to make of 'em. Why then in short, This is the Vertuous Thalestris, Queen of the Amazons, the same numerical Princess that beat the hoof so many hundred Leagues to get Alexander the Great to administer his Royal Nipple to her. But Jo, fince I find thee fo affected at these alterations that have hapned to Persons who lived so many hundred years ago, I am refolv'd to shew thee some of a more modern date, and particularly of fuch as either thou wast acquainted with in the other World, or at least hast often hear'd mention'd in Company. calling for the other Glass of Geneva, he left a Tester at the Bar, and Semiramis, to thew her Courtly breeding, drop'd us abundance of Curt'sies, and paid us as much respect respect at our going out, as your Two Penny French Barbers in So-ho do to a Gentleman that gives them a brace of odd half-pence above the original Contractin

m

he

ga

di

yo

is

ri

di

at

C

m

B

t

1

2

their Sign.

We walkt through half a dozen Streets without meeting any thing worthy of observation. At last my Friend Nokes, pointing to a little Edifice, which exactly resembled Dr, Burges's Conventicle in Russel Court; says he, your old acquaintance Tony Lee, who turn'd Presbyterian Parson upon his coming into these quarters, holds forth most notably here every Sunday: Jacob Hall and Jevon are his Clerks, and chant it admirably, Mother Stratford, the Dutchess of Mazarine, my Lord Warwick, and Sir Fleetwood are his constant hearers; and to Tony's everlasting Honour be it spoken, he delivers his Fire and Brimstone with so good a Grace, splits his Text so Judiciously, turns up the whites of his Eyes so Theologically, cuffs his Cushion so Orthodoxly, and twirls his Band-strings so Primitively, that Pluto has lately made him one of his Chaplains in Ordinary. From this we crossed another Street, which one may properly enough call the Bow-street or Pall-Mall of Brandipolis. No sawcy Trades. man en-

dd

tin

ets

obin-

re-

ufnce

on lds

ay:

nd

he

ck,

rs;

-00

ne

fo

his

fo

fo

im

m

ne

or

ef-

an

man or Mechanick dares presume to live here, but 'tis wholly inhabited by fine gaudy fluttering Sparks, and fine airy Ladies, who in no respect are inferiour to yours in Covent-Garden. When the Sky is Serene, and not a breath of Wind stirring, you may fee whole Covies of them displaying their finery in the Street; but at other times you never see 'em out of a Chair, for fear of discomposing their Commodes or Periwigs. We had not gone twenty Paces, before we met three flaming Beaux of the first Magnitude, the like of whom were never feen at the Vourhoot at the Hague, the Tuilleries at Paris, or the Mall in St. James's Park. They were all three in Black (for you must know we are in deep mourning here for the death of my Lady Proferpine's favourite Monkey) but he in the middle, though he had neither Face nor Shape to qualifie him for a Gallant; for he had a Phiz as forbidding as Beau Wh-ker, and was as thick about the waste as the fat squab Porter at the Griffin-Tavern in Fuller's Rents; yet he made a most Magnificent Figure: His Periwig was large enough to have loaded a Camel, and he had bestowed upon it at least a Buthel of Powder I warrant you. His His Sword-knot dangled upon the ground, and his Steenkirk that was most agreeably discolour'd with Snuff from top to bottom, reach'd down to his Waste: He carried his Hat under his lest Arm, walkt with both his Hands in his wast-band of his Breeches, and his Cane, that hung negligently down in a string from his right Arm, trail'd most harmoniously against the Pebbles, while the Master of it, trapping it nicely upon his Toes, was humming to himself,

Oh! ye happy happy Groves, Witness of our tender Loves.

Having given you this discription of him, I need not trouble my self to enlarge upon the dress of his Two Companions, who, they fell much short of his inimitable Original in point of Garniture and Dress, yet they were singular enough to have drawn the Eyes of Men, Women, and Children after 'em in any part of Europe. As I observed this sight with a great deal of admiration, Mr. Nokes very gravely asked me, who I took the middlemost Person to be apponsy telling him I had neverseen him before, nor knew a syllable of him or his private History, why, says ni on W in dr 'ti for no aff ble a (hir wi wa lis wi ing

M

Ma Rui tor is the find Pla

but

Cy

lo n ıd,

oly

m, his

th

es, vn

oft

ile

on

m,

on

no, ole

fs,

ve nd

pe.

eal

ly

er.

lele

ys 1r.

Mr. Nokes, this is Diogenes the famous Cynick Philosopher, and his Two Companions are George Fox and James Naylor the Quakers. Diogenes, replyed I to him, why he was one of the arrantest Slovens in all Greece, and a profest Enemy to Landresses, for he never parted with his Shirt, 'till his Shirt parted with him. No matter for that, says Mr. Nokes, the case is alter'd now with him, for he has the vanity and affectation of twenty Sir Courtly Nices's blended together, he constantly dispatches a Courier to Lisbon every Month, to bring hima Cargo of Limons to wash his hands with; he sends to Montpellier for Hungary water : Turin furnishes him with Rosa Solis ; Nismes with Eau de Canelle, and Paris with Ratifa to settle his Maw in the Morn-Nothing will go down with him but Ortolans, Snipes and Woodcocks; and Matson, that some years ago lived at the Rummer in Queenstreet, is the administrator of his Kitchin. This, faid I to him, is the most fantastick change I have seen fince my passing the Styx: For who the Plague wou'd have believ'd that that ancient Quaker Diogenes, and those modern Cynicks Fox and Naylor should degenerate so much from their Primitive Institution, 25

q

to ne

W

W

of

be an of

th

Ba

Son

Wa

ha

mı

and hai

the

bri

Le

is l

Bal

dal

thy

ho

has fen

Ha

as to set up for Fops? When we came up to em, Diogenes gave us a most gracious Bow, but those two everlasting Complimenters his Friends, I was afraid, wou'd have murder'd me with their Civilities; for which reason I disingaged my self from em something abruptly, by the same token, I overheard James Naylor call me Bougre Insulaire and Tramontane for my ill manners.

When the Coast was clear of 'em, says I to Mr. Nokes, every thing is so turned topsie turvy here with you, that I can hardly resolve my self whether I walk upon my Head or my Feet: Right, Mr. Haines, says he, but time is precious, so let's mend our pace if you please, that we may see all the curiosities of this renowned City before 'tis dark.

The next Street we came into, we faw a tall thin-gutted Mortal driving a Wheel-barrow of Pears before him, and crying in a hoarse Tone, Pears twenty a Penny: looking him earnestly in the Face, I presently knew him to be Beau Heveningham, but I found he was shy, and so took no further notice of him. Not ten doors from hence, says Mr. Nokes, lives poor Norton that shot himself. I ask'd him in what quality

ne

Ci-

n'd

s;

m

-01

ne

ill

ys

ed

211

p-

es,

nd

all

e-

W

el-

ng

y:

·e·

m.

no

m

on

ity

quality, heanswered me, as sub-operator to a disperser of darkness, Anglice, a Journey-man to a Tallow-chandler. I would willingly have made him a short vifit, but was intercepted in my defign by a brace of Fellows that were link'd to their good behaviour like a pair of Spanish Gallyflaves; tho' they agreed as little as fowler and Ringwood coupled together, for one of 'em lugg'd one way, and his Brother the other. I foon knew them to be Dick Baldwin, the Whig Bookfeller, and Mafon the Nonfwearing Parson, whom, as I was afterwards informed, Judge Minos, had order'd to be yoak'd thus, to be a mutual Plague and Punishment to one another. Both of 'em made up to us as hard as they could drive. Well Sir, says the Levite, what comfortable News do you bring from St. Germains? our old Friend Lewis le Grand is well, I hope. Damn Lewis le Grand, and all his adherents, cries Dick Baldwin, Pray Sir, what racy touches of Scandal have been publish'd of late by my worthy Friends Sam. Johnson, Mr. Touchin, and honest Mr. Atwood; and the Gallows that has groan'd so long for Robin Hog the Mesfenger, when is it like to lose its longing? Have no fresh batteries attack'd the Court lately

CI

ny

W

W

O

no

1 ab

Sa

Su

de

Br

ca

W

be

St

W

ar

[e

B

m

th

b

n

lately from honest Mr. Darby's, in Bartbolomew-close? And prithee what new Piracies from the Quakers at the Pump in Little-Brittain? What new Whales, Devils, Ghosts, Murders, from Wilkins in the Fryars? but above all, dear Sir, of what Kidey are the present Sheriffs, and particularly my Lord Mayor, how stands he affected? Why Dick, says I to him, fearing to be stunn'd with more Interrogatories, tho' most of the folks I have seen here are chang'd either for the better or the worse, yet I find thou art the True, Primitive, Busie, Pragmatical, Prating, Muttering Dick Baldwin still, and wilt be fo to the end of the Chapter. In the name of the Three Furies what should make thee trouble thy felf about Sheriffs and Lord Mayors? But thou art of the same foolish belief, I find, with thy brother Coxcombs at North's Coffee house, who think all the Fate of Christendom depends upon the choice of a Lord Mayor; whereas to talk of things familiarly, and as we ought to do, what is this two leg'd Animal ycleped a Lord Mayor, but a certain temporary Machine of the Cities fetting up, who on certain appointed days is obliged to ride on Horse-back to please the Cheap10-

ra-

in

)e-

in

of

nd ids

m,

ga-

en

or

ie,

ıg,

be

me

ke

nd

ne

er

ho

ids

re-

we ni-

in

ng

ob-

he

ap-

Cheapside Wives, who must devour so many Tun of Plum porridge, and scuffle his way through so many furlongs of Custard, who is only terrible to delinquent Bakers, Oyster women, and Scavengers; and has no other privilege above his Brethren, as I know of, but that of taking a comfortable Nap in his Gold Chain at Paul's or Salteres-Hall; to either of which places his Confcience, that is, his Interest carries him. Surly Dick was going to fay something in defence of the City Magistrate, but my Brother Nokes and I prevented him, by calling to the next Hackney Coach-man, whom to my great furprize, I found to be the Famous Dr. Busby of Westminster School; who now, instead of Flogging Boys was content to act in an humbler Sphere, and exercise his lashing Talent upon Hor-We ordered him to fet us down at Bedlam, where my Friend Nokes affured me we should find Diversion enough, and the first Person we met with in this Celebrated mansion, was the famous Queen Dido of Carthage, supported by the Ingenious Mrs. Bhen on the one lide, and the Learned Christiana Queen of Sweden on the other. Gentlemen, cry'd she, I conjure you, by that respect which is due to Truth, C 2 ana and by that complaisance which is owing to Us of the fair Sex, to believe none of those idle Lyes that Virgil had told of me. That impudent Versifier has given out, that I murder'd my self for the sake of his pious Trojan, the Hero of his Romance; whereas I declare to you, Gentlemen, as I hope to be sav'd, that I never saw the Face of that fugitive Scoundrel in my Life; but died in my Bed with as much decency and resignation as any Woman in the Parish: But what touches my Honour most of all, is that most horrid Calumny of my being all alone with Aneas in the Cave. Upon this I humbly remonstrate to her Majesty, that altho' Virgil had taken the liberty to leave her and his pious Trojan in a Grotto toge. ther, yet he no where infinuated that any thing Criminal had passed between 'em. How, says Mrs. Behn in a fury, was it not scandal enough in all Conscience to say, That a Man and a Woman were in a dark blind Cavern by themselves? What tho' there was no fuch conventience as a Bed or a Couch in the Room; nay, not fo much as a broken-back'd Chair; yet I desire you to tell me, sweet Mr. Haines, what other business can a Man and Woman have in the dark together, but. - Ay, cries the Queen of Sweden, what other business can 2

L

h

m

ti

a

u

Us

lle

11-

d

he

to

I

el

ch

be

of

g

15 it

e

2.

y

1.

t

3

r

1

1

a Man and a Woman have in the dark, but, as the Fellow fays in the Moor of Venice, to make the Beast with two Backs? not to pick Straws, I hope, or to tell tales of a Tub. Under Favour Ladies, reply'd I, 'tis impossible, I should think, for a grave fober Man and a Woman of Difcretion, to pass a few hours alone without carrying matters to far home as you infinuate. What in the dark! crys Queen Dido, that's mine A -- in a Band box. Let Peoples Inclinations be never fo modest and virtuous, yet this cursed darkness puts the Devil and all of wickedness into their heads: The Man will be pushing on his fide, that's certain; and as for the Woman, I'll fwear for her, that when no body can fee her blush, she will be consenting. in fine, tho' the Soul be never fo well fortified to hold out a Seige, yet the Body, as foon as Love's Artillery begins to play upon it, will foon beat a Parley, and make a seperate Treaty for it self.

Thus her Punic Majesty run on, and the Lord knows when her Royal Clack would have done striking, if a Female Messenger had not come to her in the nick of time and whisper'd her in the Ear, to go to the famous Lucretia's crying out, who, it seems,

C 3 was

n

C

ir

n

fo

q

tl

L

ŀ

was got with Child upon a Hay-cock by Æsop the Fabulist. As soon as Queen Dido and her two pratting Companions were gone out of the Room. Mr. Nokes, fays I, you have without Question seen A fop very often, therefore pray let me beg the favour of you, to tell me whether he is such a deformed ill favour'd Wight, as the Historians tepresent him; for you must know we have a modern Critic of singular humanity near St. James's, that has been pleased in fome late Dissertations upon Phalaris's Epistles, to maintain that he was a wellshap'd handsome Gentleman, and for a proof of this, inlifts much upon Asop's intriguing with his Fellow-slave, the beautiful Rhodope. No, no, replies Mr Nokes, Æ fop is just such a crumpled hump-shoulder'd Dog for all the World, as you fee him before Ogilby's Translation of his Fables; and let the abovementioned Grammarian, I think they call him, Dr. Bentivolio, fay what he will to the contrary, 'tis even fo as I tell you. And now we are upon the Chapter of Dr. Bentivolio, about a month ago I happen'd to make merry over a Bowl of Punch with Phalaris the Scilian Tyrant, who fwore by all that was good and facred, that he would trounce the unmannerly Slave by

Di-

ere

s I,

ery

our

de-

ori-

we

zity

111 is's

ell-

ra

in-

ıti-

es.

ul-

im

s;

m, av

fo

he

th

WI

it,

d,

ly

ve

Slave for robbing him of those Epistles, which hath gone unquestion'd under his name for so many Ages: But the time is coming, said he, when I shall make this impudent Pedant cry peccavi for the unworthy Treatment he has given me: I have my Brazen Bull, Heaven be prais'd, roady for him, and as soon as he comes into these quarters, will shut him up in it, and roast him with his own dull Volumes, and those of his dearly beloved Friends the Dutch Commentators.

By this time we were got up to the upper end of the Room, when fays Mr. Nokes to me, I will shew you a most surprising fight. You must know this place, like Noah's Ark, contain's Beast's of all sorts and sizes; Some have their brains turn'd by Politicks, who except some three or four that are suffer'd to go abroad with a Keeper, are lock'd up in a large Apartment up Stairs. Puppies rave eternally about Liberty and Property, and the Jura Populi, and are fo damn'd mischievous, that it is dangerous to venture near them. England sends more of this fort to Bedlam, then all the Countries of Europe besides. Others again have their Intellects Fly-blown by Love, by the same token that most of the poor wretches C 4 that that are in this doleful Predicament come out of France, Spain, Italy and such hot Climates. Now and then indeed, we have a silly Apprentice or fo, takes a leap from London-bridge into the Thames, or desently hangs himself in a Garret in his Mistresses Garters, but these Accidents happen but feldom; and besides, since Fornication has made so great a progress among us, love is observed not to operate so powerfully in England as he formerly did, when there was no relief against him but Matrimony. Some again have their Pia Mater addled by Religion, but neither are the Sots of this Species so numerous in Britain or elsewhere, as they were in the days of yore; for the Priefts of mostReligions have play'd their game so aukwardly, that not one Man in a Thousand will trust them with thuffling of the Cards.

But of all the various fort of Mad-men that come hither, the Rhimers or Versifiers far exceed the rest in number: Most of these sellows in the other World were Mayors, or Aldermen, or Deputies of Wards that knew nothing but the rising and falling of Stock, squeezing young Heirs, and cheating their Customers: But now the Tables are turn'd, for they eat and drink

and upo the bid to y ny o I she or S Rhi Jud

to

drin

Ware Ver was Chi Far

ver

I fa Ma to

Rh ma and

ho

Ep Wi Sei

drink, nay, fleep and dream in Rhime. and have a Distict to discharge at you upon every occasion. With that he open'd the Wicket of the uppermost Door, and bid me peep in. 'Tis impossible to describe to you the surprize I was in, to see so many of my City acquaintance there, whom I should sooner have suspected of Burglary or Sacrilege than of tacking a pair of Rhimes together: But it feems this is a Judgment upon these wretches, for the aversion they shew to the Muses when they were Living. The walls were lined with Veries from top to bottom, and happy was the wretch that could get a bit of Charcoal to express the happiness of his Fancy upon the poor Plaister. The first Man I saw was Sir John Peak, formerly Lord Mayor of London, who bluntly came up to the Door and asked me what was Rhime to Crambo? immediately Sir Thomas Pilkington popt over his Shoulder, and pray Friend, fays he, for I perceive you are newly come from the other world, how go the affairs of Parnassus? What new Madrigals, Epithalamiums, Sonnets, Epigrams and Satyrs have you brought with you? What pretty conceits had Mr. Settle in his last London Triumphs? What Plays

e

f

S

tu

pu

al

D

H

ru

fri

na

aı

W

C

yo

Si

lo

M

tri

un

w lon

Hi

Tr

tio

fo

jog

as

Pl

up

fel

Fir

Plays have taken of late? Mrs. Bracegirdle does the live still unmarried, and pray, Sir, how do Mr. Batterton's Lungs hold out? but now I think on't, I have a delicious Copy of Verles to shew you, upon the divine Melefinda's frying of Pancakes, only stay a minute while I step yonder to fetch 'em: He had no sooner turn'd his back but I plucked too the Wicket and gave him the flip, for certainly of all the Plagues in Hell, or t'other side of it, nothing comes up to that of a confounded Repeater. Leaving these Versifying Infects to them. felves, we walked up a pair of Stairs into the upper Room, one end of which was the quarter for distracted Lovers, as the other was for the Lunatick Republicans. I just cast my eyes into Cupid's Bear-Garden, and observed that the Walls were all adorn. ed with mysterious Hieroglyphicks of Love, as hearts transfixed, and abundance of oddfashion'd battering Rams, such as young Lovers use to trace upon the Cieling of a Coffee-house with the smoak of a Candle. Some half a fcore of 'em were making to the door but having feen enough of these Impertinents in the other world, I had no great inclination to fuffer a new Persecution from em in this So my Friend and I turn'd nd I dle

ay,

blo

eli.

on

es,

· to

his

ave ues

nes

ter.

em-

nto

was

the

is. I

den,

orn.

ove,

odd-

ung

of a

dle.

g to

hele

d no

uti-

rn'd

turn'd up to the Apartment where the Republicans were lock'd up, who made fuch a Hurricane and noise, as if a Legion of Devils had been broke loofe among them. Harrington, I remember, was the most unruly of the whole pack. Thanks to my friends in London, fays he, I hear my Oceana is lately reprinted, and furbish'd with a new Dedication to those judicious and worthy Gentlemen, my Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen. You need not value your felf so much upon that, fays Algernoon Sidney, for my works were publish'd there long before yours. And so were mine, crys Milton, at the expence of some worthy Patriots, that were not afraid to publish them under a Monarchical Government: But what think you of my Memoirs, crys Ludlow, for if you talk of Histories, there's a History for you, which, for Sincerity and Truth, never faw its fellow fince the Crea-Upon this the uproar begun afresh, fothinking it high time to withdraw, I jogg'd my friend Nokes by the Elbow, and as we went down Stairs, told him, that Pluto was certainly in the right on't to lock up these hot-headed Mutineers by themfelves, allow them neither Pen, Ink, Fire, nor Candle; for should he give them leave leave to propagate their seditious Doctrines, he would only find himself King of Erebus, at the courtesse of his loving Subjects.

Just as we were going out of this famous Edifice, I have an odd piece of News to tell you, fays Mr. Nokes, which is, That altho' we have Men of all Countries more or less here, yet there never was one Irish Man in it. How comes that about, I befeech you, faid I to him? Why replyeshe, Madness always supposes a loss of Reason; but the Duce is in't if a Man can lose that which he never possess'd in his Life. Oh your humble Servant, answer'd I, 'tis well none of our swaggering dear Joys in Covent-Garden hear you talk so, for if they did, ten to one but they would cut your Throat for this reflection upon the Intellects of their Countrey, and fend you to the Devil for the honour of St. Patrick.

When we came out into the open Air again, and had taken half a dozen turns in the neighbouring Fields, Mr Nokes, fays I, 'tis my misfortune to come to this place without a farthing of Money in my Pocket, and Alecto confound me, if I know what course to take for my Maintenance, therefore I would desire you to put me in a way. Have no care for that, says Mr. Nokes, his Infer-

Infe to u diffe Prin Cits to fe fand tory again Pen awa > that the fuch the 70,

to f thou

page gick tren

man was teou us of Phy Ctor

a p

to his Friends at Will's Coffee-House.

Infernal Majesty is very kind and obliging to us Players, and because we act so many different parts in the other World, as Kings, Princes, Bishops, Privy Councellors, Beaux, Cits, Saylors, and the like, gives us leave to follow what Profession we have most a fancy to. For my part, I keep a Nicknackatory or Toy-shop, as I formerly did over against the Exchange, and turn a sweet Penny by it; for our Gallants here throw away their Money after a furious rate. Now To, I think thou canst not do better than to fet up for a High GermanFortune teller, thou knowest all the Cantand Roguery of that practice to perfection, and besides hast the best Phyz in the world to carry on As for Money to farnish fuch an Affair. thee an House and set up a convenient Equipage, to buy thee a pair of Gloves, a Magick Looking-glass, and all other accoutrements of that nature, thou shalt command as much as thou hast occasion for. I was going to thank my Friend for fo courteous an offer, when who should pop upon us on the sudden but his Polish Majesty's Physician in Ordinary, the late famous Doctor Conner of Bowstreet; but in so wretched a pickle, so tatter'd a condition, that I could hardly know him. How comes this about

nes,

ous s to ale or Aan ech

ladbut

our

one

ten for neir for

Air

ays ace

ket,

fore

his ferabout noble Doctor, faid I to him, what is Fortune unkind, and do the Planets frown upon Merit? I remember you were going to fet up your Coach, and marry the Wi. dow Bentley in Russel-street, just before your last distemper hurry'd you out of the world. Is it possible the learned Author of Evange. lium Medicum should want Bread?orDoctor did you leave all your Hibernian confidence behind you? I thought a true Irishman could have made his Fortune in any part of the Universe;

Ille nihil, nec me querentem vana moratur, Sed graviter gemitus imo do pectore ducens.

Mr. Haines, says he, Pluto, to say no worse of him, is very ungrateful to the Gentlemen of our Faculty; and were he not a crown'd head, I would not flick to call him a Poltrone. I am fure no Body of Men cultivate his Interest with more industry and Success, than we Physicians. What would his Dominions be but a bare Wilderness and Solitude, if we did not daily take care to flock them with fresh Colonies? This, I can fay for my felf, that I did not let him lose one Patient that fell into my hands; nay, rather than he should want

wa

Bu

ces

the

ha

len

im

Fla

vej

rid nie

No

[el] ton

Pro he

Pe

an

Ne

Da

let

for

er

the

W

up

no

I

m

hat wn oing Wirour orld. ngector ence mak rt of itur, ens. 10 the e he t to y of lnians, bare not fresh that fell ould vant want Customers, I practised upon my self. But after the received Maxim of most Princes, I find he loves the Treason and hates the Traytor; so that no People are put to harder shifts in Hell, than the Sons of Ga-Would you believe it, Mr. Haines, the immortal Dr. Willis, is content to be a Flayer of dead Horses; The famous Harvey, is turn'd Higler, and you may fee him ride every morning to Market upon a Pannier of Eggs; Mayern is glad to Pimp to Noblemen's Valets de Chambre; Old Glisson fells Vinegar upon a lean scraggy Tit; Moreton, is return'd to his old occupation, and Preaches in a little Conventicle you can herdly fwing a Cat round in ; Lower fells Penny Prayer-Books all the week, and curls an Amen in a Meeting house on Sundays; Needham in conjuction with Captain Dawson is Bully to a Bordello; and the celebrated Sydenham empties Close-stools. As for my felf, I am sometimes a small retainer to a Billiard Table, and sometimes when the Master on't is sick, earn a Penny by a Whimfey Board. I lie with a Linkman upon a Flock-bed in a Garret, and have not feen a clean shirt upon my back, fince I came into this curfed Country. my troth, said I, am forry to hear matters go

fo

bu

za

fet

an

for

me

Sta

En

Me

For

you

bu

cor I re

òfa

the

fho

fen

cor

we

ty,

of l

32

go fo fcurvily with you, but pluck up a good heart, for when the times are worst they must certainly mend. But pray Doctor, before you go any further, fatisfie me what Church you died a Member of, for we had the Devil and all to do about you when you were gone. The Parson of St. Giles's stood out stifly that you died a found Protestant; but all your Country. men swore thou didst troop off like a good Catholick. Why really Jo, cry'd the Doctor, to deal planely with you, I don't know well what Religion I dy'd in ; but if I dy'd in any, as Physicians you know, seldom do, it was, as I take it, that of the Church of England. I remember, indeed, when I grew light headed, and the Bed, Room, and every thing began to turn round with me, that a foster-brother of mine, and Irifb Priest, offered me the civility of Extreme Unction: and I, that knew I had a long journey to go, thought it would not be amiss to have my Boots well liquor'd before hand, tho' after all, for any good it did me, he might as well have rub'd my Posteriors with a This is all I remember of the Brick-bat. matter, but what signifies it to the business we were talking of? In short 70, if thou couldst put me in a way to live, I should be exceed-exceedingly beholding to thee. Doctor, cry'd I, if you will come to me a Week hence, fomething may be done, for I intend to build me a Stage in one of the largest Piazza's of this City, take me a fine House, and fet up my old Trade of Fortune-telling; and as I shall have occasion now and then for some understrapper to draw Teeth for me, or to be my Toad-eater upon the Stage, if you will except of so mean an Employment, besides my old Cloaths; which will be fomething, I'll give you Meat, Drink, Washing and Lodging, and Four Marks per annum.

rft

or,

me

for ou

of

da

ry-

ood

or,

vell

lin

, it

ng-

ght

ery

it a

of-

on;

to

ive

ho'

ght

ha

the

ress

lou

be

ed-

Iam sensible, Gentlemen, that I had tired your Patience with a long tedious Letter, but not knowing when I should find so convenientan opportunity to fend another, I resolved to give you a full account in this. of all the memorable things that fell within the compais of my observation, during my fhort residence in this Country. fent thanks to my kind Stars, I live very comfortable, I keep my brace of Geldings, and half a dozen Servants; my House is as well furnish'd as most in this populous City, and to tell you what prodigious numbers of Persons of all Ages, Sexes and Conditions flock daily to me to have their Fortunes told told, 'twould hardly find belief with you. If the Cœlestial Phænomenas deceive me not; and there is any truth in the Conjunction of Mercury and Luna, I shall in a short time rout all the pretenders to Affrology, who combine toruine my Reputation and Practice, but without effect; for this opposition has rather increased myFriends at Court than lessen'd them. I am promised to be Maitre des langues to the young Prince of Acheron, (so we call the Heir Apparent to these subterranean Dominions;) and Proserpine's Camariera Major assured me t'other Morning I should have the honour of teaching the beautiful Princess Fuscamarilla, his Sifter, to Dance. Once more, Gentlemen, I beg your excule for this Prolix Epistle, and hoping you will order one of your fraternity to fend me the News of your upper World, I remain

Tour most obliged and most obedient Servant, Jo. Haines.

Dec. 21. 1701.

Pios

AN.

in a

Cor

you

fact

Plu

had

pen

the

chai mof late

we and

AN

ANSWER

TO

Mr. Joseph Haines, High German Astrologer, at the Sign of the Urinal and Chassiopea's Chair in Brandipolis upon Phlegethon.

By Mr. Tho. Brown.

Worthy Sir.

u.

ne

nort

y,

nd

p-

at

ice

nt

me

our

na-

en-

lix

one

WS

nes.

N.

E received your Letter, dated Dec. 21. 1701. and read it yesterday in a sull Assembly at Will's. The whole Company lik'd it exceedingly, and return you their thanks for the ample and satisfactory account you have given them of Pluto's Dominions, from which we have had little or no News, however it has happen'd, since the samous Don Quevedo had the curiosity to travel thither.

Whereas you defire us by way of Exchange to furnish you with some of the most memorable Transactions that have lately fallen out in this part of the Globe, we willingly comply with your proposal; and are proud of any opportunity to shew

D₂ Mr.

36 An Answer to Mr. Joseph Haines's Letter.

Mr. Haines, how much we respect and value him.

Imprimis: Will's Coffee-house, Mr. Haines, is much in the same condition as when you left it; and as a worthy Gentleman has lately distributed them into their proper Classes. We have four forts of Persons that refort hither: First, such as are Beaux and no Wits, and these are easie to be known by their full Periwigs and empty Secondly, Such as are Wits and Skulls. no Beaux, and these, not to talk of their outsides, are distinguished by censuring the ill tast of the Age, and railing at one an-Thirdly, Such as are neither Wits nor Beaux, I mean, your grave plodding Politicians that come to us every Night piping hot from the Parliament House, and finish Treaties that were never thought of, and end Wars before they are begun. And Fourthly, Such as are both Wits and Beaux, to whose Persons as well as Merits you can be no stranger.

In the next place, The Play-house stands exactly where it did. Mr. Rich finds some trouble in managing his mutinous Subjects, but 'tis no more than what Princes must expect to find in a mixt Monarchy, as we take the Play-house to be. The Actors

jog

je

C

y

to

la

m

T

th

in

C

or

W

ga

lif

TI

th

do

di

hi

ry

m

An Answer to Mr. Joseph Haines's Letter. jog on after the old merry rate, and the Women drink and intrigue. Mr. Clinch of Barnet, with his pack of Dogs and Organ, comes now and then to their relief; and your Friend Mr. Jevon wou'd hang himself to see how much the famous Mr. Harvey exceeds him in the Ladder-dance.

ter.

and

ines,

hen

has

per fons

aux

ipty

and heir

the

an-

Vits

ting

ight

and

of,

And

ux,

can nds

me

ub-

ices

7,25

tors

jog

We have had an Inundation of Plays lately, and one of them by a great Miracle made shift to hold out a full Fortnight. The generality either are troubled with Convulsion Fits, and die the first day of the representation, or by meer dint of acting hold out to the third; which is like a Confumptive Man's living by Cordials, or else dye a violent Death, and are interr'd with the Solemnity of Cat calls. Virtuofo, who makes one of the Congregation de propagando ingenio, designs to publish a weekly Bill for the use of the Two Theaters, in imitation of that publish'd by the Parish Clerks, and faithfully to set down what Distemper every New Play dies of.

If the Author of a Play strains hard for Wit, and it dribles drop by drop from him, he says 'tis troubled with a Strangury. If 'tis Vicious in the design and performance, and dull throughout, he intends to

D 3 give

An Answer to Mr. Joseph Haines's Letter, give out in his Bill that it dy'd by a knock in the Cradle, if it miscarries for want of fine Scenes and due Acting, why then he says, 'tis starv'd at Nurse, if it expires the first or second day, he reckons it among the Abortives: And lastly, if 'tis damn'd for the seebleness of its Satyr, he fays it dies in breeding of Teeth.

As our Wit, generally speaking, is debauch'd, so our Wine, the Parent of it is sophisticated all over the Town; and as we never had more Plays in the Two Houses, and more Wine in the City than at present: So we were never encumber'd with worse of the two sorts than now. As for the latter, we sell that for Claret which has not a drop of the juice of the Grape in it, but is down right Cider. The Corporation does not stop short here, but our Cider instead of Apples, is made of Turnips. Who knows where the cheat will conclude? Perhaps the next Generation will debauch our very Turnips.

'Tis well, Mr. Haines, you died when you did, for that unhappy place, where you have so often exerted your Talent, I mean Smithfield, has fallen under the City Magistrate's displeasure; so that now St. George and the Dragon, the Trojan Horse,

and

and

and

Dr

def

ho

in

ftra

led

îha

up

fin

Bu

no

Ble

no

lit

Le

as

H

if

ad

of

ro

CC

n

je

to

and Bateman's Ghost, the Prodigal Son, and Jephtha's Daughter, in short, all the Drolls of Glorious Memory, are routed, defeated and sent to Grass, without any hopes of a reprieve.

Next to Plays, we have been over-run, in these times of publick Ferment and Distraction, with certain wicked things called Pamphlets, and some Scriblers that shall be nameless, have Wit Pro and Con upon the same Subject at least six times fince last Spring.

tter.

ock

ant

hen

ires

it

tis

he

de-

t is

as

Wo

ian

r'd

W.

ret

he

er.

re,

de

at

a-

en

re

ıt,

ne

W

e,

d

Both Nations are at a bay, and two Bull-Dogs fnarl at one another, yet have not thought fit. as yet, to come to actual What the Event will be, we cannot prophesie at this distance, but every little Corporation in the Kingdom has laid Lewis le Grand upon his back, and as good as call'd him perjur'd Knave and Villain. However, 'tis the hardest case in the world if we miscary; our Grubstreet Pamphleteers advise the Shires and Boroughs what fort of Members to chuse. The Shiresand Boroughs advise their Representatives what course to steer in Parliament; and the Senators no doubt on't will advise his Majesty what Ministers to rely on, and how to behave himself in this present Conjuncture. D A

Thus Advice, you fee, like Malt. Tickets, circulates plentifully about the Kingdom. So that if we fail in our defigns after all, the wicked can never fay 'twas We forgot to tell for want of Advice. you, Mr. Haines, that fince you left this Upper World, your Life has been written by a Brother Player, who pretends he received all his Memoirs from your own Mouth, a little before you made a leap into the Dark; and really you are beholding to the fellow, for he makes you a Master of Arts at the University, tho' you never took a Degree there. That, and a Thousand stories of other People he has father'd upon you, and the truth on't is, the Adventures of thy Life, if truly fet down, are so Romantick, that few besides thy acquaintance would be able to distinguish between the History and the Fable. But let not this disturb the sernity of your Soul, Mr. Haines, for after this rate the Lives of all Illustrious Persons, whether Ancient or Modern, have been written. This, Mr. Haines, is all we have to communicate to you at present, fo we conclude with subscribing our selves,

From Will's in Sebastian Freeman, Registrarius Covent Garden, Nomine Societatis.

PERKIN

Fit.

lian

par

mo

on

you

of

go

En

Fo

Co

ſm

lu

þu

PERKIN WARBECK

To the pretended

Prince of WALES.

By Capt. Ayloff.

Dear Cousin Sham,

It-

he

ns as

elf ris

en evn

to to of

ok

0-

on es

0-ce

he

is

es,

ri-

n,

all

ıt,

es,

ts.

us

is. N

TE had a fierce debate here on the 13th. passato, between my Lord Fitz-Walter, Sir Simon Mountford, Sir William Stanly, and my felf; whether by a parity of Reason, England might not once more have the same Card trump'd up upon 'em: In a word, we were confulting your Affairs, and they were most of 'em of opinion, that there cou'd not be any good succeis expected from your Personal Endowments, and Princely Qualifications. For you must give me leave to tell you, Couz, that I was a fmart Child, and a fmock-fac'd Youth: I had not the good luck to kill a wild Boar at your years, but I could fit the great Horse before I could go along. I had all the advantages of Friends that you have; and the Interest of my good Aunt the Dutchess of Burgundy. let me tell you was as capable of second. ing me, as the House of Modena is you: Nay, I had the Scotch on my fide, affistance from Ireland, and not without a party, you see, even in England too. But the English Mob is the most giddy, wretched, fence. less Mob of all the Mobs in the world. How they crowded in to me at Whitefand-bay, and in their first fury fought well enough before Exeter: But when they heard of an Army coming against 'em, the scoundrels run away and left me: All my blooming hopes, and fancied Kingdoms dwindled away in a Sanctuary, that I exchanged for a Prison, and brought my Habeas Cor. pus, and so turn'd my self over to Tyburn, and am now in the Rules of Acheron. Our Kinsman Lambert Symnel and I drank your health t'other Morning in a Curious Cupof Styx; and the arch fawcy Rogue, faid, how he shou'd laugh to see his Brother of Wales fucceed him in this great Employment at Court; continually turning a Spit wou'd harden and inure you, and fo prepare you for these smoaky and warmer Climates: Not but that there is matter of Speculation in

go

in ble Bu mu if you

ma sha be nev

is ju tho and fare

Mr

Delp wor that to for those we have

by I very

unha

Mr. Dryden to the Lord D

in it too. The turning of the Spit is an Emblem of the Vicissitude of Humane Assairs. But, before I take my leave good Cousin, I must offer a little of my advice to you, if it be possible any ways to meliorate your destiny, and that is, that you wou'd make a Campaign or two in Italy: Marshal Villeroy will shew you what it is to be well beaten; and till then you'll never be a great General. But Charon is just Landing a multitude of French from those parts; I must go see what News, and inform my self farther of your welfare and prosperity. Adieu.

Mr. DRYDEN to the Lord D-

By Capt. ATLOFF.

My Lord,

es.

of

tof

ady,

nd.

ou:

nce

ou

lisb

ce-

WO

bay,

igh

an

rels

ing led ged

or-

Dur

our

pof

wo

ales

tat

u'd

you

es:

ion

in

On the 25th passato, there happen'd a very considerable dispute in the Delphick Vale; the Literati had hard words, and it was fear'd by Pluto himself that the angry shades wou'd have come to somewhat worse. It may be you in those grosser Regions, do not believe that we here below lose nothing of our selves by Death, but the Terrene part: Nay the very Soul it self retains some of those unhappy impressions it receiv'd from Flesh and

ha

WO

and

mo

you del

W

wif

aga fme

don

of

few

atel

ftor

fess

he

der

ftan

WO

of a

Cha

con

wh

and Blood. Here Cafar bites his Thumbs when Alexander walks by ; frowns upon Brutus, and blushes when he talks of King William: The greatGustavus Adolphus only wishes himself upon Earth again to serve Captain under him: Turenne wants to be in Italy, and Wallesteen assures him that Prince Eugene of Savoy would have had the same glorious Successagainst him, as Catinet and Villeroy. Hannibal own'd that his March o. ver, or rather through the Alpes, was not so honourable an Action as the Prince's. and tho' Arts and Experience may make a General, yet Nature only can form an Eugene. Surly Charon had been fo plagu'd with the French from those parts, that he has been forc'd to leave whole shoals of 'em behind. Once they crouded in fo fast as they almost overset the Boat, and Hill as they press'd forward, cry'd Vauban, Vauban: But the oldGentleman, unwilling to hazard himself, push'd a multitude of 'em back with his Sculls, and so put off-However, this is not the business i design'd to mention: Something more particular, and of more weighty consequence is the The real Wits occasion of this Letter. refus'd to take notice of Prince Arthur and King Arthur, who were walking hand in hand;

mbs

pon

King

only

vea

e in ince

ame

and

ho.

not

ce's;

kea

an

gu'd

t he

oals

n so

and

ban, ling

e of

f—

b'ng

lar,

the

Vits and d in

nd;

hand; some shallow pated Versificators wou'd resent the indignity put upon 'em, This was very disgusting to the Literation and it is inconceivable what a horrid stench they made with uttering thoseVerses. The more robust Spirits were almost choak'd; you may then judge what condition the delicate and nice Stomachs of the Men of Wit were in: But while every one was wishing for their Cloaths of Humanity again to be less sensible of this execrable fmell, a worthy Literato came in from London, who being inform'd of the occasion of that terrible inconveniency, repeated a few commendatory Verses, and immediately the Air grew tolerable, and the Brimstone burnt serene. Job himself did confess, that had he been in the Flesh again, he was terribly affraid he shou'd have murder'd the Doctor: When a merry Spirit standing at his Elbow, said, It was no such wonderful thing to have S'rreverance of a Man be mine Arfe of a Poet. Charon waits, I must conclude, and as conveniency ferves, shall inform you of what passes in these gloomy Regions.

LETTER

FROM

Mr. Abraham Cowley to the Covent-Garden Society.

By Capt. Ayloff.

HE shatter'd Laurels of the Acherontic Walks, owe not fo much of their misfortune to the shallowness of Aganippe as to to the ungenerous procedure of the Sons of Helicon. Either Hill of Parnassus is fortifi'd, and what with ancient and modernWit, even you, Gentlemen, of real parts, have none of you that applaufe; which in a thousand occasions you have so justly merited. These melancholy reslections, Gentlemen, add a new thickness to the gloomy Sulphur, and we cannot enjoy a perfect quiet here, seeing there is so great and fo dangerous a mifunderstanding between you on the other side of Phlegethon. Why shou'd there be so many pointed Satyrs

Saty you who fuch for. oth an a you con obvi Can Squ fo. hil, is or flow Hor

able

man

othe

nev

waf

it m

lick

Igno

my

ches

pull

to f

A Letter from Mr. Abraham Cowly, Oc. Satyrs against one another, why should you shew the very Blockheads themselves where you Men of Sence are not quite fuch as you would pass upon the world for. Your invidious Critiscisms only shew others where you are vulnerable, and give an argument under yourown hand againft your own felves. There is a Charity in concealing faults; but to make them more obvious, has a double ill nature in it. Cann't Arthur be a worthless Poem, but a Squadron of Poets must tell all the world fo. Is there Honour in rumaging a Dunghil, or telling the Neighhours where there is one. The Bee gathers hony from every flower, 'tis the Beetles that delight in Is it not much more prefer-Horse-dung. able to make fomething ones felf useful to mankind, than only to shew wherein another, is a Coxcomb. Partizans in Wit never do well: They only lay the Country waste, they gratifie their own private Spleen it may be, but they do not help the publick Unite your Forces, Gentlemen against Ignorance, that growing and powerful Enemy to you and us: Erect Triumphal Arches to one another, and do not enviously pull down what others are endeavouring to fet up. Your mutual quarrels have shaken

he-

of

Aga.

e of

ar-

ent

, of

ule;

ave

cti-

s to

joy

eat

be.

on.

red

YIS

A Letter from Mr. Ahraham Cowley, &c. shaken the very soundation of Wit and good Humour. 'Tis the Faction a Manis of, determines what he is, not his Learning and Parts; we cannot hear, Gentlemen, of these intestine Dissentions without a great concern and displeasure: and must take the liberty to tell you, we apprehend the Muses may shortly be reduced to the necessity of shutting up the Delphic Library, and write upon the doors, ruit ipsassing Roma viribus.

CHARON

To the most Illustrious and High-born

FACK KETCH, Eig-

By Capt. Ayloff.

Most worthy Kinsman and Benefactor,

Cannot but with the last degree of sorrow and anguish, inform you of our present wretched condition, we have even tired our Palms and our Ribs at Slappatypouch: and if it had not been for some Gentlemen, that came from the Coasts of Italy

Ita Scu for fur it in had Wa wit WOI an of I Wh for : by t it is Mou no A Bloc men dens him. time Mali to fl wha

Bail

tell y

Man

in h

Italy, I had almost forgot to handle my Sculls. There came a fneaking Ghost here, fome a day, or two, or three ago, and he furpris'd us with an account (I may call it indeed a terrible one) that you have had a Maiden Seffion in your Metropolis. Was it then possible that Newgate should be without a Rogue, or our Patron the most worshipful Sir senceless L___l without an Execution in his Mouth. You talk of having hang'd Tyburn in Mourning-Why CoulinKetch, upon my fincerity, and for fear you shou'd question my Veracity, by the thickest Mud in Acheron, I swear, it is almost high time that my Boat was in Mourning: What, He upon the Bench and no Man hang'd! Well, as affuredly as the Blood of the Horses will rise up in Judgment against our Friend Whitney, this MaidenSession shall rise up in Judgmentagainst him. Such shoals I have had from time to time, meer facrifices to his Avarice or his Malice, that unless his Conscience begins to fly in his Face, I cannot comprehend what shou'd occasion this calm at the Old Baily: For, give me leave, dear Coufin, to tell you, that formerly he never fav'd any Man for his Money, but hang'd another in his room; trading was then pretty good,

ipsa

and

ITI IS

arn.

itle.

out

nust

end

the

bra-

1

2.5

f forour even oaty-

ome Its of

Italy

King James the 2d. to Lewis the 14th.

good, Cousin, and there was a Penny to be got, but indeed on your side it is very dull: Nay in Flanders too, that fertile soil of Blood and Wounds, there has not one Leg nor one Arm been brought us all this Summer. Pre'thee be you Charon, and let me be Recorder, I'll warrant you somewhat more to do.

P

no

ne

by

flo

en ou an

as tir

ha

In

m Ro

m

M

an te

CO

A

ar

fu

th

fe

fo

King J A M E S the IIds

LETTER

To LEWIS the XIVth.

By Mr. Boyer.

Dear Royal Brother and Cousin,

Ho' I have traverst the vast Abys that lies betwixt us and am now at some hundred Millions of Leagues distance from you, yet do I still remember the Promise I made you before my departure, to send you an account of my Journey hither. Know then that all the stories you hear of the Mansions of the Dead, are meer Flim-slams, invented by King James the 2d. to Lewis the 14th. by the Crafty, to terrifie and manage the Weak. Here's no fuch thing as Hell or Purgatory; no Lake of Fire and Brimstone; no Cloven-footed Devils; no Land of Darkness. This place is wonderfully well lighted by a never-decaying Effulgence, which flows from the Almighty; and the Pleasures we Dead enjoy, and the Torments we endure, confift in a full and clear view of our past Actions, whether good or bad; and in being in fuch or fuch Company, as is allotted us. For my part, I am continually tormented with the Thoughts of having loftThree GoodlyKingdoms by my Infatuation and Bigotry; and to aggravate myPain, I am quarter'd with my honour'd Royal Father Charles I. My honest well meaningBrother Charles II. and the fubtle Machiavel; the First reproaches me ever and anon, with my not having made better use of his dreadful Examples; the Second, with having despis'd the wholesom Advice; and the Third, with having mifapply'd his Maxims, through the wrong fuggestions of my Father Confessor. that I had had as little Religion as your felf, or as S-----R-----R-----and fome other of my Ministers! And my predecessors! Then might I have reign'd with E 2 Honour

to

ery

Soil

one

his

let

ne.

that

ome

rom ise I

you

then ions

nted

by

fir'

me

to

Ar

on

the

sho

Ita

Ari

the

just

wh

mo

as y nar

inst

out

you

in c

Wh

But

the

to

eith

ľm

all

ext

'Tis

Honour and inPlenty over a Nation, which is ever Loyal and Faithful to a Prince who istender of their Laws and Liberties: and peacefully relign'd my Crown to my lawfully begotten Son; whereas, through the delusions of Priest-craft, and the fond Infinuations of a bigotted Wife, I endeavour'd to establish the Superstitions of Popery, and the fatal Maxims of a Despotick. Dispensing Power, upon the Ruins of the Protestant Religion, and of the Fundamental Laws of a Free People; which at last, concluded with my Abdication and Exile. I am forry you have deviated from your wonted custom of breaking your Word, and that you have punctually observ'd the Promise you made me at my dying Bed, of acknowledging my dear Son as King of Great Britain; for I fear my quondam Subjects, who love to contradict you in every thing, will from thence take an occasion to abjure him for ever; whereas had you difown'd him, they would perhaps have acknowledg'd him in meer spite. Cardinal Richelien, who visits me often, professes Itill a great deal of Zeal and Affection for your Government, but is extreamly concern'd at the wrong Measures you take to arrive at Universal Monarchy. He has defir'd

King James the 2d. to Lewis the 14th. fir'd me to advise you to keep to the old method he chalk'd out for you, which is to trust more to your Gold, than to your Arms. I cannot but think he is in the right on't, confidering the wonderful fuccels the first has lately had with the Archbishop of Cologn, and some other German and Italian Princes, and the small progress your Armies have made in the Milaneze. the wholesomness of his advise is yet better justify'd by your dealings with the English, whom you know, you have always found more easily brib'd than bullied. Therefore, as you tender the Grandeur of your Monarchy, and the interest of my dear Son, instead of raising new Forces, and fitting out Fleets, be sure to send a Cart-load of your new coin'd Lewis d'Ors into England, in order to divide the Nation, and fet the Whigs and Tories together by the Ears: But take care you trust your Money in the hands of a Person that knows how to distribute it, to more advantage than either Count T-d or P-n; who, as I'm told, have lavish'd away your favours all at once upon insatiable Cormorants, and extravagant Gamesters and Spend-thrifts. Tis true, by their Assistance, and the unwearied Diligence of my Loyal Jacobites, you

ce

S;

ly

gh

id

a-

0-

k,

ne

n-

t,

.I

n-

at

fe

C-

of

b-

y

to

if-

Cal

es

OF

1-

0

9-

d

you have made a shift to get the Old Mi. nistry discarded, and to detard the Grand Alliance; but let me tell you, unless you Fee 'em afresh, they will certainly leave you in the lurch at the next Sessions; for Ingratitude and Corruption do always go together. Therefore to keep those Mercenary Rogues to their Behaviour, and in perpetual dependance, you must feed 'em with small Portions, as Weekly, or Monthly Allow-Above all, bid your Agents take heed how they deal with a certain indefatigable Writer, who as long as your Gold has lasted, has been very useful to our Cause, and boldly defeated the dangerous Counsels of the Whigs, your implacable Enemies; but who, upon the first withdrawing of your Bounty, will infallibly turn Cat in Pan, and write for the house of Austria.

I could give you more Instructions in Relation to England, but not knowing whether they would be taken in good part, I forbear 'em for the present. Pray, comfort my Dear Spouse with a Royal Kis, and tell her, I waither coming with Impatience. Bid my beloved Son not despair of ascending my Throne, that is, provided he shakes off the Fetters of the Romish Superstition, let him not despond upon account

col

der

fitie

on

fea

wit

the dai

he

wh

bot

Mi

dif

stu

pof

am tro

M

tan

ter

mo

yo

inv

fcr

Mi-

and

you

you

gra-

her.

ues

de-

nall

OW-

ake

lefa.

blo

our

cous

able ith-

turn

tria.

is in

ing

art,

om.

Cifs,

npa-

pair

ded

Su-

ac-

unt

count of my unfaithful Servant Fuller's Evidence against his Legitimacy, for the Depofitions of my Nobility which are still upon Record in the Chancery, will eafily defeat that Perjur'd Fellows pretended Proof, with all honest considering Men. And as for the humerous Addresses, which, I hear, are daily presented tomy Successor against him, he may find as many in my ffrong Box, which were presented to me in his Favour, both before and after his Birth. The last Courier brought us News of a pretended Miracle wrought by my Body at the Benedictine's Church: I earnestly desire you to disabuse the World and keep the Imposture from getting Ground; for how is it possible I should cure Eye Fistula's, now I am Dead, that could not ease my self of a trouble for Corn in my Toe when living? My Service to all our Friends and Acquaintance; be affur'd that all the Lethean Waters, shall never wash away from my Memory, the great Services I have received at your hands, in the other World; nor the inviolable Affection which makes me subscribe my self,

Dear, Royal Brother and Cousin, Your most obliged Friend. JAMES REX:

LEWIS.

LEWIS the XIVths.

ANSWER

To King JAMES the IId.

By the same Hand.

Most Beloved Royal Brother, and Cousin, TOurs I receiv'd this Morning, and no fooner cast my Eyes upon the Superfcription, but I guest it to be written by one of my Fellow Kings, by the Scrawl and Ill Spelling. I am glad your account of the other World agrees so well with the Thoughts I always entertain'd about it: For, between Friends, I never believ'd the Stories the Priests tell us of Hell, and Purgatory. Ambition has ever been my Religion; and my Grandeur the only Deity to which I have paid my Adorations. have persecuted the Protestants of my Kingdom, 'twas not because I thought their Perswasions worse than the Romish, but because I look'd upon 'em as a sort of dangerous Antimonarchical People; who, as they had fix'd the Crown upon my Head, fo they might as easily take it off, to serve their their mean own' Powed design a stick jealouthat Assistant of the state of the state

you'
Since
your need have
For
mife

betv Dut Pow Nov

I cor

Yea near their own Party; and because by that means, Isecur'd the Jesuits, who must be own'd the best supporters of Arbitrary power. Nay, to tell you the Truth, my defign in making you, by my Emistaries, a stickler of Popery, was only to create jealousies betwixt you and your People, that so you might stand in need of my Assistance, and be Tributary to my Power. I am forry you are in the Company of the Three Persons you mention. To get rid of their Teazing and Reproaching Converfation, I advise you to propose a match at Whisk, and if by casting Knaves you can but get Machiavil on your fide, I'm sure you'll get the better of the other Two. Since you mention my owning the Prince your Son as King of Great Britain, I must needs tell you, that neither he nor you. have reason to be beholden to me for it: For what I did was not to keep my Promile to you, but only to serve my own Ends. I consider'd, that an Alliance being made between the English, the Emperour and the Dutch, in order to reduce my Exorbitant Power; a War must inevitably follow. Now, I suppose, that after two or three Years Fighting, my Finances will be pretty near exhausted, and that I shall be forc'd ta

,

no

erby

nd

he

he

it:

he ur-

gi-

to I ng-

eir be-ge-

ney

fo

rve

eir

to condescend to give Peace to Europe, as I did Four Years ago. The Emperour, I reckon, will be brought to Sign and Seal upon reasonable Terms, and be contented with having some small share in the Spanish Monarchy; as will the Dutch also with a These Two less consi. Barrier in Flanders. derable Enemies being quieted, how shall I pacifie those I fear most, I mean, the Eng. lish? Why, by turning your dear Son out of my Kingdom, as I formerly did you and your Brother. Not that I will wholly abandon him neither: No, you may rest affured, that I will re-espouse his Quarrel, as foon I shall find an opportunity to make him instrumental to the advancement of my Greatness. I am oblig'd to Cardinal Richelieu for the concern he shows for the Honour of France, and will not fail to make use of his Advice, as far as my running Cash will let me. But I am some. what puzzled how to manage Matters in England at the next Sessions; for my Agent -n, by taking his leave in a publick Tavern of Three of our best Friends, has render'd them suspected to the Nation, and confequently useless to me. I wish you could direct me to some trusty Jacobite in England, to distribute my Bribes, for find therelse an C you zett of I right loft Prayall t relamon you Lett

you

Mac

cate

belo

beli

poff

ving

cani

find

Offi

cen

mu

dist

as y

fel 1

ope,

eal

ted

nish

ha

nsi-

hall

Eng.

out

you olly

rest

rrel,

y to

nce-

d to lows

not

s my ome.

rs in

gent

blick

has

,and

you

te in

for 1

find

find my own Subjects unqualified for that Office, and eafily bubbled by the sharp Mercenary English. However I will not so much depend upon my Lewis d'Ors, as to disband my Armies, and lay up my Fleets; as you and Cardinal Richelieu feem to counsel me to do. I suppose you have no other Intelligence but the London-Gazette; else you would not entertain so despicable an Opinion of my Arms in Italy. I fend you here enclos'd a Collection of the Gazettes, Printed this Year in my good City of Paris, whereby you will find upon a right Computation, that the Germans have lost Ten Men to One of the Confederates. Pray fail not fending me by the next Post, all the Instructions you can think of, in relation to England: For tho' you made more false steps in this World than any of your Predecessors, yet I find by your Letter, you have wonderfully improv'd your Politicks by the Conversation of Machiavel and Richelieu. I have communicated your Letter to your dear Spouse and beloved Son, who cannot be perswaded to believe it came from you; not thinking it possible that so Religious a Man, whilst living, should turn Libertine after his death. I cannot with fafety comply with your defire of of disabusing the World concerning the mi. raculousCure pretended to be wroughtby your Body at the Benedictine's Church Such Pious Frauds being the main prop of the Popish Religion; as this is of my So. vereign Authority. Your Son may hope to be one day seated on your Throne, not by turning Protestant (to which he is intirely averse, and which I shall be fure to prevent) but by the SUPERIORITY of my Arms, and the EXTENSIVE. NESS of my POWER, after I shall have fix'd my Son in the Monarchy of Spain, Madam Maintenon desires to be remembred to you; she writes by this Post to Mr. Scar. ron her former Husband, to desire him to wait on you, and endeavour to divert your Melancholy Thoughts by reading to you the third part of his Comical Romance, which, we are inform'd, he has lately for the Entertainment of the written I remain as faithfully as ever, Dead.

Dear Royal Brother and Cousin,

Your Affectionate Friend.

LEWIS Rex.

FROM

Pandæm

Wor

orref

at by

rgeti

y for hav

ents,

my hen l

ices,

n w

FROM

mi.

t by

of So.

ope one,

he fure

ITY VE.

lave ain.

ored ocar-

n to

vert

g to

ince,

tely

the

usin,

iend.

Rex.

MC

JULIAN

Late Secretary of the Muses, to

WILL PIERRE

Of Lincolns-Inn-Fields Play-House.

Pandæmonium the 8th of the Month of Beelzebub.

By another Hand.

Worthy and right well-beloved, dress from Hell, or be scandalized at the orrespondence, I must let you know first, at by the uncertainty of the Road, and the regetfulness of my old acquaintance, all y former Letters are either miscarried, have been neglected by my Corresponents, who tho they were fond enough my Scandal, nay courted my Favours, hen living, now I am past gratifying their ices, like true great Men, they think no ore of me. The conscious Tub-Tavern m witness, and my Berry-Sreet Apartment

From Julian late Secratery of the Muses, ment testifie the soliciations I have had for the first Copy of a new Lampoon, from the greatest Lords of the Court; tho'the own folly and their Wives Vices were the Subjects. My Person was so sacred that the terrible Scan-man had no Terrors for me whose Business was so publick and so useful as conveying about the Faults of the Great and the Fair: For in my Books the Lord wa shewn a Knave or Fool, tho' his Power defended the former, and his Pride would not fee the latter. The antiquated Coque was told of her Age and Ugliness, tho he Vanity plac'd her in the first row in the King's Box at the Play-house: And in the view of the Congregation at St. James Church. The precise Counters that would be scandaliz'd at a double entendre, wa shewn betwixt a pair of Sheets with a well made Footman in spite of he The form Quality and Conjugal Vow. Statesiman that set up for Wisdom an Honesty was expos'd as a dull Tool, an yet a Knave, lofing at Play his own Rev nue, and the Bribes incident to his Pol besides enjoying the infamy of a poo and fruitless Knavery, without any con cern. The demure Lady, that wou'd fcaro fip off the Glass in Company, carouin

ner

om

her

Boo

wer

Hy

thei

a Fo

a W

nati

to o whe

Lore

Mer

I wa

Lap

fervi

con

I ex

I pr

poor

Sir,

ten

brib

riva

anfi

all,

Span

to t eses,

had

from their

re the

at the r me usefu

Great

d was

Owe

would

Coque 10' her

n the

ames

e, Wa

with of he form

n an 1, and

Reve

s Pot a poo

y con

fcaro

oulin

h

ner Bottles in private, of cool Nants too, ometimes to correct the Crudities of her last nights Debauch. In short, in my Books were feen Men and Women as they were not as they wou'd feem, ftrip'd of their Hyporifie, and spoil'd of the Fig-leaves of their Quality. A Knave was call'd a Knave. a Fool a Fool, a Jilt a Jilt, and a Whore a Whore. And the Love of Scandal and native Malice that Men and Women have to one another, made me in fuch request when alive, that I was admitted to the Lord's Closet, when a Man of Letters and Merit wou'd be thrust out of doors. And in the I was as familiar with the Ladies, as their Lap dogs; for to them I did often good wou fervices, under pretence of a Lampoon, I conveying a Billet doux, and fo whilst I expos'd their past Vices in the present, I promoted matter for the next Lampoon. After all these Services, believe me, Sir, I was not fooner dead than forgotten; I have writ many Letters to the brib'd Courtiers of their forerunners arrival in these parts, but not one word of answer. I sent word to my Lord Squeezall, that his good Friend Sir Parcimony Spare-all was newly arriv'd, and clap'd into the Bilbows for a Fool as well as Knave, that

From Julian late Secretary of the Muses, that starv'd himself to supply the prodiga lity of his Heirs. But he despites good Counsel, Thear, and starves both himself and his Children to raise them Portions I writanother Letter to my Lady Man-shim that vertuous Mrs. Vizor was brought in here, and made Shroving Fritters for the hackney Devils, for her unnatural Lufts: but Sue Frousie that came hither the other day, assures me, That she either received not my Letter, or at least took no notice of it; for that the went on in her old road, and had brought her Vice almost in. to fashion, and that the practical Vices of the Town boaded an eternal breach betwixt the Sexes, while each confin'd it felf to the fame Sex, and so threatned a cessation of Commerce in Propogation betwixt 'em. In short, Sir, I have tyr'd my felf with Advices to my quondam Acquaintance, and that should take away your furprize at my fending to you, who must be honest, because you are so poor and a Man of Merit, because you never were promoted, for your World of the Theatre is the truePicture of the greater World, where Honesty and Merit starve, while Knavery and Impudence get favour from all Men. For you, Sir, if I mistake not, are one of the most mol der cani vy N of y karc lity you perf true how Lyin up a ther their orM and i nabl muc Quin guis cerit tive you > the mus

> you of t

anfy

es,

diga.

3000

nfelf

ions

Bim.

ht in the ufts;

ther

eiv'd

otice

old in.

es of

d it

ed a

1 be-

my

ain-

your

must nd a vere

re is here

very

Ien.

most

most ancient of his Majesty's Servants, under the denomination of a Player, and yet cannot advance above the delivering a scurvy Message, which the strutting Leaders of your House wou'd do much more aukardly, and by consequence 'tis the partiality of them or the Town that have kept you in this low Post all this while: This perswades me that from you I may hope a true and fincere Account of things, and how matters are now carry'd above; for Lying Hypocrifie and Compliment fo take up all that tafte of Fortunes favour, that there is scarce any credit to be given to their Narations: for either out of Favour orMalice they give a falle face to Histories, and misrepresent mankind to that abominable degree, that the best History is not much better than a probable Romance, and Quintus Curtius, and Calprenede are distinguish'd more by their Language than Sin-Thus much by shewing the mocerity. tive of my writing to you, to take away your surprise, tho' before I pass, to remove the Shame of fuch a Correspondence, I must tell you, that your station qualifying you for a right Information of the Scandal of the Town, I hope you will not fail to answer my expectation; behind your Scenes Scenes come all the young Wits, and all the young and old Beaux, both Animals of Malice, and wou'd no more conceal any Womans Frailty, or any Man's Folly, than they will own any Man's Sence, or any Womans Honesty.

I know that Hell lies under some disad. vantages in the opinion, even of those who are Industrious enough to secure them. selves a retreat here. They play the Devil among you, and yet are asham'd of their Master, and rail at his abode as much as if they had no right to the Inheritance. The Mifer, whose daily Toils and nightly Cares and Study is how to oppress the Poor; cheat, or over-reach his Neighbour. to berray the Trusts his Hypocrisie procur'd; and in short, to break all the positive Laws of Morality, crys out, Oh! Diabolical! at a poor harmlets double meaning in a Play, and bleffes himfelf that he is not one of the ungodly; rails at Hell and the Devil all the while he is riding Post to'em. The holy Sifter that facrifices in the Rightecufness of her Spirit, the reputation of fome of her Acquaintance or other every day; that Cuckolds her Husband in the fear of the Lord with one of the Elect, rails at the Whore of Babylon, and Lawn-fleeves,

Day never was, hund Law with and that and there and purf as th

The i

abou

who

agai

who

here than chies mod Jud of t

and

Hon

T

my

refle

26 lall

ls of any han

any

fad.

who

iem-

evil

heir

h as

nce.

htly

the

our;

pro-

itive

boli-

ng in

not

1 the

'em.

ligh-

n of

very

n the rails

eves,

as

as the diabolical invention of Lucifer, tho the is laying up provisions here for a long abode in these shades of reverend Sathan, whom the fo much all her life declaims against; The Lawyer, that has watch'd whole Nights, and bawld away whole Days in bad Causes, for good Gold, that never car'd how crasse his Clients Title was, if his bags were full; that has made a hundred Conveyances with flaws to beget Law-suits, and litigious Broils, when he's with the Divel, has the detestation of Hell and the Devil, in his Mouth, all the while that the love of them fills his whole heart; and so through the rest of our false Brothers whose Mouths belye their Minds, and fix an Infamy on what they most purfue.

This is what may make you asham'd of my correspondence, but when you will resect on what good Company we keep here, you will think it more an honour than disgrace, for our company here is chiefly compos'd of Princes, great Lords, modern Statesmen, Courtiers, Lawyers, Judges, Doctors of Divinity, and Doctors of the Civil Laws, Beaux, Ladies of Beauty and Quality, Wits of Title, Men of noise Honour, Gifted Brothers, boasters of the

F 2

Spirits,

Will. Pierre's Answer.

Spirit, supply'd 'em from hence: In short, all that make most noise against us, which will, I hope, satisfie you so far, as to make me happy in a speedy Answer, which will oblige

Tour very humble and Infernal Servant, Julian,

WILL. PIERRE's

ANSWER

Lincolns-Inn Fields, Novem. 5. 1701. Behindthe Scenes.

By the same Hand.

Worthy Sir of venerable Memory.

Your or received, and have been so far from being surprized at, or asham'd of your Correspondence, that the first I desired, & the latter was transported with; my Mind has been long burden'd, and I wanted such a Correspondent to disclose my grievance to, for there is no Man on Earth that would give me the hearing; for Popery makesa Man

Mai Foo lool one the furr het Teff the Fell ratio occa Lett Scar you Sins you veridal mit the For you poor

do

the

acco

ort.

hich

lake

Will

lian,

cenes,

So far

n'd of

efir'd,

Mind

1 fuch

rances

wou'd

akesa

Man

Man of the best parts a Jest, and every Fool with a Feather in his Cap, can overlook a Man of Merit in Rags. Wit from one out at heels founds like Non-sense in the Ear of a gay Fop, that knows no other furniture of a Head, but a full Wigg; and he that would split himself with the half Iest of a Lord he wou'd flatter, is deaf to the best thing from the Mouth of a poor Fellow he cann't get by. These Considerations, Sir, have made me proud of this occasion of replying to your obliging Letter in the manner you desire. Scandal was your occupation here above, you likeVintners and Bawds living on the Sins of the Times; fo a short impartial account of the present state of Iniquity and Folly, cannot be disagreeable to you.

Poetry was the Vehicle that conveyed all your Scandal to the Town, and I being conversant about the skirts of that Art, my scandal must dwell chiefly thereabout, not omitting that scantling of general Scandal of the Town, that is come to my knowledge; For you must know since your death, and your Successor Summerton's madness, Lampoon has felt a very sensible decay, and seldom is there any attempt at it; and when there is, 'tis very heavy and dull, cursed

F 3 Verse

Verse or worse Prose : So gone is the brisk Spirit of Verse that us'd to watch the Follies and Vice of the Men and Women of Figure, that they cou'd not start new ones faster than Lampoons expos'd them. This difficiency of Satyr is not from a fcarcity of Vices, which abound more then ever, or Follies more numerous then in your time, but from a meer impotence of Malice, which tho as general as eyer, confines it felf to discource; and railing is its utmost effort, defaming over one Bottle those they caresover another: Every Man abuses his Friend behind his back, and no Man ever takes notice of it, but does the fame in his turn; and for sincerity, Wo-The Women grow men have as much. greater Hypocrites than ever, lewder in their Chamber practice, and more formal in publick; they rail at the Vices they indulge? they for sake publick Diversions, as Plays, &c. togain the reputation of Vertue, to give a greater loofe to the Domeflick Diversions of a Bottle and Gallant, and Hypocrifie heightens their Pleasures. The Mode now is not as of old in all amorous encounters, every Man to his Woman, but like Nuns in a Cloister, every Female has her privado of her own Sex, and the honester hon the whi The Stag had refor mati rable and bour had Stag hunc lies, preff are z fame rel'd Grav theif nefty dies lubm

misc

cieti

ners

tain'

ferre

sk he

en

W

m.

la

en

in

of

n-

is

tle

an

no

he

0-

W

in

nal

inns,

er-

ne-

nd

he

us

out

nas

he

ter

honester part of Men must either fall in with the modifh Vice, or live Chaftly, to both which I find a great many extreamly averie. There has a terrible Enemy arose to the Stage; an abdicated Divine, who when he had escaped the Pillory for Sedition and reforming the State, fer up for the Reformation of the Stage; the Event was admirable, Fanaticks presented the Non-juror, and Mifers and Extortioners gave him bountiful Rewards; one grave Citizen that had found his Character too often on the Stage, and famous for the ruine of some hundreds of poor under Tradesmens Families, laid out Threescore Pound in the Impression to distribute among the Saints, that are zealous for God and Mammon at the fame time, Bully's and Republicans quarrel'd for the Passive Obedience, a Spark: Grave Divines extoll'd his Wit, and Atheifts his Religion, the Fanaticks his Honesty, the Hypocrite his Zeal, and the Ladies were of his side because he was for submitting to Force. There is yet a greater mischief befall'n the Stage; here are Societies that set up for Reformation of Manners; Troops of Informers who are maintain'd by Perjury, serve God for Gain, and ferret out Whores for Sublistence. This noble noble Society confift of Divines of both Churches, Fanatick as well as Orthodox Saints and Sinners, Knights of the Post and Knights of the Elbow, and they are not more unanimous against Immorality in their Informations, than for it in their Practice: They avoid no fins in themselves, and will fuffer none in any one elfe. The Fanaticks that never preach'd up Morality in their Pulpits, or knew it in their dealings, wou'd feem to promote it in the ungodly. Church-men that wou'd enjoy the Pleasure of Sinners, and the Reputation of Saints, are for punishing Whores and Drinking in all but themselves. In short, The Motive that carries the Popish Apostles to the richer Contenents, makes these Gentlemen fo busie in our Reformation, Money. Nay Reformation is grown a staple Commodity, and the dealers in it are fuddenly to be made into a Corporation, and their Privileges peculiar are to be Perjury without Punishment, and Lying with Impunity. The Whores have a Tax laid on them towards their maintainance, in which they share with Captain W-and the Justices of the Peace, for New Prison knows them all in their turns, and 25, or 30 shillings gives them a License for Whoring till next pay day; fo vad one fake wor tere hon Play Tw can poc the forr be a

for

fect

por

kiff

criss

fo t rail

the

ing

nul

ftre

(ur)

cret

fano

ties

ooth

dox.

Post

are

ty in

Etice:

will

icks

heir

p'uc

The

fure

ints,

sing

tive

the men

Nāy

lity,

be ivi-

out

The

ards

are

the

1 in

nem

lay,

fo

fo that the effect of their Punishment only raises the price of the Sin, and the Vices of the Nation maintain the Informers. Drinking, Swearing and Whoring are the Manufactures they deal in; for shou'd they stretch their Zeal to Cozening, Cheating, Vsury, Extortion, Oppression, Defamation, Secret Adulteries and Fornication, and a Thoufand other of these more crying Immoralities, the City would rife against these invaders of their Liberties, and the Cuckolds, one and all, for their own and their Wives fakes rife against the Reformers; these worthy Gentlemen, for promoting the interest of the Crown-Office, and some such honest place, pick harmless words out of Plays to indite the Players, and fqueeze Twenty Pound aWeek out of them if they can, for their exposing Pride, Vanity, Hypocrifie, Ufury, Oppression, Cheating and the other darling Vices of the Master Reformers, who owe them a grudge not to be appeas'd without confiderable offerings; for Money in these cases wipes off all defects.

There are other matters of smaller importance I shall refer to my next, as Who kisses who in our Dominions; that Hypocrifie has infected the Stage too, where

Whore

Whores with great Bellies wou'd thrust them. selves off for Virgins, and Bully the Audience out of their fight and understanding; where Maids can talk bawdy for Wit, and Footmen pass on quality for Gentlemen; Fools fit as Judges on Wit; and the Igno. rant on Men of Learning; where the Mot. to is Vivitur ingeneo, the dull Rogues have the Management and the Profits. Where Farce is a darling, and good Sence and good Writing not understood. And this brings to my mind a thing I lately heard from a false smatterer in Poetry behind the Scenes, and which if you see Ben. Jonson, I desire you to communicate to him. new Author fays one, that has wrote a taking Play, is writing a Treatise of Comeay, in which he mauls the learned Roques the writers to some purpose; he shews what a Coxcomb Aristotle was, and what a company of senceless pedants the Scaligers, Rapines, Vossii, &c. are; proves that no good Play can be regular, and that all rules are as ridiculous as useles. He tells us Aristotle knew nothing of Poetry (for he knew nothing of his fragments fo extoll'd by Scaliger) and that common Sence and Nature was not the same in Athens as in Drury-Lane; that Uniformity and Coherence was Green fection man be to the bette Doction and the and the new

Treat

may

next,

Green fleeves and Puding-pyes, and that irregularity and nonfence were the chief perfections of the Drama. That the Silent Woman by consequence was before the Trip to the Jubilee, and the Ambitious Stepmother better than the Orphan; That Hiccius Doctius was Arabic, and that Bonnyclabber is the Black-broath of the Lacedamonians; and thus he runs on with Paradoxes as new as unintelligible; but this noble Treatise being only yet in the Embryo, you may expect a farther account of it in the next, from,

Sir,

m.

ıdi-

lg;

ind

n;

20:

ot-

ive

ere nd his

ard the

Con,

A e a

me-

ues hat

m-

Raood

are

no.

are

vas een Your obliged humble Servant,

Will. Pierre.

SCARON

SCARON

TO

LEWIS le Grand.

By Mr. The. Brown.

LL the Conversation of this lower World at present runs upon you, and the Devil a word we can here in any of our Coffee-houses but what his Gallic Ma. jesty is more or less concern'd in. Tis agreed on by all our Virtuofo's, that fince the days of Diolcesian, no Prince has been so great a Benefactor to Hell as your felf; and as much a Master of Eloquence as I was once thought to be at Paris, I want words to tell you how much you are commended here for foheroically trampling under foot the Treaty of Ryswick, and opening a new Scene of War in your great Climacterick, at which age most of the Princes before you were fuch Recreants as to think of making up their Scores with Heaven, and leaving their Neighbours in Peace. you, you, cede Men to fp Subj you plau you ther hang

for

abor ble not and qua fon

Mo

Cor

to y dut mer con take

Vat Sou Ma

u,

you, they say, are above such forded Precedents, and rather than Pluto shall want Men to People his Dominions, are willing to spare him half a Million of your own Subjects, and that at a juncture too, when you are not over-stock'd with them.

This has gain'd you an universal applausein these Regions, the three Furies sing your Praises in every street, Bellona Swears there's never a Prince in Christendom worth hanging besides your self, and Charon bustles for you in all Companies. He desir'd me about a week ago to present his most humble respects to you; adding That if it had not been for your Majesty, he with his Wise and Children must long ago have been quarter'd upon the Parish; for which reason he duly drinks your health every Morning in a Cup of cold Styx next his Conscience.

ou,

y of

Ma.

eed

lays

ata

uch

once

s to

ided

foot

new

rick,

efore

k of

, and

But

you,

Indeed I have a double Title to write to you, in the first place, as one of your dutiful tho' unworthy Subjects, who formerly tasted of your Liberality; and secondly, as you have done me the Honour to take my late Wife not only into your private Embraces, but private Counsels. Poor Soul! Hittle thought she would fall to your Majesty's share when I took my last farewell well of her, or that a Prince that had his choice of fo many thousands, wou'd ac sept of my forry leavings. And therefore I must confess, I am apt to be a little vain as often as I reflect that the greatest Mo. narch in the Universe and I are brother Starlings, and that the eldest Son of the Church and the little Scaron have fish'd in Some fawcy fellows have the fame hole. had the impudence to tell me to my face that Madam Maintenon (for fo, out of respect to your Majesty, I must call her) is your law. ful Wife, and that you were Clandestinely married to her. I took them up roundly as they deferv'd, and told them I was fure it was a dam'd lye; for said I to them, if my Master was married to her, as you Pretend, fhe had broke his Heart long ago as well as she did mine, from whence! positively concluded that she might be your Mistress, but was none of your Wife.

Last Week, as I was sitting with some of my Acquaintance in a publick House, aster a great deal of impertinent chat about the Affairs of the Milanese, and the intended Siege of Mantua, the whole Company sell a talking of your Majesty, and what glorious exploits you had performed in your time. Why, Gentlemen, says an ill-

lookd

look

tus,

have

time

cœur

famo

in tv

Stru

a bu

not a

upot

able

him,

thou

Iniqu

Lifts

thy !

Whe

a Mi

ande.

prefe

to w

had

fuch

t his

ac

fore

vain

Mother

the

d in lave

face

bect

aw.

nely

y as

ure

em,

you

ago

icel

be

e.

e of

af-

out

end-

any

hat

in

ill-

look'd Rascal, who prov'd to be Herostratus, for Pluto's fake let not the Grand Monarch run away with all your praises. have done fomething memorable in my time too, 'twas I, who out of Gaiete de cœur, and to perpetuate my name, fir'd the famous Temple of the Ephesian Diana, and in two hours confumed that Magnificent Structure which was two hundred Years a building: Therefore, Gentlemen, lavish not away all your Praises I beseech you. upon one Man, but allow others their share. Why, thou diminitive inconsiderable Wretch, faid I, in a great passion to him, thou worthless idle Loggerhead, thou Pigmee in Sin, thou Tom Thumb in Iniquity, how dares fuch a puny Infect as thou art have the Impudence to enter the Lists with Lewis le Grand? Thou valuest thy felf upon firing a Church, but how? When the Mistress of the House, who was a Midwife by Profession, was gone out to affift Olympias, and deliver'd her of Alexander the great. 'Tis plain, thou hadst not the courage to do it when the goddess was present and upon the spot : But what is this to what my Royal Master can boast of, that had destroy'd a hundred and a hundred fuch foolish Fabricks in his time, and brave-

ly

ly order'd them to be Bombarded, when he knew the very God that made and redeem'd him had taken up his quarters in them. Therefore turn out of the room like a paltry infignificant Viliain as thou art, or I'll pink thy Çarkas for thee.

He had no sooner made his exit, but cries an odd fort of a Spark with his Hat but. ton'd up before like a Country Scraper, Under favour Sir, what do you think of me? Why, who are you? reply'd I to him. Who am I, answer'd he, why Nero the fixth Emperour of Rome, that murder'd my Come, faid I to him, to stop your prating, 1 know your History as well as your felf, that murder'd your Mother, kick'd your Wife down stairs, dispatch'd two Apostles out of the World, begun the first Persecution a. gainst the Christians, and lastly, put your Master Seneca to death. As for the Mur. der of your Mother, I confess it shew'd you had some taste of wickedness, and may pass for a tolerable piece of Gallantry: But pri'thee what a mighty matter was it to fend your Wife packing with a good kick in the Guts, when once she grew naufeous and fawcy, 'tis no more than whata thousand Tinkers and Foot-Soldiers have done before you: Or to put the Penal Laws

in

inex

Bigo

must

ligio

a har

conf

thof

maft

their

his 1

cate

fers 1

flarv

and

into

Edic

prov

were

the '

may

four

and disp

Gra

his

haft

vile

eve

his

vhen l re: rs in moo thou cries but. per, k of him. fixth ng, I that Vife at of n a. our Murb'w may try: is it pood naunata nave aws in in execution against a brace of hot-headed Bigots and their befotted followers, that must needs come and preach up a new Religion at Rome: Or in fine, to take away a haughty ungrateful Pedant's Life, who conspir'd to take away yours, altho' Iknow those worthy Gentlemen, the Schoolmasters, make a horrid rout about it in their nonfensical Declamations? Whereas his most Christian Majesty, whose Advocate I am refolv'd to be again all oppofers whatever, has bravely and generoufly flarv'd a Million of poor Hugonots at home, and fent tother Million of them a grafing into foreign Countries, contrary to folemn Edicts and repeated promifes, for no other provocation as I know of, but because they were fuch Coxcombs, as to place him upon the Throne. In short, Friend Nero, thou mayst pass for a Rogue of the third or fourth Class, but be advised by a stranger. and never shew they felf such a Fool as to dispute the pre-eminence with Lewis le Grand, who has Murder'd more Men in his Reign, let me tell thee, than thou hast Murder'd Tunes, for all thou art the vilest thrummer upon Cats Guts the Sun ever beheld. However to give the Devil his due, I will fay it before thy Face and behind behind thy back, that if thou hadst reign'd as many years as my gracious Master has done, and hadst had, instead of Tigellinus, a Jesuit or two to have govern'd thy Conscience, thou mightst in all probability have made a much more magnificent Figure, and been inferiour to none but the mighty Monarch I have been talking of.

-4

Having put my Roman Emperour tofi. lence, I look'd about me, and faw a pack of Grammarians (for so I guessed them to be by their Impertinence and noise)difputing it very fiercely at the next Table. The matter in debate was, which was the most Heroical Age, and one of them, who valu'd himself very much upon his reading, maintain'd, that the Heroical Age properly so call'd, began with the Theban and ended with the Trojan War, in which compass of time that glorious Constellation of Heroes, Hercules, Jason, Theseus, Tideus with Agamemnon, Ajax, Achilles, Hector, Troilus and Diomedes flourished; Men that had all fignaliz'd themselves by their perfonal Gallantry and Valour. His next neighbour argu'd very fiercely for the Age wherein Alexander founded the Grecian Monarchy, and faw fo many noble Generals and Commanders about him. The Third

Thir lius with Min gone put men Lun affer the r Lewi Harl appe ing u Gent at Fo defer ros doub Part roica Anci

Dru

but,

the f wick

We '

but

our 1

n'd

has

gelli.

thy

ility

t Fi-

the

ofi.

pack

m to

dif.

able.

the

who ead.

Age

eban

hich

tion

ideus

ctor,

that

per-

next

Age

ecian

Gene-

The

Chird

f.

Third was as obstreperous for that of Julius Cafar, and manag'd his Argument with fo much heat, that I expected every Minute when these Puppies wou'd have gone to Logger-heads in good earnelt. To pur an end to your Controversie, Gentlemen, fays I to them, you may talk till your Lungs are founder'd, but this I positively affert, That the present Age we live in is the most Heroical Age, and that my Master Lewis le Grand is the greatest Heroe of it. Hark you me, Sir, how do you make that appear, cry'd the whole pack of them opening upon me all at once. By your leave, Gentlemen, answer'd I, two to one is odds at Foot-ball, but having a Hero's cause to defend, I find my self posses'd with a Hero's Vigour and Resolution, and don't doubt but I shall bring you over to my Party. That Age therefore is the most Heroical which is the boldest and bravest. The Ancients, I grant you, Whor'd, and got Drunk, and cut Throats as well as we do, but, Gentlemen, they did not Sin upon the same Foot as we, nor had so many wicked discouragements to deter them. We Whore when we know 'tis ten to one but we get a Clap for our pains, whereas our Forefethers before the Siege of Naples G 2 had had no fuch Bleffing to apprehend. We drink and murther one another in cold Blood, at the same time we believe that we must be rewarded with Damnation; but your old Heroes had no notion at all. or at least an imperfect one of a Future State: So'tis a plain case, you see, that the Heroism lies on our side. To apply this then to my Royal Master, he has fill'd all Christendom with Blood and Confufion, he has broke through the most folemn Treaties sworn at the Altar; he has flarv'd and undone infinite numbers of Poor Wretches, and all this for his own Glory and Ambition, when he's affur'd that Hell gapes every moment for him, Now tell me whether your Jasons, your Agamemnons, or Alexanders, durst have ventur'd fo heroically, or whether your pitiful Emperours of Germany, your Mechanick Kings of England and Sweden, or your lowfy States of Holland, have courage enough to write after fo illustrious a Copy.

Thus, Sir, you may see with what Zeal I appear in your Majesty's behalf, and that I omit no opportunity of magnifying your great Exploits to the utmost of my poor Abilities. At the same time I must freely own to you, that I have met with some rough.

roug me i expa fo du Obje reply toaf days with Puif lame box felf the Wh that gul's mor thir deli Con Tis has > late of l

one

by

Ma

rough hewn fawcy Rascals, that have stopt me in my full career, when I have been expatiating upon your Praises, and have so dumb founded me with their Villainous Objections that I cou'd not tell how to reply to them.

Ve

old

hat

n;

all,

ure

hat

ply

ll'd

ifu-

fo-

has

s of

own

ur'd

nim.

OUT

ven-

piti-

cha-

your

rage

opy.

Zeal

that vour

poor

reely

ome

ough-

Some few days ago it was my Fortune toaffirm in a full Assembly, that since the days of Charlemain, France was never bleft with fo Renown'd, fo Victorious, and for Puissant a Prince as your Majesty. You lame gouty Coxcomb, faysa fawcy Butterbox of a Dutchman to me, don't give your self these Airs in our Company. Lewis the greatest Prince that France ever had! Why, I tell thee, he has no more Title to that Crown than I have to the great Mogul's; and Lewis the Thirteenth was no more his Father than the Pope of Rome is thine. I blest my self to hear the Fellow deliver this with fo ferious a Mein, when a Country-man of his taking up the Cudgels; 'Tis true, fays he, your mighty Monarch has no right to the Throne he possesses The late King had no hand in the begetting of him, but a lufty proper young Fellow, one le Grand by Name, and an Apothecary by Profession, was employ'd by Cardinal Mazarine, who had prepar'd the Queens ConConscience for the taking of such a Dose, to strike an Heir for France out of her Ma. jefty's Body: By the same token, that this Scarlet Agent of Hell, gothim fairly poy. fon'd as foon as he had done the work for fear of telling Tales. If you ever read Virgits life written by Donatus, crysa third to me, you'll find that Augustus having rewarded that famous Poet for some little Services done him, with a parcel of Loaves, had the curiofity once to enquire of him who he thought was his Father! to which question of the Emperour, Virgil fairly answer'd, that he believ'd him to be a Baker's Son, because he still paid him in a Baker's Manu facture, viz. Bread. And thus, were there no other Proofs to confirm it, yet any one wou'd Swear that Lewis le Grand is an A. pothecary's Son, because he has acted all his life time the part of an Apothecary.

Imprimis. He has given so many strong Purges to his own Kingdom, that he has emptied it of half its People and Mony. Item, He apply'd Caustives to Genoa and Brussels, when he bombarded both those Cities. Item, he gave a damn'd Clyster to the Hollanders with a witness, when he sell upon the rear of their Provinces in the Year 72. Item, He lull'd King Charles the Second

Fran rativ ente again have the little laftl Crov Peop Apot ding narc that quaq noth the l play mak King Prin pret infa

the

ficia

Fee

Secol

He

(wa)

ofe,

Ma-

his

oy-

for

me,

ded

ices the

o he

tion

er'd,

son;

here

one

A.

d all

ong

has ony.

and

hose

er to e fell

the

sthe

cond

Second asleep with Female Opiates. Item, He forced Pope Innocent the Eleventh to swallow the unpalatable Draught of the Franchises. Item, He administred a restorative Cordial to Mahumetanism, when he enter'd into an Alliance with the Great Turk against the Emperour. Item, He wou'd have bubbled the Prince of Orange with the gilded Pill of Sovereignty; but his little Cousin was wifer than to take it. And laftly, If he had reftor'd King James to his Crown again, he would have brought the People of England a most conscientious Apothecaries Bill for his waiting and attending. In short, Shake this mighty Monarch in a bag, turn him this way, and that way, and t'other way, sursum, deorfum, quaquaversum, I'll engage you'll find him nothing but a meer Apothecary; and I hope the Emperour, and King of England will play the Apothecary too in their turn, and make him vomit up all those Provinces and Kingdoms he has so unrighteously usurp'd. Prince Eugene of Savoy has work'd him pretty well this last Summer, and 'tis an infallible Prognoffic that he's reduced to thelast extremities, when his Spiritual Phyficians apply Pigeons to the Soles of his Feet, I mean Prayers and Masses, and advise G 4 him him to reconcile himself to that Heaven he has so often affronted with his most exe.

crable Perjuries.

'Tis impossible for me to tell your Majesty, what a surprize I was in to hear this graceless Netherlander blaspheme your glorious name after this insufferable rate. But to see how one Persecution treads upon the heels of another! I was hardly recovered out of my assonishment, when a Son of a Whore of a German, advancing towards me, was pleas'd to explain himself as sollows:

You keep a pother and a noise here about your mighty Monarch, fays he to me, but what has this mighty Monarch, and be damn'd to you, done to merit any body's good word? I fay, what one generous noble Exploit has he been guilty of in his whole Reign, as long as it is, to deferve fo much Incense and Flattery, so many Statues and Triumphal Arches, which a pack of mercenary, nauseous, fulsome Slaves have bestow'd upon him? For my part, continues he, when I first heard his Historians and Poets, his Priests and Courtiers talk fuch wonderful things of him, I fansied that another Cyrus or Alexander had appear'd upon the Stage; but when I observed obser truer his In tle, ti the c nicel do th had new Prin of th difgr work that his] hand this, affai that like and beg felt in th

exp

pro

ViE

Ene

fo d eaven exe. r Ma. r this rglo. . But n the rered ofa vards s fol. oout but be dy's ous his rve any my his ur-

1 a

me

ım, der n I

red

observed him more narrowly, and by a truer Light, I found this Immortal Man, as his Inscriptions vainly stile him, to be a little, tricking, pilfering Fripon, that watch'd the critical minute of stealing Towns, as nicely, as your Rogues of an interiour Sphere do that of nimming Cloaks; and tho' he had the fairest opportunity of erecting a new Western Monarchy that ever any Prince cou'd boast of, since the declension of the Roman Empire, yet to his eternal difgrace be it faid, no Man coud have made a worse use of all those wonderful advantages, that Fortune, and the stupid security of his Neighbours conspir'd to put into his hands. To convince you of the truth of this, let us only confider what posture the affairs of France were in at his accession to that Crown, and feveral years after, as likewise how all the neighbouring Princes and States about him stood affected: To begin then with the former, he found himfelf Master of the best disciplin'd Troops in the Universe, commanded by the most experienc'd Generals that any one Age had produc'd, and Spirited by a long train of Victories, over a careless, desponding, lazy Enemy. All the great Men of his Kingdom fo depressed and humbled by the fortunate artifi90 artifices of Richlieu and Mazarine, that they were not capable of giving him any uneasiness at home, the sole power of raising Money entirely in his own hands and his Parliaments fo far from givinga check to his daily encroachments upon their Liberties, that they were made the most effectual Instruments of his Tyranny: In short, His Clergy as much devoted, and the whole body of his People as fubfervi. ent to him as a Prince cou'd wish. his Neighbours, he who was best able of any to put a stop to his growing greatness, I mean the King of England, either favour'd his designs Clandestinely, or was so enervated by his Pleasure, that provided he cou'd enjoy an inglorious Effeminacy at home, he feem'd not to lay much to heart what became of the rest of Christendom, The Emperour was composing Anthems for his Chapple at Vienna, when he shou'd have appear'd at the head of his Troops up. on the Rhine. The Princes of Germany were either divided from the common Interest by the underhand management of France, or not at all concern'd at the impending Storm that threatned them. The Hollanders within an Ace of losing their Liberty by the prepofterous care they took to fecure ecure y of vhich ublic ou'd nd P distar elves he ti Cafal, hedi by a the C who care Tow ly re bour thro fmol the v mak > lig'd it fro

ing t

and port Prin that any

r of

inds,

inga

heir

mof

: In

and

ervi.

sfor le of

ness,

b'ruc'd

ener-

d he

cy at neart

dom.

is for ou'd

sup.

were

erest

ance,

ding

llaniber-

k to

cure

ecure it, I mean, by divesting that Famiv of all Power in their Government, which as it had formerly erected their Reublick, so now was the only one that ou'd help to protect it. The little States nd Principalities of Italy, looking on at a listance, and not daring to declare themelves in so critical a Conjuncture, when he two Keys of their Country, Pigneroland Cafal, hung at the girdle of France. In short, hedispeopl'd Monarchy of Spaingovern'd by a foft unactive Prince, equally unfit for the Cabinet and the Field, his Councellors, who manag'd all under him, taking no care to lay up Magazines, and put their Towns in a posture of defence, but wholly relying as for that, upon their Neighbours; like some inconsiderate spend thrist thrown into a Jayl by his Creditors, that smokes, and drinks, and talks merrily all the while, but never advances one step to make his Circumstances easie to him, leaving the burthen of that affair to his Friends and Relations, whom perhaps he never oblig'd so far in his prosperity, as to deserve it from their hands.

Here now, fays he, was the fairest opportunity that ever presented it self for a Prince of Gallantry and Resolution, for a

Tam:

Tamberlane and a Scanderbeg to have done fomething eminently fignal in his general tion; and if in the last Century, a little King of Sweden, with a handful of Men. cou'd force his way from the Baltick to the Rhine, and fill all Germany with Terrour and Consternation, what might we not have expected from a powerful King of France, in the flower of his Youth, and at the head of Two Hundred Thousand Effective Men, especially when there was no visible Power to oppose him? But this wonderful Monarch of yours, instead of carrying his Arms beyond the Danube, and performing any one Action worthy for his Historians to record in the Annals of his Reign, has humbly contented himfelfnow and then in the beginning of the Year when he knew his Neighbours were unprepar'd for fuch a visit, to invest some little Market-Town in Flanders with his invincible Troops, and when a parcel of filly implicit Fools had done the bufiness for him, then for sooth he must appear at the head of his Court-Harlots and Minstrels, and make a magnificent entry through the And after this ridiculous piece of Pageantry is over, return back again to Versailles with the same Equipage, order new

ew M ade u

y no r

nd we

ne Ar

v have vith a

nidon

God fo

bery,

rave 1

it of h

morta

ifter,

ets ar

ubter

that h

the Pl

the E

Willia

Alexa

No,

his H

they

drub

cries

and

favo

day-

done

nera.

little

Men,

o the

Tour

not

ng of

and

land

Was

t this

ad of

, and

r his

of his now

Year

un-

Come

is in-

filly

s for

the

trels,

h the

ce of

n to order

new

ew Medals, Opera's, and Sonnets to be ade upon the occasion; and what ought y no means to be omitted, our most trusty nd well-beloved Counfellor and Coufin ne Archbishop of Paris, must immediatevhave a Letter fent him to repair forthvith at the Hand of his Ecclefiastick Myrnidon to Notredame, and there to thank God for the fuccess of an infamous Robery, which an honest moral Pagan would have blush'd at. So that when the next it of his Fistula in Ano shall send this Immortal Town-stealer, this Divine Villageifter, this Heroic Pilferer of poor Hamets and their Dependencies, down to thefe ubterranean Dominions, don't imagine hat he'll be allow'd to keep Company with hePharamonds and Charlemaign's of France, he Edwards and Henries of Eugland, the Villiams of the Nassovian Family, or the Alexanders and Cafars of Greece and Rome. No, shou'd he have the impudence to shew his Head among that illustrious Assembly, they wou'd foon order their Footmen to drub him into better manners: Neither, cries a furly Englishman, clapping his sides, and interrupting him, must be expect the favour to appear even among our Holiday-Heroes and Custard-stormers of Cheapfide, side, those merry Burlesquers of the An Military in Finsbury Fields, who poor Creatures never meant the destruction of any mortal thing but transitory Roast-beef and Capon. No, Friends say, he Lewis le Grand must expect to take up his habita tion in the most infamous Quarter of Hell among a parcel of House-breakers and Shop-lifters, Rogues burnt in the Cheek for Petty Jarceny and Burglary, Brethreno the Moon, Gentlemen of the Horn-thumb Pillagers of Hedges and Hen-roofts, Con. veyers of Silver Spoons, and Chamlet. Cloaks, and fuch like enterprising Heroes whose famous Actions are faithfully regifter'd in our Sessions Paper, and dying Speeches, transmitted to Posterity by the Ordinary of Newgate; a much more impartial Historian than your Pelissons and Boileau's. However, as I was inform'd last week by an Understrapper at Court, Pluce, in consideration of the singular services your Royal Master has done him, will allow him a brace of Fidlers to scrape and fing to him whereever he goes, fince he takes fuch a delight to hear his own Praises.

Rogue, a Country Man of his, that ince peaki by hi Cond nis Ti with to the dance next very lung fess, with org'd Spain Thro tend he fr his S all I new been Adv

ceive

on a

upp

rya

and

and

ince the Grand Monarch we have been peaking of, who has all along done more by his Bribing and Tricking than by the conduct of his Generals, or the Bravery of nis Troops, who has play'd at fast and loose with his Neighbours ever fince he came o the Crown, who has furprised abunlance of Towns in his time, and at the next Treaty been forced to fpue up those very places he ordered Te Deums to be lung for a few Months before: I must cones, says he, That since in conjunction with a damn'd Mercenary Priest he has org'd a Will for his Brother in Law of spain, and plac'd his Grandson upon that throne, I should think the rest of Chrifendom in a very bad condition indeed, if he should be suffered to go on quietly with his Show a few years more. Then for Ill know, he might bid fair to fet up a new Empire in the West, which he has been aiming at fo long. But if the last Advise from the other World don't deteive us, if the Parliament of England goes on as unanimously as they have begun, to upport their Prince in so pious and necessary a War, in short, if the Emperour, the Dutch, and the other Allies, act with that Vigour and Resolution as it becomes them upon this

own ering that

e An

Crea.

f any

f and vis h abita.

Hell

and

Cheek

renof

umb

Con.

mlet.

eroes,

y re-

lying

y the e im-

s and

rm'd

ourt;

r fer-

,will

and

ce he

fince

this pressing occasion, I make no question to see this mighty Heroe plunder'd, like the Jay in the Fable, of all the fine Plumes he has borrow'd, and reduc'd to fo low an Ebb, that he shall not find it in his Power, tho' he has never fo much in his Will, to disturb the Peace of the Chri. fian World any more. And this, continues he; is as favourable an opportunity as we cou'd defire, to strip him of all hisUfur. pations, for Heaven be praised, Spain at present is a burthen to him, and by grasp. ing at too much, he's in a fair way to lofe every Farthing. Belides this late Forgery of the Will has pluck'd off his old Mask, and shews that 'tis an Universal Monarchy he intends, and not the repose of Europe, which has been fo fortunate a sham to him in all his other Treaties; so that the Devil's in the Allies now, if they don't fee through those thin Pretences he so often bubbled them with formerly, or lay down their Arms, till they have made this French Buffard, who is all Feathers, and no fub stance, as bare and naked as a Skeleton; and effectually spoil his new Trade of making Wills for other People. And this they may eafily bring about, continues he, if they lay hold on the present opportunity, for, a taken he'll ping lose a but h low I mon havin a few great a Sw came he ve and Door of N will b fore v Mona and b

the po

Thu

and I

dent

quari

Arm

Maje

lean,

tion

like

imes

low

his

n in

Ibri.

onti-

ty as lsur.

in at rasp.

lose

gery

lask,

rchy

rope,

m to

t the r see

often

lown

rench

fub.

eton;

f ma-

this

es he,

unity,

for

for, as I observed to you before, he has taken more business upon his hands than he'll ever be able to manage, and by grafping at too much, is in the direct road to lofe all. For my part, I never think of him but he puts me in mind of a filly foolish Fellow I knew once in London, who was a common Knife-grinder about the Streets, and having in this humble occupation gather'd a few stragling Pence, must needs take a great House in Fleet street, and and set up for a Sword Cutler: But before Quarter-day came, finding the Rent too bulky for him, he very fairly rubb'd off with all his Effe as, and left his Landlord the Key under the Without pretending to the Spirit Door. of Nostradamus, or Lilly, this, I foresee, will be the Fate of Lewis le Grand; therefore when you write next to your glorious Monarch, pray give my respects to him, and bid him remember the fad destiny of the poor Knife grinder of London.

Thus, you see, Sir, how I am daily plagu'd and harrass'd by a parcel of brawny impudent Raskels, and all for espousing your quarrel, and crying up the Justice of your Arms. For Pluto's sake let me conjure your Majesty to lay your Commands upon Boilean, Racine, or any of your Panegyrists, to

H

in-

instruct me how I may stop the Mouths of these impertinent Babblers for the suture, who make Hell ten times more insupport able to me than otherwise it would be, and threaten to tos me in a Blanket the next time I come unprovided for your desence into their Company. In the mean time, humbly desiring your Majesty to present my love to the quondam Wise of my bofom, I mean the virtuous Madam Maintenon, who in conjunction with your most Christian Majesty now governs all France, and put her in mind of sending me a dozen New Shirts by the next Pacquet, Iremain.

Your Majesty's most Obedient, and most obliged Subject, and Servant,

Scaron.

cess o

fince

and

nally

hard Glor lanti the f

fhor

upor part

my .

may

HANNIBAL

HANNIBAL

To the Victorious

Prince Eugene of Savoy.

By Mr. Tho. Brown.

Was with infinite satisfaction that I received the news of the happy fuccess of your Arms in Italy. My worthy Friend Scipio (for fo I may justly call him fince we have drop'd our old Animolities, and now live amicably together) is eternally talking of your Conduct and Bravery : Nay, Alexander the Great, who can hardly bear any Competitor in the point of Glory, has freely confessed that your Gallantry in passing the Po and the Adige in the face of so powerful an Enemy, falls not fhort of what he himself formerly shew'd upon the Banks of the Granicus. For my part I have a thousand obligations to you; my March over the Alpes, upon which I may deservedly value my self, was look'd upon

ēt,

lient,

ths of

iture,

pport. e,and next

fence time,

esent

y bo-

most

ance,

ozen I re-

ron.

BAL

of a

to h ther

Teri

Cafa

wou

the

ness

your

of y

Cau

all y

of

upon here to be fabulous, till your late Expedition over those rugged Mountains confirm'd the belief of it. Thus neither Hills nor Rivers can stop the progress of your Victories, and 'tis you who have found out the lucky Secret how to baffle the cir. cumspect gravity of the Spaniards, and repress the furious impetuosity of the French. His Gallic Majesty, who minds keeping his word as little, as that Mercenary Republic of Tradesmen whom it was my misfortune to ferve, will find to his cost, that all the Laurels he has been so long a plundering, will at last fall to your Excellencies share; and that he has been labouring Forty Years together to no other purpose than to enrich you with the Spoils of his former Triumphs. Go on therefore in the same glorious Track as you have begun, and be affured, that the good Wishes of all the Great and Illustrious Persons now resident in this lower World attend you in all your Enterprizes: As nothing can be a greater pleafure to Virtuous Men than to see Villains rewarded according to their deferts, fo true Heroes never rejoice more than when they fee a Sham-Conquerour, and vain-glorious Bully, fuch as Lewis the XIVth. plunder'd of all his unjust Acquisitions, and reduced to his Primitive State of Nothing. Were there a free Communication between our Territories and yours, Cyrus, Miltiades, Casar, and a Thousand other Generals, wou'd be proud to offer you their Service the next Campaign, but 'tis your happiness that you want not their assistance; your own personal Bravery, join'd to that of your Troops, and the Justice of your Cause, being sufficient to carry you thro' all your Undertakings.

Farewel.

H 3 PINDAR

late tains ither is of ound cir-

and the inds Mer-

n it to n fo

our

o o-

on as

that lluwer

prilea-

rue

hey ous

er'd of

PINDAR of Thebes

and the same

TO

Tom D-y

By Mr. Tho. Brown.

Owever it happen'd fo, I can't tell, but I cou'd never get a fight of thy famous Pindaric upon the late Queen Ma. ry, till about a Month ago. Most of the Company wou'd needs have me declare open War against thee that very Minute, for Prophaning my Name with fuch execrable Doggrel. Stefichorus rail'd at thee worfe than the Man of the Horse-shoe Tavern in Drury: Lane; Alcaus, I believe, will hardly be his own Man again this Fortnight, so much concern'd he is to find thee crowding thy felfamong the Lyric Poets: Nay, Sappho the Patient laid about her like a Fury, and call'd thee a thousand pimping stuttering Ballad-fingers. As for me, far from taking any thing amiss at thy hands, I am mightily tily I done been I ever cumf comf in the when Rent ler for Paga ly rerable in R.

petu him for I The Sam esca him

the !

afrai

arek

mar four can

If A

few

tily pleased with the honour thou hast done me, and besides must own thou hast been the cheapest, kindest Physician to me I ever met with; for whenever my Circumstances sit uneasse upon me (and for thy comfort Tom, we Poets have our Plagues in this World, as well as we had in yours) when my Landlord · persecutes me for Rent, my Semftress for Linen, my Tayler for Clothes, or my Vintner for a long Pagan Score behind the Bar; I immediately read but half a dozen lines of thy admirable Ode, and fleep as heartily as the Monks in Rabelais after finging a Verfe or two of the Seven Penitential Psalms. All I am afraid of, is, That when the Virtues of it areknown, some body or other will be perpetually borrowing it of me, either to help him to a Nap, or cure him of the Spleen, for I find 'tis an excellent Specifick for both: Therefore I must desire thee to order trusty Sam to fend me as many of them as have escap'd the Pastry-Cook, and I will remit him his Money by the next opportunity. If Augustus Casar thought a Roman Gentleman's Pillow worth the buying, who slept foundly every Night amidst all his Debts, can a Man blame me for bestowing a few transitory Pence upon thy Poem, which tell,

thy

Ma-

the

re o-

for,

able

han

ury:

e his

uch

thy

tpho

and

ing

ing

gh-

tily

H 4

Pinder of Thebes to Tom D—y, is the best Opiate in the Universe? In short, Friend Tom, I love and admire thee for the freedom thou hast taken with me, and this I will say in Commendation, that thou hast in this respect done more than even Alexander the Great durst do. That mighty Conqueror upon the Taking of Thebes spared all of my Family, nay, the very House I liv'd in: But Thou, who hast a Genius Superiour to him, hast not spared me even in what I value most, my Versification, and good Name, for which Apollo in due time reward thee.

Farewel.

ANTI-

Y and o

only pect pass'c

and r fenfil any i

havii Chrij

my ( Jews,
from

Deso ter I

ANTIOCHUS

TO

LEWIS the XIVth.

By Mr. Henry Barker.

Dear Brother,

In thee

me,

nore do.

king the

who

not

my wel.

[[.

You will be surprised, I know, to receive this Letter from a stranger, and of all the damn'd, perhaps, I am the only Man from whom you least of all expect any News, because I have always pass'd for so impious and cruel a Prince, and my Name has given People such horrible Idea's of me, that they think me insensible of Pity, as having never practised any in my Life time.

When I sat upon the Throne of Syria, having no more Religion than your most Christian Majesty, I stifled all the dictates of my Conscience, pillag'd the Temple of the Jews, carous'd with their Blood, and running from one Crime to another, drew infinite Desolations every where after me. But after I had exercis'd my Tyranny on the Innocent

bels,

wher

ans,I lois;

Recr

of th

fear (

neve

most

aAir

your

you

you

be o

noN

Her

lible

Stat a lit

into

yard fod

non

riet

int g00 the

wh

tall

nocent Posterity of several great Kings, and left a thousand Monuments of my Barbari. ty, I found to my forrow, that I was Mor. tal, and oblig'd to submit to that Fate whose attacks feeble Nature cannot resist, I then fell into an Abyss which is inlightn'd only by those Flames which will for ever roast such Monsters as we; and where] was loaded with much heavier Irons than any I had plagu'd poor Mortals with above, To bid me welcome into this place of Horror, and refresh me after my Voyage, I was plung'd into a Bath of Fire and Brim. stone, cup'd by a Master Devil, rub'd, scrub'd &c. by a parcel of smoaking grinning Hob. goblins, and afterwards prefented with a Musical Entertainment of Groans, howling, and gnashing of Teeth. I soon began to play my part in this hideous Confort, where despare beat the Measure; and be cause my pains were infinitely greater than those of others, I immediately ask'd the Reafon of my Torments, and was told it was for having hindred the Peopling of Hell, by the multitude of Martyrs my longPerfecutions had made, and of which you cannot be ignorant if you delight in useful reading. Since I have been in this Empire of Sorrow, where I found the Pharaohs, Ahabs, Fezebels.

bels, Athaliahs, Nebuchadnezzars, &c. and a Fistula,

s, and bari. Mor. Fate elift. itn'd ever ere I han ove. Hore, I Imp,qr lobha OWgan ort, benan ea. for the ons ig-

ng.

W,

ze-

els,

where I have feen arrive the Neroes, Dioclefians, Decii, * Philips of Austria, Charles of Va- * King's of lois; whose names wou'd fill a Volume, the Spain. Recruits of Loyola arrive every day in fearch of St. Barof their Captain, but in some confusion for tholofear of meeting Clement and Ravaillac, who mew's never cease cursing 'em. Your Apartment, most Christian Hero, has been some 50 Years aAiring, but now they redouble their care. your coming being daily expected, I give you timely Notice of it that you may take your measures accordingly. Perhaps you'll be offended at this familiarity, and tell me noMan can deserve Hell for fighting against Hereticks under the command of an infallible General; but if you know the present State of those Miter'd Leaders, it wou'd not a little terrifie you. Lucifer has turn'd 'em into several shapes, and peopled his backyard with them; the Place, 'tis true, is not fodelightful as your Menagerie and Trianon at Versailles, but much excells it in variety and number of Monsters. Your Cell is in the same Yard, that you may be near your good Friends, who advis'd you to make the Habitation of the shades a Defart; for which the Prince of Darkness hates you mortally, and defigns you something worse than a Fistula, or the Bull of Palaris. Your inge nious Emissaries Marillac la Rapine and la Chaise, will meet in the Squadrons of Pluto with more invenom'd Dragoons than thole they let loofe against their poor Country. men in France: 'Twill be their imployment to keep his Menagerie clean, whose stench wou'd otherwise poison the rest of Hell. That Renegado Pelisson too makes so odious a Fi. gure here that he frights the boldest ofour Jaylors; and his Eyes red with crying for his Sins, which were fo much the greater because they were voluntary, make him ashamed to look any one in the Face. Our Learned think him profoundly ignorant, yet you must be the Trajan of that Plini, for he's now writing your History in such a terible manner, that it will but little resemble that which your Pensionary Wits are composing. The Voyage having made him lose some part of his Memory, and forget the particulars of your Vertues; he will therefore take me for his Model, and draw my Life under your Name. Tho'

Mainte- like a Girls, at the Age of threescore and ten, makes the Court of Proserpine rejoice before

*Scaron. hand, yet the deformed * Author of the Comical Romance, cannot laugh, as facetious fome priva ambito fee my fe that opure

as he

me, he ferts fuch most rope in threa Punish Rage possible for Bebecan many eldeft

as

nge.

dla

luto

hole

try.

lent

nch 'hat

Fi.

nuo

for

im

Our

nt,

ini,

uch

ttle

Vits

ade

ind he

ind

ho

ffes

en,

ore

ous

as

as he is, I will tell you no more, because some may think I give this Counsel out of private Interest; for having been always ambitious, it wou'd doubtless grieve me to see a more wicked and cruel Tyrant than my self; but on the Faith and Word of one that endures the sharpest of Torments, its pure compassion.

I am Yours, &c.

LEWIS the 14th's Answer.

I Just now receiv'd yours by a Courier, who, had he not been too nimble for me, had been rewarded according to his deferts for his impudent message. But are you fuch a Coxcomb as to imagine that the most ambitious Monarch upon Earth, whose Power puts all the Princes and States of Europe into Convulsions, can be frighted at the threats of a wretch condem'd to everlafting Punishments? The Infolence of your Comparison, I must confess, threw me into a Rage; and not reflecting at first on the impossibility of the thing, I sent immediately for Boufflers to Dragoon you. But Villian! because your Malice has been rampant for so many Ages, must you now level it at the eldest Son of the Church, whom the godly Fesuits

The's

latio

her

she

Bear

Obj

tives

hein

Sain

Tho

der,

I ha

cure

lady

ries

and in va

me;

al Pa

Mass

Purg

mea let a

tain

his I

quie

Ver

Jesuits have already Canoniz'd ? I am not so ignorant of the History of Asia, tho'l never read any of the Books of the Macchabees, but I know you were both Judge and Executioner, and that there is not in thell. niverse one Monument consecrated to your Glory. Thanks to the careful Jesuits, laPlace des Victoris, is a sufficient proof that my Re. putation is no Chimera, and my Name, which is to be seen in Golden Characters over seve. ral Monasteries, assures me of a glorious Im. mortality. 'Tis true, to keep in favour with the Church, I have compell'd a handful of obstinate Fools to leave their Country and Estates, by forcing them to renounce their God, and implicitly take up with mine. Therefore the World has no reason to make fuch a noise about it. Are you mad to call Pelisson, who has read moreVolumes than 'a Rabbi, and cou'd give Lessons of Hipocri. fie to the most exquisitSect of the Pharises, a Plockhead? Your Torments are fo great you know not on whom to fpit your Ve-* Mainte- nom, and my poor *Mistris forsooth must fuffer from your Malice : Is she the worle for being born in the Reign of my Grandfather? Pray ask Boileau whose fincerity has cost him many a Tear, what he thinks of her. All the World knows her Virtues, and that fhe's mon.

ho'I

cha-

and

eŲ.

your

Place

Re.

hich

leve.

s Im.

with

ul of

and their

ine.

nake

call

than

ocri.

isees,

great

r Ve.

must

worle

rand.

y has

f her.
I that

she's

the's grown gray in the School of Diffimulation and Lewdness, which have render'd her so charming in the feats of Love, that the pleases me more than the Youngest Beauty; therefore are her Wrinkles the Objects of my wonder, and the Provocatives of my enervated Limbs, instead of being Antidotes; and I wou'd not give a Saint a Wax-candle to make her younger. Tho' I'm feiz'd by a Caneer on the Shoulder, yet I am under no apprehensions; for I have given a Fee to St. Damian, who will cure me of it as well as of that nauseousMalady of Naples: And I have Plenipotentiaries now bribing Heaven for its Friendship, and a new Term of Years. Therefore 'tis in vain for Lucifer or you ever to expect me; and when I must leave this Terrestrial Paradise, 'twill be with such a Convoy of Masses as will hurry me by the very Gate of Purgatory without touching there. In the mean time, correct your faucy Liberty, and let a Monarch, who wou'd fcorn to entertain such a pitiful Wretch as thou art for his Pimp, still huff the World, and sleep quietly in his Seraglio.

LEWIS R.

Versailles, 14. July

CATHA

CATHARINE de Medicis

To the Dutchess of

ORLEANS.

Madam,

Have long bewail'd your Condition, and tho' I am in a Place of Honour, yet] should think my felf in some measure hap py, if I knew how to deliver you from those Anxieties which torment you. We have fome body or other arrives here daily from Versailles, and as my curiofity in. clines me to enquire after your Highnes, I have received fo advantageous a Character of your Goodness, from all hands, that I think every one ought to pity you. Your Life, Madam, has been very unhappy, tor you were married very young to a jealous, ill-natur'd Prince, who had no love for your tho no person in the world was fitter either to inspire or receive it than your self: However you have had better luck than his formerWife, which I take to be owing to your own Prudence, and not his Generofity. The Desolations of the Palatine, and Persecution of a Religion you once approv'd, must must easie not st fures and I hort, think on: \ Your haug a Gra born Nigh well bet u Prud ncli Lorr comf my c tion. Chu ulag the Con thin grea

not, dail nust infallibly have given you many uneasie moments, but your misfortunes did not stop here, for even your domestick Pleafures have been poison'd by the Dishonour and Injustice of the Court you live in. hort, tho' I was very unfortunate; yet I think you much more worthy of Compaffion: When I marry'd Henry 2d. I was both Young and Handsome, yet his doting on the haughty Dutchess of Valentinois, who was Grandmother before Francis the 2d. was born, made me pass many mellanchly Nights. Notwithstanding the Injustice as well as Cruelty of keeping a fawcy Strumbet under my Nose, yet with the Veil of Prudence and Religion, I easily cover'd my inclinations; because the pious Cardinal of Lorrain, who had an admirable Talent to comfort an afflicted Heart, commiserating my condition gave me wonderful Confolation. As the refreshing Cordials of the Church foon made me forget the King's ill usage of me; so Madam, it is not so much the Infidelity of your Husband, as the cruel. Constraint and Jealousie that makes me think your Life to be miferable; for how great soever your occasions are, you dare not, I know, accept of those Assistances I daily receiv'd from a plump a greable Prelat, and

and yet I

is

haptrom We

dai inness,

Cha., that

Your , for lous,

you! ither

How-

your

The secu-

ov'd,

must

and I am heartily forry for it. To divertthis discourse which may perhaps aggravate your uneafiness, by renewing your necessity ties, you'll tell me, I suppose, that I shou'd have had as much Compassion when France was dyed with the Blood of 10 many Thou. fand Victims, and that I might eafily have moderated the Fury of my Son, and of the House of Guise; but besides, you must con. fider, I was a zealous Papift; and they, you know, think the cutting of poor Hereticks Throats is doing Heaven good Ser. vice, fo that I beheld the dreadful Massacre of St. Bartholomen with as much fatisfaction as ever I did the most glorious and solemn Festival. I am not for it at present, Madam, and cou'd I have been fo fooner, it would have been much more for my eafe. All my comfort is, that am not my felf in a strange unknown Country? For the old Dutches, who robb'd me of my due Benevolence in the other World, continually follows meto upbraid me, the Guises rave, brandishing bloody Daggers in their hands, and every hour I meet with numbers of my former Acquaintance, and nearest Relations; but I avoid their Company as much as I can for the love of my dear Cardinal, who continues as great a Gallant as ever, I ask 110 no l

Fart

fince

opin

you

infu

asLi

and

did 1

but :

in t

Que

Char

fic'd

I ha

Deba

coul

and

natu

ftano

in H

famo

need

eftee

this

vate

ceff.

lou'd

rance

hou-

have

t the

con-

hey,

He.

Ser-

Tacre

Ction

lemn

dam,

ould

ll my range

chefs,

ce in

me to

Thing

every

; but I can who I ask

110

no Masses of you, for the Dead are not a Farthing the better for them. But, Madam, fince all the World has not fo good an opinion of me as Brantome, let me conjure you not to let my Memory be too much insulted. Some may say I was as cunning asLivia, that I was even with my Husband, and govern'd my Children, but their Fate did not answer my care: For Francis liv'd but a little time, Elizabeth found her Tomb in the Arms of a jealous Husband, the Queen of Navarre was a wandering Star, Charles, a Cautious Coxcomb that facrifie'd all to his fafety; and Henry, on whom I had founded all my hopes, a dissolute Debauchee whom the Justice of Heaven could not spare. You know his History, and if you shou'd see a Tragedy of the like nature acted on your Stage, let your Constancy, which makes you respected even in Hell. Let old * Messalina enjoy the in- * Madam famous Honour of the Royal Bed, you Mainteneed not blush at it, since all the World non. esteems you as much as they.

z THE

THE

ANSWER

Of the Dutchess of Orleans to

CATHARINE de Medicis.

IS with much reason you pity me, and tho' I have faid nothing all this while, yet I have not thought the lefs. If the practice of our Court did not teach me to dissemble, I should give my self some ease by imparting many things to you which wou'd fill you with Horror; and then you wou'd find that the Cruelties of your Sons, were Trifles in comparison of these. The most impartial Censurers of Barbarity, maintain that the Massacre of S. Bartholomen was milder than the present Perfecution of the Protestants: Ambition was the chiefest motive of the Guises: but now their Cruelties are cover'd with the Cloak of Religion; for the virtuous Favourite *Sultaness, with the pious | Mufti in waiting, are resolv'd to cause the Christians to be more cruelly perfecuted than they areat Algiers, and the Roman Church is refolv'd at

* Madam Maintenon || Father la Chaife. at a thir the Rac Tea

you hal o

fed latte

fee tagai

cont

belie fince rish'o

Gam

those fupp Face of h

Shoe are l will:

when

at any rate to merit the name of the bloodthirsty Beast. They value not exposing the Reputation of Princes; I blush for my Race, and am often oblig'd to fwallow my Tears. I believe the efficacy of Masses no more than you, therefore I will not offer you any. I am very glad to hear the Cardihal of Lorrain proves so constant: For a Prelate of his Talent and Constitution must certainly be a great Confolation to a diffrefsed Princess. Brantome who has fo much flatter'd you, may do it again; and tho' Sancy has been too fincere, yet he dares not contradict him in yourPresence. I hope to fee the Ruines of my Country rais'd up again; for tho' our ambitious Monarch huffs and hectors all Christendom, yet his Game to me feems very desperate, and I believe he'll prove the Dog in the Fable; fince he has so depopulated and impoverish'd his Dominions by Persecutions, that those Pious Drones the Monks only can support the Churches Grandeur in their Faces with three-story Chains; the rest of his People being reduc'd to wooden Shoes and Garlick. Tho' our Gazettes are little better than Romances; yet they will serve to divert you and your Cardinal when not better imploy'd; and I wish I cou'd cis.

me, this

ach felf you and s of

of ar-

er-

vas ow

ak

nit-

to v'd

at

cou'd fend them to you weekly. 'Tis true, great numbers fet out daily from hence, for your Country, and among them, People of the best Quality, but I carefully avoid all Commerce with them, and tho'I have a wonderful esteem for you, take it not amis, Madam, if I endeavour never to see you.

Cardinal MAZARINE

To the Marquiss

De Barbesteux.

AM surpriz'd to think you have pro-

As great a Beast as he was, he governd fited folittle by your Father's Example:

himself better than you; for contenting himself with pillaging all France, according to our Maxims, he never attempted the * The Life of any Man, nor ever fet any * Ra of Henry vaillac's to work. Is it not a horrible thing to fee the + Servant of a Minister of State 4th. †Grandval hang'd fuffer upon a Wheel, and publish the shame of him that set him to Work? You in Flanwere mightily mistaken in the choice of ders for ing to kill your Villain; for whenever you haves King K. W.

King fuit, Relig wife. wou' the d the t ways marr into Fire Con ed or expo terpi set l ther Head him an u +Po and ffarv

which

ted

Wo

you

vou

Or,

King to dispatch, you must employ a Jesuit, or some Novice inspir'd by their Religious Society; and had you been fo wife, the *Prince you had a Plot against * King wou'd not be now in the way to hinder William. the designs of a f King, for whom I have + Lewis the tenderness of a Father, who was al-The 14th. ways under my subjection, and wou'd have married my Niece if I had pleas'd. I fell into a cold Sweat even in the midst of my Fire and Brimstone, at the News of your Conspiracy, because it so severely reflected on his Reputation. Ought you to have expos'd his Credit in so dubious an enterprize? Is it not sufficient that Poets set him upon * Mont Pagnotte, whilst o- * A place ther Princes gave glorious examples at the reach of Head of their Troops; that they reproach Cannon. him with Incest, Sodomy, Adultery, and an unbridled Passion for the Relict of a poor Poet, who is a Turn-spit here below, + Scaron. and who had nothing to keep him from starving when upon Earth, but the Pension, which the Charity of Ann of Austria granted to his Infirmities, rather than his Works, tho' very diverting? What was your aim in this cowardly design? Wou'd you have more Servants, and more Whores? Or, ought you to effect that, to revive those

I 4

ern'd nting rding
i the
* Ra thing
State

pro.

nple:

true,

ence,

them,

efully

and

1, take

never

You

ce of ave a

King

those Scenes of Cruelty and Treachery, which we banish'd after the death of the most Eminent Cardinal, Richelieu? All the Wealth you can raise will never amount to the Treasures I was Master of. And how much is there now left? Ask the Duke of Mazarine, and my Nephew of Nevers; one has been the Bubble of the Priests; and the other of his Pleasures? fo that the Children of the first will hard. ly share one year of my Revenue. Wife for feveral Years was no chargeto him, she, for her Beauty, being kept by strangers? whilst he fool'd away those vaft Riches he had by her. In short, you see the praying Coxcomb I made choice of, which I must contess I did when I was in my Cups, has through his Zeal and Bigottry ruin'd all, even my most beautiful Statues; and that there is a Curse entail'd upou such Estates, as begin with a Miracle, and end with a Prodigy. I was born at Mazare, without any other advantage than that of my Beauty; but as a young Fellow can scarce defire a better Portion than that in Italy; so it mov'd Cardinal Anthon y to lead me lovingly from his Chamber into his Closet, where on a soft easie Couch he preach'd to me Morals after the Italian

Italia virtu came You fure, guilty certain who l Alexa or I. hirst. fame Trayt her 1 her f ind C Aqua-Happi imph

ng S

ou'll

ome

nce.

ry,

he

All

int

nd he

of

he

s?

lis

to by aft

lee .

of,

as

nd

ti-

n-

la

as

n-

ng on al m-

fie he

an

Italian fashion; by which, and some other virtuous Actions of the same stamp, I became the richest Favourite in the Universe. You may as well as I heap a mighty Treafure, and lose it as foolishly. Do not be guilty then of Murder for things fo uncertain in the possession. Poor Louvois. who left you all, who drank more than Alexander, and thiev'd better than Colbert or I, has not now Water to quench his hirst. You will undoubtedly meet the ame Destiny; for this is the Residence of Traytors, Murderers, Thieves, and all o-'Tis not altogeher notorious Villains. her so pleasant a place this, as * Meudon nd Chaville; for we drink nothing but Houses Aqua-fortis, and eatburning Charcoal; all near Paris. Happiness is banish'd, Misery only triimphs; and notwithstanding all those lyng Stories the Priests may tell you, yet ou'll be strangely surpris'd when you ome to judge of it by your own Experince.

THE

ANSWER

Of Monsieur le Marquiss de Barbasieux to

Cardinal MAZARINE.

Tour Eminence, I find, is in a great Paffion, because my Father did not get an Estate in your Service; must you therefore abuse him, and turn that as a Crime upon me, which has been practis'd ever fince there have been Kings in the World? If your Talent only lay in pilla. ging and plundering, must it therefore prescribe to mine, and do you think the Glory of taking away by Dagger, or Poifon, the Enemies of ones Prince, deserves less immortality than that of ruining his Subject? You have I confess very meritoriously eterniz'd your Name by that method, for which reason you ought in Conscience to allow me the liberty to find out another. You are much in the wrong on't to complain of the Duke of Mazarine, who did you the honour to think you were only in Purgatory, and lavish'd your Trea

Tre vou diff hap the is se him If th you you to Co men you you Aut ing Diet who Rag Meu do y take

at *

tenc

Ihav

me door

will

nen

TI

The Marquiss de Barbesieux's Answer, &c. 123

Treasures upon Bigots, in hopes to pray vou out of it. If he in a holy fit of Zeal dismember'd your fine Statues, which perhaps too often recall'd to your Memory the pious Sermons of Cardinal Anthony; he is severely punish'd in a Libel made against him in Vindication of your Beauteous Niece. If that Satyr reaches your Regions below. you'll foon be convinced what a Coxcomb you were when you chose the worst of Men to couple with the most charming of Women. This, with feveral other passages of your Life, makes me not much wonder at your condemning me by your Cardinals Authority to drink Aqua-fortis, and eat burning Charcoal: It may perhaps be a proper Diet for Epicurean Cardinals and Italians, who love hot Liquors, and high-feafon'd Ragoos; but the Lords of Chaville and Meudon desireother Entertainments. How do you know, I befeech you, but I may take the Cell of the young Marquis D' Ancre at * Mont Valerine, there by a long Peni- * Hermitence to purge me of those Sins you say rage near. I have committed? Therefore if you reckon me in the number of those Reprobates doom'd to people the Infernal Shades, time will at last make it appear that your Eminence has reckon'd without your Hoft.

eat

not

70u

is a is'd

the

llafore

the 90irves

his ito-

me-

on-

out

on't

who

vere

100r rea

MARY

*Queen

MARY of England

TO THE

POPE

THE malignant Planet that govern'dat my Birth, fo influenc'd all the Facul.

Most Holy Father,

ties of my Soul, that I was the most out. rageous and barbarous Princess that till that time mounted the English Throne, and as it is no extraordinary thing to continue in the fame temper, in a Country inhabited only with Tyrants and the Butchers of their Subjects; fo you ought not to be surpris'd if I am not now disposses'd of it. I had not long troubled the World before my * Mother was divorc'd, and I Catharine my felf declar'd incapable of fucceeding of Spain. Henry the 8th. Ann of Bulloin was then brought to the Royal Bed, and what was worse, with her was introduc'd a Religion, so conformable to the Laws of God, that it never fuited with my Inclinations. proud Rival of Catharine was afterwards facrific'd to the inconstancy of her voluptuous F o my her; count hen, vereig ice I is'd t arine subject plend arou iful I erity he in us So

ad as Cruel o you

eginr hink t ou th

vithP Mildn leligie

as no ecom our l

urple ous

ous Husband; but that infipid Religion, o my Grief, was not confounded with her; for the young and simple Edward ountenanc'd it during his Reign. But hen, came my turn! And you know, Sovereign Pontiff, with what Pride and Maice I mounted the Throne; the means I as'd to destroy that cursed Heretical Do-Brine , the pleasure I took in shedding my ubjects Blood, what Magnificence and plendour I gave to the Mass; how bararoufly I treated that innocent and beauiful Princess Jane Suffolk; with what seerity I us'd my Sifter Elizabeth; and also he immoderate Joy that feiz'd my precius Soul, when I married a Prince, who ad as well as I, the good quality of being cruel to the highest degree, is not unknown o you. Notwithstanding what I said in the eginning of my Letter, you may, perhaps, hink my Sentiments now alter'd, but I affure ou the contrary, and that I cannot behold vithPatience your present Insensibility and sildness. Is it possible you can suffer a leligion, destitute of all Ornaments, that as nothing but Truth and Simplicity to ecommend it, to get the advantage of our Rome, which Reigns in Blood and urple, subsists by Falshood and Idolatry, and

i'dat

out.
till
one,

conntry But-not fs'd

orld d I

ling

was on,

t it

rds

tu-

Thirf

feech

your

most

Bene

grant

Paul.

me an

Roma

him,

good

of Ve

berty

fo ill.

cauti

other

eithe

duce whic

and

and fets up and pulls down Kings? How can you endure it? What a horrid shame and weakness is this? Are there no more Ravaillack? Is there neither Powder not Daggers in the Arfenal of the Jesuits? Have they forgot how to build Wheels, Gibbets and Scaffolds? Or is your Malice, Envy, Hatred and Fury feiz'd with a Le thargy? 'sdeath, Holy Father! I am di. stracted when I think that nothing fucceeds in England, where I took fo much Pains, and practis'd fo much Cruelty to establish Popery, and root out the Doctrine of the Apostles; and where your Pious Emissaries, following my Zeal, had invented most admirable Machines, to sacrifice, with James the First, all the Enemies of your Antichristian Holiness! Doyousleep? and must France only brandish the glorious Flambeau of Persecution? Consider, I pray, that I employ the best of my time in Imprecations against the Deserters from your Church , that I so inflam'd my Blood in those Transports, that it threw me into a Dropfie, which hurried me to the Grave, My Husband, who was too much of my Temper to love me, was very little concern'd. In short, That filthy Disease stiffed me, a certain presage of the continual Thirft Tow

ame

ore

not

eits?

eels,

lice,

Le-

di.

fuc-

uch

y to

rine

ious

ven.

fice.

es of

eep?

ious

Im.
Your
d in to a
ave.

my conift'd

nual hirst

Thirst I now fuffer. But I once more befeech you, most Holy Father, to re-inforce your Squadrons to join them with the most Christian King's, and with your Holy Benediction, give them strict orders to grant no Quarters to the Disciples of St. Paul. You will infinitely oblige by it, both me and Lucifer, who is now as zealous a Romanist as your Eldest Son, and who, like him, wou'd not willingly fuffer any but good Papists, the Friends and Pensioners of Versailles, those sworn Enemies of Liberty and Property in his Dominions. I am so ill-natur'd, that my Husband Philip is as cautious of imbracing me as he was in the other World; but that's no misfortune either to Earth or Hell; for we cou'd produce nothing but a Monster between us. which wou'd be the Terror of Mankind, and Horror of Devils.

The

The POPE's

ANSWER

TO

MART of England.

O U are too violent, dear Madam, and Men of my Age and Grandeur re. quire more moderation. I'm acquainted with your Hiftory, and know your Zeal, by the same token you needed not waste your Lungs to acquaint me with either the one or the other. To be free with you, I am not of the Humour to espouse madly other Peoples Passions, tho' I shou'd leave the Tripple Crown destitute of all Pomp and But I will make the Hereticks Greatness. blot out of their Writings, if possible, the names of Antichrist, devouring Dragon, Wolf disguis'd in a Sheep-skin, and several other as abusive. Do not you believe People are weary of paying a blind Obedience to the See of Rome? Imperious France has made us sensible of it; and 'tis not the fault of the Eldest Son of the Church, if he does not dedeth fures min fcorr and dam man fresh band indif infe devo why fame Supp retici their vorce adva tois that cian yet

drin

Drop

preju

lose

no]

banl

The Popes Answer to Mary of England. dethrone his mother. Ecclesiastical Cenfures are now out of fashion, and no more minded than Pasquinades. We where scorn'd and ridicul'd in your Father's time; and tho' you were as handsom as my quondam Mistress, or, Donna Maria di S. Germano, you shou'd not oblige me to put up fresh Affronts for your fake. Your Husband is to blame to treat you with fuch indifference; and I think it very ill for an infected Worm eaten Carcass to dispise so devout a Queen. But I cannot imagine why the Popes, who live all under the fame Zone with you, suffer such coldness? Suppose your Husband shou'd, like a Heretick dispise their Exhortations, one of their Decrees has Power enough to divorce you? Which in time, I hope, may advance your Grandeur, for we here Pluto is in Love with you for your Zeal; and that Proferpine is given over by the Physi-Therefore take my advice, and drink as little water as you can; for, being Dropfical, the Water of Styx must needs be prejudicial to you, and the Church wou'd lose an admirable good Friend. I offer you no Indulgences, they are pure Mountebank Drugs; and were you got no further yet than Purgatory, have not the Vertueto K

and

re-

ited

eal,

afte ther

ou,

idly

ave

and

icks

the

Volf

her

are

the

ade

of

not

de-

bring

130

Harlequin to Father la Chaise.

bring you out. But grant they had that Power; as your Amours stand now, I suppose you wou'd not desire it; so till have the happiness of wishing your Imperial Majesty much joy,

I am, &c.

HARLEQUIN

TO

Father la Chaise.

Since we were of the same Trade, with this difference only, that I composed Farces to make the World laugh, and that you invent Tragedies that give them Horror; I believe, Reverend Father, you will not condemn the liberty I take of writing to you.

In the first place, I beseech your Reverence not to put your Penitents out of conceit with those harmless Diversions which make me and my Brother Players live so plentifully; but he pleased to take our small

fma. Pow piou tofu than ence cult gior cani Nay you Scru 10 d that thei Lice thei rabl you Pri tuo fessi Fan ma Di/

W

Sin

'tis

Th

that w, 1 tillI mpe. e our

, &c.

with

posid

that

Hor.

will

iting

Reve.

con-

hich

ve fo

[mall

small Flock into your Protection. That Power lies in the Breaft of you and your pious Society; and who wou'd grudge it to such Holy Men as have no other aim than fetling and fatisfying Men's Confciences, by clearing all the controverted difficulties of Christianity, and rendring Religion fo plain and ealie, that your Enemies cannot find the least doubt or difficulty in it. Nay, like dexterous Artists, you can, with your admirable Morals, remove the justest Scruples; for they give fo pious an Air, to devout a Shade to the greatest Crimes, that they inchant the World, and hide their Deformity, without opposing the Licentiousness of Passions, or destroying their Pleasures or Intention. Thefe admirable Talents, most Holy Confessor, open to your Society the Closets and Hearts of Princes and bring all the lovers of Voluptuousness and Barbarity to be your Confessionaries. Truly, Reverend Father, your Fame is infinite, and the great St. Loyala may be proud of having fo many righteous Disciples. But these Miracles make the World believe him something related to Simon Magus; for without Inchantments 'tis impossible to do so many Prodigies. The Lameneness in his Feet, and Megrim K 2 he's daily troubled with, by being too near a hot Furnace of Brimstone, make him so peevish and out of humour, that he cannot write to any of you; Therefore look up. on me as his Secratary, and not a jot the lesser Saint for having been upon the Stage, all Paris can witness for me, that as foon as I laid afide my Comical Mask and Habit, I cou'd upon occasion look as de. mure and devout as a fresh pardon'd Pe. nitent; fo that the Imployment is neither above my Gravity, nor, I hope, above my Sincerity and Capacity; for I have often had the honour of shewing my Parts before his most Christian Majesty in his Se. raglio, to make him more prolifick and more dispos'd to the mighty work of Propagation. But, Reverend Father, 'tistime now to tell you, as a good Catholick and your Friend, that we are so scandaliz'd here at his Conduct, that we cannot believe he follows your Holy Advice; and were it not for this doubt, and our follicitations, Lucifer had last Summer sent Loyola under the Command of Monsieur Luxembourg to Dragoon you. Zounds! fays he, is the Order that daily fent me fo many Subjects, revolted? 'Tis true, the Rouges Ravillac and Clement have a little difgrac'd difgr what vour tracti fince the p ter? disco little of? tion choic not b upon them than denti of? altog easie meri Reve cred fare

King

the

nicl

ye,

WOL

near n so

not

up-

ige;

oon

and

de-

Pe-

her

my

ten

be-

Se-

and

Pro-

me

and

iz'd

be-

and

fol-

ent

eur

ds!

e fo

the

ttle

ac'd

disgrac'd you; but we do not value now what they fay, for the Wits have espous'd your quarrel, and blind the Eyes of Detraction. Indeed, it is no wonder to us, fince they fing to Apollo's Harp, which had the power to claim the transports of Jupiter? Is there any thing fo charming as the discourse of * Ariste and Eugene, and that little fe ne sai quoi, they speak so wittily Father le of? Who can relift the Art of good Inven- Moine, Jetion in the work of Wit, or an exquisite suits. choice of good Verses? And who would. not be charm'd with all those Penegyricks upon the Ladies? Is not once reading of them a thousand times more diverting, than those profound Writings you so prudently forbid your Penitents the perusal of? Iown, indeed, that this Conduct is not altogether fo Apostolical, but 'tis much easier than to be always puzzling and hammering out Parables? 'Tis certain, most Reverend Father, shou'd you leave the Sacred Writ open to all Readers, it wou'd fare with a thousand good Souls as with King Ahasuerus, who became favourable to the True Religion by reading a True Chronicle. How many blind Wretches think ye, wou'd fee clear? How many Favourites wou'd be hang'd, and Mordecai's rais'd to K 3

Honour? And how many Jesuits would be treated as the Priests of Baal? But you, I'm fure, will take care to hinder that: for truly 'twou'd be contrary to your Ec. clefiaftical Prudence; and 'tis much fafer for you to darken the Divine Lights, and confound by Sophisms, the Sacred Truths of Holy Writ; for what wou'd become of your Church if the Clouds were once dispers'd, since it flourishes by their Favour, and the protection of Ignorance. Nothing can keep up the Credit of a repudiated Cheat, whose Shams are so notorious, and whose Equipage so different from that of the Legimate Spouse of -, that neither he, nor any of his Faithful Servants know or own her, but Ignorance and Falshood. I ask your pardon, most Reverend Father, these Expressions flows naturally from my Subject, that they have escap'd my Sincerity; and I own this is not the Style of a Flatterer. But to attone for my Fault, I will give you some whole some advice, which is, to make Hay while the Sun shines, for you must not expect much fair weather in these doleful Quarters. Those worthy Gentlemen, call'd Confessors, being look'd upon here to be no better than so many Ignes Fatui, that lead their Followers Follo fon to Liquinver what a Pe

measi

Fati

F

not the Sand to and tion a pose and the sand the Father la Chaise's Answer to Harlequin. Followers into Precipicies, for which reason they are not allow'd Ice with their Liquor. This I can assure you to be true inverbo histrionis, therefore since you know what you must trust to, I need not Advise a Person of your prosound Parts what measures to take. Adieu.

Here

Father la Chaise's Answer

TO

HARLEQUIN.

Ho' you conversed with none but impudent Lowse Rimers, yet you are not Ignorant, you little Jack-pudding of the Stage, that all Comparisons are odious, and that there can be none between the Confessor of a Monarch and a Bussoon. But to answer your Letter with the Moderation and Prudence of a Jesuit, I will suppose the first part of it not meant to me, and now to take into consideration the essential Points in it. Have we not proscrib'd Heresie by sound of Trumpet? and not-

d be you, hat; r Ec-

fafer and

uths ne of once

our,

iated

and at of that

Serance

most w so

have is is

tone

nolehile

ped uar-

Con-

betheir

wers

withstanding all the pretty Books we have publish'd, and the cajoling tricks we have us'd, is not Herefie still the same? But, to be ferious, Harlequin, good Roman Catho. licks must follow no other Lights than those of Tradition; and they, who are fo In. credulous and Obstinate as not to believe it, must have their Eyes open'd with the Sword.'Twou'd be a fine Enterprise, wou'd it not, and very profitable to the Church to condemn Images, Candles, Holy-water; Beads, Scapularies, Relicks, with an hundred others, which are fo many Golden Mines, and offer only to Bigots the flovenly Equipage of Cal. vin's Reformation : Devotion merely Spiritualis too flat and infipid; therefore we must set it off with Jubilies, Pilgrimages, Processions, Drums, Trumpets, Crosses, Banners, and all the Mountebank Tricks, and noble Knick knacks of St. Germans Fair. If Idid nct know that jesting was an habitual Sin in you, I wou'd never pardon you; for the Society of Jesus does not teach us to forgive Injuries. Tell St. Lovola, the first of us that shall be sent Post to mighty Lucifer, to desire his Assistance in those important Affairs our great Monarch has undertaken by his Instigation, and which are too tedious now to relate, shall put into his Port fters Burn of t mor > ind a M ness Wi

in i

o his del

in.

lave

lave

t, to atho.

hose In.

ieve

the ou'd

h to hers, offer Cal-

pirinust

Pro-

ners.

oble did

Sin

for

is to ft of uci-

por-

der-

too

o his

Port.

Port-mantle some Ice to refresh him, Plaisters for his Megrim, and Ointment for his Burns. Tell him also that the Memory of the glorious Prophet Mahomet is not more respected than his, and that I am

His most zealous and very humble Servant,

La Chaise.

The Duke of ALVA

TO THE

Clergy of France.

Believe, worthy Gentlemen, you are very well fatisfied that I am damn'd, —and indeed there was little likelihood that fuch a Monster as my self should enjoy Happiness, after having committed so much Wickedness, and taken so much Pleasure in it. I took a fancy to acts of Cruelty from my very Cradle, and with great Fidelity serv'd Philip the Second; the celebrated brated Apostle of the Gentiles never made fo many miserable Wretches, when he was a violent Zealot of the Law. I, like him, made use of Chains, Racks, Fire, and all that an ingenious Fury cou'd imagine most tormenting; but it was never any part of my Destiny to be converted at last like Thus I went on in my Iniquities, and became the strongest Brute that Bigotry ever debauch'd, so that at my first arrivel to Hell, there was never a Devil of the whole pack but fell a trembling, tho he had been never fo much accustom. ed to fuch Company before. But, Gen. tlemen, why are not you become wife by my Example: For you must not flat. ter your selves that the difference of our Professions makes any in our Crimes? you are Warriours when you please; for the Monastick Soldiery follow'd the Duke of Mayenne's Standard during the League, crown'd themselves with immortal shame at the barbarous Triumph of St. Bartholomen; and shoulder'd the Musket after they had preach'd those bloody Sermons, which made Christians treat their fellow Creatures like Beafts of Prey. I confess, I never troubled my head about scruples of Conscience, and if I have not obey'd that Article

Ar kill as fect obe Bre ted my gav rea us'o

nat

ple

to I thir racl faw Ma

beforthel opp and

prod Eye

dee as a try ide

Vas

im,

all

lost

art

ike

les,

Bi-

irst

vil

ng,

men-

rife

at-

our

ou

the

of

ue;

me

ho-

fter

ns,

OW

s, I

s of

hat

icle

Article of the Decalogue, Thou shalt not kill. I never roar'd out with a wide mouth, as the Priests of the Roman Church, Persecute, Imprison, Kill, Destroy, force them to obey. My Fury came only from your Brethren who had fo throughly corrupted me, that I thought Heaven wou'd be my reward, if I Butcher'd all they were pleas'd to stigmatize with Heresie. gave a loofe to my Passions, as you may read in History, where, I think, they have us'd me but too kindly. To seduce Men of weak understandings is no extraordinary matter; but that Princes, who ought to have a competent knowledge of every thing, shou'd be cheated by you, is a Miracle to me. No Age of the World ever faw a greater Example of it, than in my Master Philip, whose natural sloth, and befotted Bigotry gave so fair a Field to these Ecclesiastical Impostors, so fair an opportunity to manage him as they pleas'd; and his * Fathers Ashes are a sufficient * Charles proof of it. Instead of setting before his the Vth. Eyes the Examples of that invincible Prince, these sanctified Villains only plung'd him deeper in Superstition and Idolatry. And as a domineering lazy Lord of a Country Village will never go out of his own Parish, Parish, so he never travell'd farther than from Madrid to the Escurial. His Wife, Father, Son and Brother felt the Effects of their barbarous Doctrine: And to leave behind him a pious Idea of his Soul when he was dying, he ordered his Crown and Coffin to be fet before him. This was Hypocrifie with a witness; but that is no crime in a Zealot. You'll tell me, per. haps, I direct my discourse to improper Persons, who know not the History of Philip of Austria, Ignorance being common enough in those of your Fraternity; Yet, let me tell you, I am not mistaken; for the DiabolicalSpirit that now poffesses you, is the very same that influenc'd the Priests of my time; and I may fafely affirm that France is the Theater of Cruelty and Iniquity. Your Monarch, who is much fuch another Saint as my Master, spares the poor Protestants Lives, for no other reafon, but to make, by his inhumane Torments, Death more desirable to them, These and a Thousand more unjust Actions does he commit to fatiate your hellish Vanity, which wou'd for ever domineer in the City built on Seven Mountains. To this you'll answer, What doth it signifie if we make him prosecute the ProteProt no F incre Relig certa

F

you Here of al num Saint duce ther

Pow Chu chea

The Answer of the Clergy of France, &c. 141 Protestants, murder their Kings, and keep no Faith, or Treaties with them, fince it increases our Power and propagates our Religion? But, Gentlemen, when you come to be where I am, you will, I'm certain, fing to another Tune.

han

life,

tsof

ave oul.

own

Was s no

per.

oper

of

mon Yet, the

, is iefts

that Ini-

uch

the

rea.

Tor

iem.

ijust

our

do.

oun-

loth

the

ote.

THE

ANSWER

Of the Clergy of France to the Duke of ALVA.

TAd you made as fincere a Confession in the days of yore as you do now, you might, for your Zeal in perfecuting Heresie, have obtain'd an ample Absolution of all your fins, tho they had been never fo numerous and black, and been a glorious Saint in the Roman Calender; which induces us to beleive your Zeal, tended rather towards the Propagation of your own Power and Interest, than that of the Church: Thus in cheating us, you likewise cheated your self: and we are not forry at your Calamities. But does it become you, who once fill'd Flanders and Spain with Horror, to reproach the Apostolick Legions with the noble effects of their Fer. vency? And was it not absolutely neces. fary, after we had once Preach'd the De. struction of the Protestants; that Lewis the Great, to compleat his Glory, and our Satisfaction, should send his Holy Troops to Burn, Ravish, and Pillage at Discretion; that he might say with an Em. perour of Rome, whom he very much resembles, Let them hate so they fear me, Where, Sir, do you find us commanded to keep Faith with Hereticks, or fuffer their Princes to live when 'tis against our Interest? Does not the Roman Church dispense with these little Peccadillos, and are not those who wear her Cloth, and eather Bread, oblig'd to obey her Precepts? What pleafes us most is to hear a whining Recreant, as thou art, fing Peccavi at this time of day, and pretend to remorfe of Confci-For your Comfort, you may desire Cerberus, if you please, to joyn in the Confort with you; but rest assured, that if you had three Mouths like that triple headed Cur, your Barking would be all in vain.

Philip

of H

your

for i mak

find

rous

reign

as yo

done

of E

and

those

heha

ly pe

his -

crific

Pru

her

ever

PHILIP of Austria

me' bain lick Fer.

ecel. De.

emis ! and Holy

e at

Em.

n re-

me:

nded

their

Inte-

ence

e not read,

plea-

eant,

ne of onsci-

desire

n the

, that

riple.

be all

Philip

TO THE

DAUPHIN.

THat do you mean, worthy Kinfman, by pretending to be a Man of Honour? Does it become a Person of your Birth? Do you find any Precedent for it in your Family? Did your Father make himself formidable by it? Or do you find in Hiftory that any merciful or generous Prince made himself so Great, or reign'd so prosperously for almost 60 Years, as your debauch'd and perjur'd Father has done: who is now the Terror and Scourge of Europe, and will be its Tyrant if Treachery and Gold can prevail? But do ye think those things to be Crimes in Sovereigns? If hehas indulg'd his Luft, does he not feverely persecute Heresie? And besides does not his & Mistress constantly pray and offer Sa- + Madam crifice? You know she's old enough to be Mainte-Prudent; and lives upon the gravity of her Age, fince she stretches her Devotion even to the Stage; by the same token she will

Philip of Austria to the Dauphin. 144

* Scaron. will fuffer none of her * Husband's divert. ing Farces to be acted there any more, Thank Heaven therefore for fending you

Maintenon was bornin CO.

* Madam that bountiful Patroness from the * New world, who is the Comfort and Prefervation of your Father and his Kingdoms; and Merteni- tho your Mother was my near Relation, yet am i not asham'd to see so pure and zea. lous a Saint supply her Place in the Royal Bed. I wonder she has not yet prevail'd with you to have more regard for the Interest of the Roman Church: To promote the Grandeur wherof I destroy'd many Thou. fands of its Enemies by the Ministry of the Duke of Alva, and ordered my Father's Bones to be dug out of the Ground and burnt for having tolerated Luther's Herefie. Otherwise I should never have concern'd my felf much about it, supposing nonebut Flegmatic Coxcombs wou'd espouse a Church which does not keep open House all the year round, and won't pardon the greatest Crimes for Money. You know, I don't doubt, what my jealousie cost my

* Dem * Son and * Wife, and how I treated the Carlos: * Conqueror at Lebanto; To balance that * Eliza. account with Heaven, Igave largely to the beth of France. Priests, built Monasteries, went to Proses. Dom sions, was loaded like a Mule with Beads John of ana Austria.

Sa en tru my dei tall of fing tion and doe

Hu glor the Sain

we c pero Prie Wal

and! and us h Torr

not t man

fecti

rert-

ore,

you Vew

rva-

and

yet,

zeaoval

ail'd

In-

the nou-

v of her's

and

esie.

rn'd

but

urch

the

reatw, I

t my

the

that

o the

rosef-Beads and

and Relicts, and by this means passed for a Saint. And this I think may properly enough be call'd a good Religion. true, I never faw any Engagement but in my Closet, or at a distance like your prudent Father. What then, does the World talk less of me, or him for that? The end of my Life, I must confess, was something fingular; for the Worms ferv'd an Execution upon my Carkass before the time: and fo we hear they do his. But what does that fignifie, fo a Man fatisfies his own Humour? Be not infatuated then with vain glory; for if they, who are exempt from the Flames of Hell, boast of having Angels, Saints and Matyrs for their Companions; we can brag of having Popes, Cardinals, Emperours, Kings, Queens, Jesuits, Monks and Priests in abundance. I must own our Walks have not the charming Fountains and Shades of * Versailles and the * Escurial; Royal Houand that it is always as hot weather with fes of us here, as with the good Folks under the France Torrid Zone: But fuch a trifle as this ought not to make you fhun the Company of fo many choice Friends as have an entire affection for you.

The

The Dauphin's

ANSWER

TO

PHILIP of Austria,

TEither the Examples you have quoted, nor those which are daily before my Eyes have power enough to pervert me, I have a veneration for Virtue, which you forfooth, call the quality of a Coxcomb. and an abhorrence for all that bears the stamp of Vice, the' you have illustrated it with the prosperous and glorious Reign of the French Monarch. But were the first unknown to me, I wou'd not look for it in your Life, fince, according to your best Friends, it is a thing you ne. ver practis'd. As Sons have no authority to condemn the Conduct of their Fathers, fo I will not prefume to examine into that of Lewis the 14th. But tell me, I beseech you, what advantages you reap'd from fro my Sai bo bul felt to wh Bat nar def by in t con mo ind you and be, nov wea tho

nio

wir

But

tisfa

chil

eve

from your Bigotry and Superstition? For my part, had I some of the Ashes of every Saint in the Roman Calender in my Snuffbox, and carried Beads as big as Cannonbullets about me, I should not believe my felf either a better Christian, or less exposid But to what purpose did you, to danger. who never expos'd your Royal Person in Battle, arm your felf with all those imaginary Preservatives? Or can you say they defended you from being devour'd alive by Millions of Vermin that punish'd you in this Life, for the Iniquities you daily committed; and were only the prelude to more terrible Punishment. Let not my indifference for the Church of Rome break your rest; I have no Power at present; and I can't tell what my Sentiments wou'd be, had I a Crown on my Head. But it now cruelly troubles me to fee France fo weakned by the dispersion of so many thousand innocent People? and did my opinion fignifie any more in our Councils than wind, I wou'd advise the recalling of 'em. But the Nymph you see with so much satisfaction supply the place of your Grandchild, and who has more Power now than ever, is there as absolute as a Dictator. The

oted,

e my

me;

you omb;

sthe

rated

eign

the

look

ig to ne.

ority

thers,

into ne, I

eap'd

from

The French Monarchy, which has subsisted for so many Ages, might be still supported without her; She being good for nothing that I know of, but to instruct Youth in the nicest ways of debauchery: Therefore I cou'd wish the King wou'd transport her to her native Soil, and make her Governness of the American Monkies; a fitter imployment for her than that she usurps over our Princesses. To deal plainly with you, I have no ambition to see your Majesty, be. ing fatisfied with knowing you from pub. lick Report; fo will carefully avoid com. ing near your Torrid Zone, if 'tis possible for a Man to be any time a King of France without it.

JUVE.

CI

ough

had a what

your :

preffi

Char

butio

certai Art o Maste

fort of it were

Meta there Virgi nobl unde fatig

FUVENAL TO BOILEAU.

fled rted

ing in fore her

ern-

im-

ver

ou,

be.

ub.

om.

ance

VE-

Ince we don't dispatch Courtiers every day from the Kingdom of Pluto, you ought not to be furprised, that I have not had an opportunity till now of telling you what flicks in my Stomach. I thought your first Satyrs very admirable, your Expressions just, and labouoriusly turn'd, yet Charming and Natural. Were the diffribution of Rewards in my Power, I should certainly give you fomething for your Art of Poetry: But, for your Lutrin, that Master-piece of your Wit, that highest effort of your Imagination, I fee nothing in it worthy of you, but the Versification. Every one owns you can Write, nay, your very Enemies allow it; But you know a Metamorphofis requires an entire change; therefore, fince you refolve to Imitate Virgil, you should have made choice of noble Heroes. He that travested the Aneis understood it better than you, and did not fatigue himself so much; and as he was a L 3 Man Man of clear and good fence has judiciously

dly,

s, ado

ach b hose (

or the

?tis

Fill y

y cree

nteres

nd th

ualD

een a

ecaus

1 45 Y

ule y ay, yo

ong'd

wo, v

end th

t.Am

hy C

ernin alfe;a

ment

ou ri

whi

ne wa

dinar

godly, remark'dthat his Queen disguis'd like a Cour. try Wench, is infinitely beyond your Clock. makers Wife dress'd like an Empress. But let us leave this Subject which now 'tis too late to amend, fince what is done cannot be undone. What did you mean, you I fay, who have been accus'd of stealingmy Lines, and who, to deal honesHy with you, have often follow'd the same Road I have trac'd what did you mean, I fay, by reflecting on Particulars in your Satyr against Women Did I ever fet you that Example? Is not my Sixth Satyr against the Sex in general; and when I look back as far as the Reigns of Sa. turn and Rheafor * Modesty, do I pretent the least shadow of it is lest upon Earth? Unthinking Fool! those different Characters you have drawn will make you so many Particular Enemies; and, I question, if the Patroness you have chosen can secure you from their Claws. If an effected Zeal inspires you with so much Venerationsor a Saint of the Italian fashion, in truth, you ought to have burnt your Incense so privately, that the Smoke might not have of fended others. How can the Bard that boalts of eating no Flesh in Lent, that would frankly discipline himself in the face of the

* Credo pu dicitam Saturno Rege moratam. ully

our.

lock.

But

t00

nnot

fay,

ines,

nave

ac'd!

gon

n en!

t my

and

f Sa

tend rth?

ara-

man, if

Cure

Zeal

1 for

you

pri-

e of

oafts

ou'd

fthe

odly, dly, like one of the * Militia of St. Fran. * Monks. , adore a Golden Cow, and adorn an Idol ch blast of Wind can overthrow, with nose Garlands, which shou'd be preserv'd or the Statues of the greatest Heroes! She 'tis true, very fingular in her kind: But ill you stain your name of Illustrious Poet, v creeping before a walking Mummy of er superannuated Gallantry ? Your fordid nterest has made you a Traytor to Satyr; nd thereby you occasion here daily contiual Divisions & Chagelian &St. Amant have cient Poets. een at Cuts with * Molier and Cornielle, *Two Moecause you have not treated them so civil-dern Poets, 135 your + Organde. The two first ridi-+ Madam ule your fordid covetous humour, and Maintenay, you learnt that baseness while you beong'd to the Registers Office. The other wo, who were perhaps of your Trade, deend the honour of your Extraction. But t. Amant, who will never forget the unwor- A French hy Character you have given him, con-Boileau erning his Poverty, which he swears is makes free alse; and submitting his Verses to the judg-first Satyr, ment of unprejudic'd Persons, for which and elseou ridicule him, faid, in a haughty tone, where. which fet us all a laughing) that when he was a Gentleman of the Chamber in Orinary to the Queen of Poland, and Am-L4 baffador bassador Extraordinary at the Coronation of the Queen of Sweeden, he kept several Footmen of better Quality than your felf. Chapelain, who cannot fay fo much for himself, is content with singing the terrible Valour of the Duke de Nevers Lackeys, who kept time with their Cudgels on your Shoulders. We were forc'd to call for a Bottle to appeale this War; and St. Amant, taking the Glass in his Hand, fwore by his Maker, he had rather you had call'd him Drunkard than Fool, tho' he drinks very moderately in this Place, where 'tis no great Scandal to be Thirfty. Be not concern'd at this Paragraph, because the rest of my Letter sufficiently testifies the Esteem I have for you, and my concern for your Welfare: Therefore to preserve both, renounce your fordid way of Praising Vice, and imploy your happy Talent in teaching Good Manners, and correcting the Bad, which will bean Employment worthy of your great Genius; and is the only way to recommend you to the good Opinion of the Learned Ancients.

BOILEAVS

B

Illust

first read

ver c

Satyr

your him

Afte

vour

ftrac

resol

lice,

Rom

foul

and

roug

drus

BOILEAU's Answer to FUVENAL.

Illustrious Ghost,

ion

eral felf.

rri.

eys,

on

call

St.

ind,

you

tho'

ace,

fty.

be-

atly

and

fore

did

OUT

iers,

ean

eni-

end

rned

Us

Message from the muses never fill'd me with fo much Transport as the first fight of your Letter; but I had not read fix Lines before I wish'd you had ne-To praise my ver done me that honour. Satyrs, and fall foul upon my Lutrin, which made me fweat more drops of water, than your drunkard St. Amant (fince I must call him fo) ever drank of Wine, is no Favour. After many laborious and fruitless Endeavours, finding, to my great grief and distraction, I could match you in Wit, I resolv'd, if possible, to out-do you in Malice, which made me take the liberty of Romancing a little on St. Amant, falling foul upon Peoples Characters and Manners, and treating feveral fcurvy Poets more roughly, than you did the Thefeis of Codrus, when you fang, [reponam ? Semper ego auditortantum? Nunquam ne Vexatus toties rauci Theseide Codri?

Thus

Boileau's Answer to Juvenal.

Thus suffering the Gall of my Heart to flow through the Chanel of my Pen, I procur'd my self Enemies in abundance, and since I must confess all to you, some stripes with a Bull's Pizzle, which was a most terrible mortification to my Shoulders, but I bore all this with the patience of a Philosopher, as will appear by the following Lines.

Let Codrus, that nauseous pretender to Wit, Condemn all my Works before Courtier and Cit, I bear all with Patience, whatever he says, Aud value as little his Scandal as Praise. Vain-Glory no longer my Genious does fire. Tis interest alone tunes the Strings of my Lire. Integrity's naught but a plausible Sham, For Money I Praise, and for Money I Damn. Old Politic Bards for Fame have no itching, The Apollo I court is the steam of a Kitchin.

The four first Lines, I must own, are something against the Grain, and the natural Inclination I have to Rail and be thought an excellent Poet gives my Tongue the Lye; but the four last, which shew more Prudence than Wit, reconcile that matter. 'Tis certainly, Illustrious Bard, more difficult to please the World now than thai tyr, ame me, den fie n alfo. IWI dark that the alw: hear Grif dren fion : Prefe fuffic conf thin Verf latio ly ap fome be c Hear befo

Vou

notl

alrea

0

e,

10

a

11-ce

he

it.

are

na•

be gue

lew

hat

ard,

NOI

han

than it was in your time; for if I write Satyr, I'm beaten for it; if I praise, I'm call'd amercenary Flatterer; which so disheartens me, that I address my felf now to my Gardeneronly, and don't doubt but some busie nice Critick, will be censuring this Poem alfo. Not being in the best humour, when I writ it, perhaps it may appear fomething dark and abstruse; but I can easily excuse that, by maintaining that 'tis impossible for the best Authorin the World to keep up always to the same strain. Have you ever heard of the Tales of the Peau-d' Asue & Grisedilis? If Proserpina had any little Children, 'twoud' be a most agreeable diverfion for them, and I wou'd fend it 'em for a Present. Tho that Authorfurnishes youwith sufficient matter to laugh at me, yet I must confeshe hasfound the Art of making something of a Trifle. Every one here learns his Verses by heart, and in spight of my Translation of Longinus, which makes it so plainly appear, I understand Greek, and know fomething of Poetry, my Book begins to be despis'd. Wou'd it not break a Man's Heart to see such impertinent Stuff prefer'd before so many sublime Pieces? But, as for your Glory, that will eternally subsist, and nothing can destroy it, since time has not already done it. DIANA * Mistrifs to King Henry the
2d. of France.

* Mistris *DIANA of Poictiers

TO

Madam Maintenon.

Ince the Spirit of Curiofity possesses us here in this World no less than it did in yours, 'tis an infinite trouble for those Persons, Madam, who were acquainted with every thing while they liv'd, not to know all that passes after their Death; and of this you will one day make an Experi-I am not desirous to know, Ma. dam, what you have done to fucceed the greatest Beauties of the Earth in the affe. ation of an old libidinous Monarch, nor what Charms you make use of to secure the Possession of his Heart, at an Age you cannot please without a Miracle. My Planet, dear Madam, has rendred me some. what knowing in these Affairs, for Henry the 2d was my Gallant as long as he liv'd; and tho'Iwas a little handsomer than you, I was not, I think, much younger. I must tell you, I cannot comprehend what procures you those loud Commendations and Applauses which reach even to our Ears; and and five wer Cha they I ma the r foun ron 1 of P ded, narch Boile if I ha thing for al prais' my o

Estant my Lo ding-d was l and t Beaut the C little the o Rime you i

Diana of Poictiers to Madam Maintenon. 157 and are by their noise most horribly offen. The advantages of my Birth five to us. were great; and it is well known my Charms so captivated Francisthe First, that they redeem'd my Father from the Gallows. I married a very confiderable Man, and the name of Breze Reneschal of Normandy, founds somewhat better than that of Scaron the Queens Ballad-maker. The House of Poictiers too, from which I was descended, may furely take place of those Monarchs from whom that mercenary Fellow Boileau derives your extraction; and laftly. if I had a few particular Enemies, I did nothing to make my felf generally odious. Yet for all this, I was neither canoniz'd nor prais'd, but openly laugh'd at, and by one of my own Profession, I mean, the Dutchess of Estampe, who was Mistriss to the Father of my Lover, and faid she was born on my Wedding-day. Blundring imprudent Bayard was banish'd for speaking too freely of me; and tho' it was faid, that for me alone Beauty had the Privilege not to grow old, the Compliment was so forc'd, that I was little the better for it. Ragged Marot was the only Poet that ever pretended to couple Rimes in my Praise, and I will appeal to you if he did not deserve to go naked.

us

lid

ofe

ted

to

and eri-

Mathe

Iffe-

nor

ure

you

My

melenry

v'd;

you,

But

what

tions

Ears;

and

I dare not (wer't to fave my ransome) Affirm your Ladyship is handsome; Nor without telling monstrous Lies, Defend the lightning of your Eyes: For, Madam, to declare the Truth. You've neither Face, nor Shape, nor Youth Howe'er, all Flattery apart (Art. You've play'd your Cards with wond'rous When Young, no Lover faw your Charms Or prest you in his eager Arms: But Triumphs your Old Age attend, And you begin where others end.

What think you, Madam, of this; isi not rather Satyr than Praise? Shou'd the Bard, that sings your Virtues from the top of Parnassus down to the Market-place, & as fincere, how wou'd you reward him? Tho' I know he has more Prudence, yet I cannot believe he compares you to He len for Beauty, to Hebe for Youth, for Chi stity to Lucretia, for Courage to Clella and for Wisdom to Minervia, as common report fays; because, were it true, it is not to be suppos'd you wou'd have put a poor deform'd Poet in possession of fuch mighty Treasures; for, were to yo then

D there ticin ces C your Did Thro drav upor first, parch prefe Wea man unch that ed w I refl circu ftoni was favou Vesta (2) fudde

little

(3)

gerou Tever Diana of Poictiers to Madam Maintenon. 159

n

outh

(An, rous

arms,

isit

d the ne top

him!

e, yet

o He r Cha-

then

there not Scepters and Crowns then inticing? Were not then the Eyes of Princes open? Did ye choose an Author for your Love, out of Caprice, or Despare? Did you take his Wicket-Chair for a Throne ? Or did the Love of Philosophy draw you in? Had the latter wrought upon you, you wou'd not have been the first, I must confess; for the famous Hirparchia, Handsome, Young and Rich, prefer'd poor crooked Crates before the Wealthiest and most Beautiful Gentleman of Greece. I am unwilling to judge uncharitably, but I cannot be perswaded that fuch an Alliance cou'd be contracted without fome preffing necessity. When I reflect on the beginning, increase and circumstances of your Fortune, I am astonish'd! for neither your Hair which e, be was Gray when you began to grow in favour, nor the Remembrance of (1) a (1) Madam Vestal once adorn'd, nor the Idea of a la val (2) Blooming Beauty, whom cruel Death (2) Madam Clelia fuddenly fnatch'd away by the help of a de Foncom little Poison; nor the Presence of a (3) Madam true, (3) Rival, by so much the more dan-de Monl have gerous, because she had triumph'd over tespan.

Session several other, cou'd prove any obstacles were to your Prosperity. The Beautiful Lady that 160 Diana of Poictiers to Madam Maintenon.

that brought you out of your mean oh scurity, and in whose Service you thought your felf happy, is now content if you let her enjoy the least shew of her former Greatness. In this Chaos I lose my self, Madam; but if you will bring me out of my Confusion, I faithfully promise to give you an exact account of all that concerns me, when I shall have the Plea. fure of Embracing you. I exceedingly commend your prudent Conduct; for those young Plants you cultivate in a

* The Nuns * terrestrial Paradise, will one day proof st. Cyr. duce Flowers to Crown you; and the Zeal you profess for a Religion which be gan to act furiously in my time, must stop the Mouths of the nicest Bigots, and make the Tribunal of Confession favourable to you; tho' perhaps, dear Madam, it may make that of Minos a little more severe.

....

Madam

anfw

Birth Since

Love

that

Life.

prais'

tient Powe

France Son 1 Iwas favou

fpring

my F oblig' ther

Madam MAINTENON's

ANSWER

DIANA of POICTIERS.

Muriofity, Madam, being the Character of the Great and Busie, I will answer you according to your Merit and Birth, tho' you have not treated me fo. Since you know what Charms a Lover when Youth is gone, I'll dismiss that Point to come to the Hiftory of my Life, and the Virtuous Actions I am prais'd for. I know you are of an Antient Family, that you Married a Man of Power and Riches; and that you were Francis the First's Bedsellow, before his Son fell in Love with you. As for me, I was born in the * New World, under a * West. favourable Constellation; and the Off- Indies. spring of a Goaler's Daughter, with whom my Father, tho' of Royal Blood, was oblig'd, either through Love, or rather Necessity, to cohabit. Fortune, M which

1adam

n.

1 06.

ught

you rmer felf,

at of e to that Plea.

ingly for

in a

pro-

d the

ch be. t stop

and vour.

adam,

more

which never yet forfook me, first de. priv'd me of my Beggarly Relations, with. out leaving me wherewithal to cover my Nakedness, and then brought me into Europe, where I found a great many Lovers and few Husbands. Poor de. form'd Scarron at last offer'd me his Hand. I had my Reasons for accepting him, and his Infirmities did not hinder me from receiving that Title which was conve. nient for one in my circumstances. In short, I lost him without much concern and liv'd fo prudently during my-Widon. hood, that Madam Montespan took me out of my Cell, to bring me into the In. trigues of the Court. Every one knows I drove my generous Patroness from the Royal Bed; and that fince my being in favour, I have been profusely liberal to all my Idolators. Our Poets, who do not resemble Marot, value not Honour, provided they have good Pensions, which I generously bestow on them, and they repay me in Panegyricks; by which means I am Handsom, Young, Chast, Virtuous, Wise, and of as Noble Blood as Alexander Tho' I was a Protestant, the Great. the Church is not so foolish as to enquire into my Religion; Thus out of a Principle real form

y

prep

favo

Hifto Folly Smile flippe ficult

his 1

le.

th.

rer

in-

ny

de-

d.

nd

om

ve.

In

rn,

ow-

out In-

the

in

not oro-

hI

re-

ous,

nder

ant,

uire

Principle

iple of Graitude, and to fix Her in my Interest, I have fill'd the Heart of our Monarch, with the godly Zeal of Persecution. I have also founded a stately *Edisice, where I breed up a great many * st. Cyr. pretty young Virgins, who no doubt on't will prove as Modest and Discreet as their Founder; and I play so well the part of a Queen, that the World thinks me so in reality. These sew hints may give you some light into my History, Madam; therefore to reward my sincerity, if you find Minos dispos'd to use me severely; prepare him, I beseech you, to be more favourable.

* HUGH SPENCER the *The Miyounger, to all the Favourites and nion of Ministers whom it may concern, the 2 d.

Let T all those that are ambitious of the Title of Favourite, learn by the History of my Life, how dangerous a Folly it is to monopolize their Prince's Smiles. A Man climbs to the top of this slippery Ascent through a Thousand difficulties, and if he is not moderate in his Prosperity (which few are) he often falls with a more precipitated Shame, into Difgrace. I acquir'd, or rather usurp'd the Favour of Edward the Second, in whose Breast the proud "Gaveston had before me licentiously revell'd. To effect this, my Father lent me his helping Hand; but without growing Wifer by the Ex. amples of others, the Vanity of my Am. bition made me follow that wandring Star, call'd Fortune. I had no fooner posses'd my self of the King's Ear, butl crept into the Secrets of his Heart, and infected it with the blackest Venom of mine; acting the part of a felf-interes'd, not an Honest Minister. As I valued not the Glory of his Reign, or Ease of his People, provided I govern'd him and render'd my felf Mafter of his Treafures; fo did I never move him to relieve the Miferable, or reward the Faithful and Deterving; but endeavour'd to blacken the Merit of their greatest Actions, and so settl'd the first Motions of his Liberality, with Reasons of fordid interest. If any Places of Trust were to be fill'd, covering my Treachery still with the Vail of Zeal and Love for my Country, I recommended only fuch as were devoted to my Service; pretending ill manage.

man not Nati of y reali I had cafter Perío cord with the I retir'd I gov ury to hi his d Relig of the of F ness Engla last, t

retur

the L

be L

Trun

ford.

were

at Lo

to b'd

ofe

re

lis,

d;

X.

m.

ng

ler

tI

nd

of

d,

ed

of

im

ea-

re-

th-

to

A-

ons

did

to vith

un•

rere

Ili

age.

management in every thing that went not through my Hands; and that the Nation was betray'd, whilft I, like fome of you now, was felling it, and was in reality the worst Enemy it had. After I had facrific'd the Great Duke of Lancaster to my Revenge, and a Hundred Persons of Quality besides, I sow'd Discord in the Royal Family. The Queen, with the Prince of Wales her Son, and the Earl of Kent, the Kings Brother, retird into France; During which time I govern'd at my Ease, wallow'd in Luxury and Riches, and had interest enough to hinder Charles the Fair from protecting his Sifter. The Pope, who was of my Religion, storm'd like a true Father Son of the Church, and fo frighted the King of France, that in spite of their nearness of blood, he hunted the Queen of England out of his Dominions. But at last, the King being reconcil'd, the Queen returns; I was taken Prisoner, and by the Laws of the Kingdom, Sentenc'd to be Drawn on a Sledge, at Sound of Trumpet, through the Streets of Hereford. The Circumstances of my Death were infamous; my Head was expos'd at London, my Bowels, Heart, and some M 3 other other parts of my Body burn'd, my Car. cass abandon'd to the Crows, in four parts of the Kingdom; the justest Re. ward a Villain who had almost destroy'd both King and Country, cou'd exped This is, Gentlemen Favourites and Ministers, a Picture you ought all to have in your Closets, to keep you from resem. bling it. When in Favour, banish not Justice, Clemency and Generosity, from the Thrones of your Master; and to avoid a just Hatred, and make Men of Virtue your Friends, fludy the Publick Interest. Turn over old Histories, and you'll find there is scarce one, or few of us got peace. ably to the Grave, but either Starv'dor Rotted, or Immortaliz'd a Gibbet. Not one Eye ever wept for our fufferings. Pity it felf rejoyced: Thus Deteffed on Earth, and Curs'd by Heaven, our last refuge is to become the Prey of Devils. Consider well, Gentlemen, and arm your felves against all those vicious Passions, which will certainly undo you, if you listen to them as I did. Therefore in the flippery Paths of a Court; take Prudence and Justice for your Supporters.

THE

Chie

wer

acco

tell

beli

fteer

the

rou

ftin

I wi

but

eve

fer

who

Foll

THE

Car. four

Re-

oy'd pect. Iini.

ve in fem.

not

rom void

rtue rest.

find

ace-

d or

Not

ngs;

on

laft

vils.

our

ons,

you

the nce

HE

ANSWER

OFTHE

Chief Minister of the King of Ivetor.

TO

HUGH SPENCER.

HE Picture you have drawn of your Life and Death, shews you were notoriously Wicked, and rewarded according to your Deferts. But let me tell you, Sir, that 'tis a great Mistake to believe a Minister cannot manage or fleer his Prince without abusing Him and the Publick. Because you were the Horrour of your Age, is it an inevitable Destiny for other Favourites to be so too? I will not here make my own Panegyrick, but leave that care to Posterity: However, I will boldly maintain, that to fuffer a Master to divide his Benevolence, when one can secure it all to ones felf, is Folly and Stupidity: A Prudent Man M 4 knows knows how to make a right Use of his Master's Weakness, and if he finds him inclin'd now and then to gratifie eminent Services, he will not seem muchaverse to it, provided still he loses nothing by the Bargain: But if his Prince is of a Covetous Temper, Charity, which al. ways begins at home, then bids him thut up his Exchequer, and referve to himfelf the fole Priviledge of opening it at lei-'Tis likewise no ill step in our fure. Politicks to cry down those Actions, which might otherwise by their weight out-value ours; upon fuch Occasions, to testifie the least Zeal, Fidelity, and Care, will be thought Meritorious. The the Escutcheons we leave our Children, have fome Blots in them, what fignifies that, provided we leave them Rich and Noble Titles, which will procure them Honour, and all forts of Pleafures in this World, and a Saints Place hereafter, in that unerring Volume of the Roman Almanack.

JULIA

at p fron

mig

show

fo 1

blac

Dea

For

ano

den

Dai

Pri

He

jur Or

yo Le Yo

FULIA,

C.

his him

emich a.

hing of a

al. thut !

nself

lei-

Our

ions, ight

s, to

are,

the

have

that,

loble

lour,

orld,

rring

OLIA

TO THE

* Princess of GONTI.

Syou may wonder, Madam, that I French who liv'd fo many Ages ago, and at present am so many thousand Leagues from you, should esteem and love you; might I wonder too, in my Turn, if you should have a good Opinion of me, after fo many Historians have Conspired to blacken my Reputation. But there are, Dear Sister, such Circumstances in our Fortunes, as ought to make us Love one another, and hold a Friendly Correspondence; fince you are like me, the Daughter of a Beautiful, Treacherous Prince, who drags good Fortune at his Heels; and of a Mother, who renounced the World, before it did her the Injury of renouncing her. I was once the Ornament of the Court of Augustus, and you now shine like a Star, in that of Lewis the 14th. I was Married very Young to Marcellus, the hopes of the Romans; and almost in your Infancy, you were given to the most amiable Man that ever was of the Bourbons: I lost the Son of Octavia some Months after our Marriage, and your Forehead was bound with the Fatal Sable, before Hymen's Garlands were in the least wither'd, You are Handsom, I was not Ugly; you occasion Jealousy, and I suffer'd the sharp. est Darts of Destruction: I had Lovers beyond Number; And who is able to reckon Tours? They have not perhaps been so favourably receiv'd, and I believe the Air, and want of Opportunity' not our Inclinations, to be the Caufe for you never yet dispis'd those Pleasures I daily Enjoy'd and Sigh'd after; and tho', by the Death of Agrippa, I came under the Tyranny of Tyberius, I purfu'd my Inclinations to the last. Widows, of your Age, generally enter the Life again: But, Princess, the Counsel I have to give you, is, to referve to your self the Liberty of your Choice, There are so many Tiberius's where you are, that one may easily fall to your Share; and after that, nothing but Banishment will be wanting to finish the Comparison. A very (*) malignant Planet

Madam Maintenon,

like :

Peop

at and

that

hav

retu

my

ons.

to 1

cost

er's

thin

little

fure

way

Digi

Prin

I car

pude

Ovia

in P

my a

Char

was

Love

brate

na, a

you

hat

Son

far-

und

ien's

er'd.

you

arp-

vers to aps be-

nity'

ause

and

came purdons,

Lift

fel I

re to hoice.

you !

Your

h the

lanet

at

Ba-

at present, Commands your Destiny; and 'tis in vain to expect Justice from that jealous, ill-natur'd Fury. Now I have given you Advice, which if I cou'd return into the World, I would follow my self; Permit me to justifie my A&ions. Historians tell you, I endeavout'd to reign in every Heart, whatever it cost me; without any regard to the Owner's Birth or Condition: But do you think that fo very Criminal? Does a little Kindness deserve so severe a Cenfure? Must Persons of Quality be always oblig'd to have an Eye on their Dignity? And did not he that made the Prince, make the Coachman? But what I cannot with Patience fuffer, is, the impudent Lye some have made concerning Ovid: That Verseisser had a nicer Fancy in Poetry than Beauty; like your Father, my dear Sister, he imagin'd wonderful Charms in Gray Hairs; for Marcellus was but newly dead when he fell in Love with Livia. 'Twas her he celebrated under the feigned Name of Corinna, and when he pleas'd, disciplin'd, she, like a Child, not daring to refist. Thus, People being ignorant of Closet Privacies, invent malicious Lyes; for do you fupsuppose I wou'd have suffer'd such info lent Usage? and that if I had not been strong enough to Cuft that Rhiming Pupy, I wou'd not have found out some other way to have been even with him You very well fee my Reasons have? some appearance of Truth; and I am confident, that when we meet, we shall agree very well. The Emperor, who had his Private Amours, never troubled those of his Wife; and Merena's Spoule, Proud of possessing the Affections of so Great a Monarch, return'd in soft Embra. ces, the Favours bestow'd on her Hus-I have infenfibly, made you an ingenious Confession; Do you the same Madam, for Hell is so damnable tiresome, that I gape and stretch a Thousand times an Hour; when your hand is in, pray fend me word what they are doing in your Part of the World; but above all, give me a true Account of your Amours and Conquests, for those Relations Tickle us, even when we have loft the Power of acting. Therefore, to invite you to be very plain with me, as likewise to divert my self in my present Melancholy Moments, I will give you some of my Thoughts in Metre, fuch as it is.

A Mi

Your To

Defce You All you

An

When Ilo

And

nd,A You

hey'l

hus I And efolv Afte

As not I

wd 7

T.

A Mighty Monarch you begot, Who's Pious as the Devil; Your Mother to by all is thought To be extreamly Civil.

nso een ning

ome

him

ve?

am hall

Who

bled

ouse,

f fo bra-

Huf-

an

ame

me, imes

pray

ig in all,

ickle

)Wer

o be ivert

Mo-

щу

A

2.

Descended from so bright a pair, You both their Gists inherit; All your great Fathers Virtue share, And all your Mothers Merit.

When I was Young and Gay, like you, I lov'd my Recreation;

Mama's dear Steps I did purfue,

And bilk'd no Inclination.

Ind, Madam, when your Charms are gone Your Lovers will for fake you; They'll cry your sporting days are done, And bid Old Pluto take you.

Thus I have given all Trading o'er,
And wifely leave off Sporting:
lefolv'd to Practice it no more.
After my Reign of Courting.

As Reproaching and Talking freely not here discouraged, so had I done any wd Trick, your Confessor wou'd have acquaint-acquainted you with it; for he keeps strict Correspondence with the Chiefest Ministers of our Monarch. You have been Jealous where you ought not, and the Saints of St. Germians and Versailles, when they come to discover the Mystery of your Curiofity, will never forgive The many mouthed Goddess was always easie to be Corrupted; and the Old Monster, Envy, prospers but too much; therefore take care of One, and prevent the other, that the Sins of others may not be imputed to you. All that the World can fay against your Virtue, shall never diminish my good opinion of it; and if you do not believe the Character I give of my self, consult * Calpri nede, who has drawn me to the Life, and was a great Master in that way, as Apolles in his. Farewel, fair Princess, and Remember that Julia Languishes with desire to see you.

174 Julia, to the Princess of Conti.

* The Voluminous Author of Cleopatra

THE

a

s Jul

he g

take

hat I

furtl

or yo

tep, am f

n Cali retender er m r yo

ing,

you

THE

ps a efest

nave

and tilles, ftery

rgive s Was

I the t00

and thers

that irtue,

ion d

Cha-Calpri

, and

Apel

, and

with

Princess of CONTIS

ANSWER

TO

7 U L 1 A.

T Did not expect to be honour'd with a Letter from fo Famous a Princess s Julia: This makes my Joy so much he greater. I do fincerely declare, that take all you fay to me fo reasonable, hat I can do no less than applaud it: And further assure you, that I never search'd or your Character in those disobliging luthors, who magnify the least false tep, and makes an Elephant of a Mouse. am fatisfied to know you, as I find you n Calprenede; and the Complaisance he retends you had for Ovid, does nothiner me from having a great Affection r your amiable Qualities; and belie-THE ing, as advantagiously of your Modesty you can desire. I am not so severe as to imagine a little Indulgence can be a great Crime; but think those, who will for a little natural Civility Ruine the Reputation of Courteous Ladies, to be malicious People only, envying those Gallantries which are addressed to o. thers. But, Madam, you have strangely furprized me with what you tell me of Livia; for I always believed that when old, Ambition was her only blind fide: but am aftonish'd to hear she was Amorous. This Discovery confirms the received Opinion, That Old Age has a wanton Inclination, as well as Youth, tho' not fo much Ability; and fince the Wife of Cefar, lov'd the Language of the Mules, I am not affonish'd that our Saints of St. C)r. has been Charm'd with it. But Dear Madan, is it certain that Ovid Disciplin's her like a Child? I thought the Roman Ladies had not wanted that Exercile; and I believe, my Gallants will never be oblig'd to come to that Fxtremity with me 1 need not use much Precaution against the Folly of a Second Marriage, for tho' I was Coupled to a very Charming Young Man, yet I foon found my Expectations bilk'd, becaule the Name of Husband and Wife, and thoughts of Duty so lessen'd the Pleafures for maly I nand ly 6

dou

mac

Are Fon A lo But

Tha

The

And

B Exp Eve To

And The In t

Is a

an be

Who

Ruine

es, to those

to 0.

ingely

me of

when fide;

ceiv'd

anton

not not ife of

Muses,

ists of

But

ht the

at Ex.

s will

Fxtre.

much

econd

d to a

I foon

ecaule

, and Plea

fures

fures of our softest embrace, that it made them Odious: So that now, I only love a Spouse for a Night, from whom I may be divorc'd the next Mornig; and this, perhaps, you'll find more plainly expressed in the following Lines, as I doubt not Dearest Sister, but you have made the Experiment.

T

Your tender Girls, when first their hands Are joyn'd in Himen's Magic bands, Fondly believe they shall maintain A long, uninterrupted Reign:
But to their cost too soon they prove That Marriage is the bane of Love.
The Phantom Duty damps its fire, And clips the Wings of sierce Desire.

2

But Lovers in a diffrent strain Express as well as ease their pain:
Ever Smiling, ever Fair, To please us is their only care.
And as their flame finds no decay, They only covet we should pay In the same Coin, and that, you know, Is always in our pow'r to do.

N

And

And will be always fo, Illustrious Princess, to our great Comfort and satis. You have heard, I suppose, faction. what the Writing of a few Letters has cost me, so that I have wholly lay'd a. fide all commerse of that nature at pre. fent, and am often oblig'd to stifle my Thoughts. Had I not fear'd Mercury's being fearch'd, I wou'd have open'd my Heart a little more to you; but if the times ever change, or Madam Maintenon the Gverness of Versailles becomes less inquilitive, you may certainly exped to receive an Epiftle, or rather a Volume from me. I put no confidence in the King my Father, and he is so jealous of me, that shou'd he pack up his All for the other World, I wou'd not trust him. I pity you for being kept fo close, and having so bad Company. That youmay Yawn and Strech less, and Laugh a lit. tle more, entertain your felf with h Fountain's Tales, or the School of Venus, both excellent Books in their kind which I'm confident will extreamly di vertyou; not so much upon the account of their Novelty, as by recalling to your Mind some past Actions of your Life.

For my part, I highly effeem 'em both and y

D

Flati

as the defervancers hal Prince in the ill coner well co oth paring

quall

and you'll oblige me in telling the Au-

a.

lons

atis.

has d a.

premy

ury's my

the

less to

ume

the

s of

for nim.

and may lit-

h la

enus,

di-

your

both.

and

DIONISIUS the Tounger,

TOTHE

Flatterers, of what Degree or Country Soever.

'HO' the Torments I now fuffer for my former Tyranies, are as great as they are just, yet you, cursed Villains, leserve meuh greater for being the Pronoters of them. You, with your Inferhal Praises, blind the Eyes of Princes, nd hurry them on headlong to their uine: Therefore I charge you with all he ill Actions of my Reign. I was no ooner seated on my Throne, but you so well'd me with Pride, by applauding all ny Perjuries, Oppressions and Cruelties, hat I believ'd it lawful for our Race to eTyrants from Father to Son with Impuity. Every one knows my Father was qually Wicked and Covetous, neither paring or fearing Men or Gods; and of N 2 this this Jupiter and Asculapius are Examples In a fit of Impiety, till then unpractis'd by the most desperate Villains, he stripp'd the first of his Golden Mantle, excusingit with this Jest, That 'twas too hot for the Summer, and too cold for the Winter. To the fecond he turn'd Barbar, and cut of his Golden Beard, which with great devo. tion had been prefented to him, alledg. ing it was improper for the Son, since his Father Apollo went without one. When his Conduct had thus render'd him odious to the World, he thought it necessary to make himself secure; for which end, he order'd a large deep Ditch to be dug about his Palace; but that was no Fortification against Fear, which cou'd creepin at every Key-hole; and his distrust in creas'd to that degree, that he suspected his nearest Relations. Not so much as a Maintenon came near him! At last his Guards, to oblige the World, cut his Throat, and fent his Soul as a Harbinger to the Devil, to provide room for his Body; and the People thinking me a much honester Man, without difficulty plac'd me in his Throne. But I foon took care to convince these credulous Sots, that a worse was come in his room; far these late to just I By the ties, sans, the L excee

to fee

know my E

I had to revish'd

of the Coun
Treac
defigr

lation Hone preve time

I wo thet or rant.

fing, brushe which

iples.

d by

pp'd

ngit

the

To

off

evo.

edg-

his

hen

ious

y to

he

a. tifi

pin

in

ted

s a his

his

ger his

e a

lty

ok

ts,

far

ex.

exceeding him in Cruelty, I endeavour'd to secure my Throne by Actions then unknown to the World. First, I caused my Brothers to be put to death, and when I had glutted my felf with the Blood of these Victims, I made no scruple to violate the Laws, and trample upon all the just Rights and Liberties of my People. By those and a Thousand other Barbarities, tiring the Patience of the Syracufans, they drove me into Italy, where the Locrians kindly receiv'd me; and I, to requite them for their Civility, Ravish'd their Women, Murder'd numbers of their Citizens, and Pillag'd their Country. At last, by a new contriv'd Treachery, I re-enter'd Syracuse, with defign to revenge my felf by new Defolations; but Dion and Timolion, much Honester Men than either my felf or you, prevented me, and put me a second time to Flight. 'Twas my destiny, and I wonder Historians do not add the Epithet of Coward to my just name of Tyrant. I then retir'd to Corinth, where in a short time my Misery became so presfing, that I was forc'd to turn Bumbrusher in my own defence, a Condition which best suited with a Man that delighted N 3 lighted in Tyrany and Blood; and as ; had been one of Plato's Disciples, I taught a fort of Philosophy which I had learn'd, but never practis'd. Thus was my Throne turn'd into a Desk, and my Sceptre into a Ferula. Heavens! what a shameful Metamorphofis was this! but, Gentle. men Sycophants, with a Murrain to you, I may thank you for it. You, like the Came. leon, can put on any Colour, can turn Vice into Virtue, and Virtue into Vice, to deceive your Masters: and under the specious Pretence of Religion can commit the greatest Barbarities. But tho' under the shelter of that reverend name, you think all your Iniquities undiscover'd fo you possess your Prince with the abominable Zeal of Persecution; yet Heaven fees and detests your Hypocrisie, and even Men at long run discover the Cheat. Oh! ye unworthy Enemies of Virtue, whole only aim is to raise your own Fortunes upon the Ruin of others, How useful are you to the Devil? You matter it not, provided you compass your desir'd ends, if we lay waste the Universe, and afterwards become the Hate and Scorn of all Mankind: As for Example, 'tis long of you that I have been a Pedant in Greece, and

and t not b forc'd ing (Trape appla loft a jects give t ceffity to R aure it not Fable out c in va if Ih will 1 fort t to tu like theus

and

neve

lanie

13]

ght

ı'd,

one

nto

ful

le.

ou.

meice

to

m-

10'

ne,

'd

00-

en

en h!

le

r-10

er

ď

nd of

ng ce,

and that * One of my Rank, if he had * He means not been taken to Rest, wou'd have been the late forc'd to cover his Follies under a stinking Cowl in the Lowfie Convent of la Trape. You will not fail, I know, to applaud all his Actions, and fay, if he loft all, 'twas only for obliging his Subjects to take the true road to Heaven, and give the Title of Refignation to meer Necessity and Compulsion. But it is a Sacrifice to Renounce, through Despair, the Grandure we cannot maintain any longer? Is it not rather imitating the Animal in the Fable, that despises the Grapes which are out of his Reach? But I waste my Lungs in vain, and talk to the Deaf: However, if I have been Humbled, believe that you will not always be Exalted. 'Tis my comfort that you will one day be condemn'd to turn a Wheel like Ixion, to roll Stones like Sisiphus, to be devour'd like Prometheus, continually Thirsty like Tantalus, and to heighten your Evils, that you will never lose the remembrance of those Villanies you committed.

N 4

THE

THE

ANSWER

OF THE

NEWS-MONGERS

TO

Young DIONISIUS.

HE Flatterers have done you too much Honour, Mr. Pedant, and shou'd they believe you, and turn Honest (of which I think there is no great danger) and perswade their Masters to be Just to their Oaths and Treaties, Wou'd not they Govern in Peace and Unity? And wou'd not that very thing cast the World into fuch a drowzy Tranquility, that it wou'd be Melancholy living in it, and Starve Millions of all Degrees and Professions who now Lord it very handfomely? We, I'm sure, shou'd be first fensible of it, by having no variety of News to fluff our London Gazettes, Mercuries Mercur make s pends, leave the Gra neve, facture for yo cioully and fe fons, Vanit ces. turn t a jot pay n Pedag (cretic of gre dantic flow than Etern

and S

but.

Bleffi

mucl

you

Mercuries and Slips with; which wou'd make the Bookfellers withdraw our Stipends, and by consequence oblige us to leave off tippling the generous Juice of the Grape, and content our selves with Geneve, or some more Flegmatick Manufacture. Therefore keep your Harangues for your School-Boys, and do not maliciously take our daily Bread from us, and feek to ruine those complaisant Perfons, that can condefend to footh the Vanities and Inclinations of their Princes. But to dismiss this point, and return to your felf, 'tis plain you have not a jot of Honour about you, fince you pay no regard to your Father's Reputation. We easily perceive you have been a Pedagogue by your tatling, which Indiscretion makes you unworthy the Title of great Pluto's Disciple. But has your Pedantick Majesty no better Rewards to beflow on Gentlemen of Courtly Breeding than Wheels, Vultures, Milstones, and an Eternal Thirst? Truly 'tis very liberal, and School-Master like in every respect; but you are defired to keep those mighty Blessings for your self, who deserve them much better than any one elfe; and if you were Cullied by those about you, talk

o d

f

nne

'd

he

it,
id
d-

ft

of

5,

Christina Queen of Sweden, talk no more on't, but keep your Weak. ness to your self.

CHRISTINA

QUEEN of SWEDEN

TO THE

WOMEN

Hat I, who never testified much e. steem for the Fair Sex, shou'd at this time address my self to them, will, without doubt, be thought strange, but if necessity breaks Laws, it ought also to cancel Aversion, and excuse me for seeking Protection amongst a Sex I have so often dispis'd, being compell'd to it bya Thousand Injuries done to my Memory. Therefore I now ask Pardon of the Ladies; and am perswaded I do them no little Honour, (fince there has feldom been a more extroardinary Woman than I was) in owning my felf one of the Female Kind. First, I may boast of all the

it.

the a Daug who the Mary thy ' not a ther Age; Fame Wor Quee early whic charg if the it: fairs that : for m fenfil were

To t

1 tho

it;

begga

with reft

that

ak.

N,

eat ill,

out

to

ek-

fo

ya

ry.

La-

110 om

lan

the

all

the advantage of a glorious Birth, being Daughter of the Great Gustavus Adolphus, who did not only fill the North, but all the Universe with Admiration, and of Mary Elianor of Brandenburgh, the worthy Wife of fuch a Husband. If I was not as handsome as Helen, and those other Beauties, whom the Poets have from Age to Age recorded in the Book of Fame, yet all the World own'd me a Woman of incomparable Parts. Queen at five Years of Age, and even fo early took upon me that important Truft, which but few Men are but capable to difcharge, and which fewer wou'd covet, if they knew the Troubles that attend it: Yet I supported the weight of all Affairs with fuch a Grace and Prudence, that my Crown did not feem too heavy for me. As foon as Reafon had made me fensible of my Power, my only thoughts were how to make my felf worthy of it. To this end, I invited to my Court those I thought the most capable of improving it; which was no fooner known by the beggarly French, but Stockholme swarm'd with Masters of all Sciences. Among the rest I had a Pack of Hungary Poets; but he that took the most pains, was not the best re-rewarded, because he did not resemble Boileau, who can in half an Hour make a Saint of a Devil. In my green Years ! feem'd only addicted to Grandeur and Virtue ; for I Studied like a Docter, Ar. gued like a Philosopher, and gave Lessons of Morality to the most Learned; so that every body imagin'd Ishould Eclipse the most famous Heroines. But I had not yet heard the Voice of a certain Deity, whose Language I no sooner understood, but it poison'd all my former good Dispo. fitions; for whereas till then I had been charm'd with the Conversation of the Dead, I began now to have passionate Inclinations for the Living. But not toun. deceive the World, which thought my Conduct blameless, I was forc'd to puta curb to my desires, or at least to pursue them with more Precaution. Whether the trouble to find my felf fo inclin'd, or my Grandeur, which wou'd not allow of those Liberties I figh'd for, oblig'd me to punish the Flatterers of my Passion, I know not; but I committed many Barbarities. As my desires were insatiable, fo 'twas not in my power to confine them; and this gave my Subjects too many opportunities to discover several Indecencies in m not by t and my of v large ger ever; my c

Far to Was' On h

whic

ter-h

But r His C

The Tis And

ble

ake

rsI

ind

Ar-

ons

hat

the

not

ity,

od,

00.

en he In-

ın-

ny

ta

lue

ier'd,

W

me

I

arole, n;

pies

in

in my management, and because I wou'd not be tumbled headlong from my Throne by them, I very prudently condescended, and put my Cousin Charles Adolphus in my place. Then did I, under pretence of visiting the Beauties of France, take large Doses of those Joys I durst no longer take at Stockholme. I was Treated every where as a Queen, had Palaces at my command, and I made a Fountain-bleau, which was before a Bawdy-house, a Slaughter-housealso before I left it.

T.

Fate justly reach'd the prattling Fool, For telling Stories out of School.

Was't not enough I stoop'd so low, On him m' Affection to bestow?

To clasp him in my circ'ling Arms, And seast him with Love's choicest (Charms:

But must the babling Fool proclaim His Queen's Infirmity and Shame?

2.

Of all the Sins on this side Hell, The Blackest sure's to Kiss and Tell. 'Tis Silence best becomes delight, And hides the revels of the Night. 90 Christina Queen of Sweden,

If then my Spark has met his due,
For bringing Sacred Mysteries to view, E'en let him take it for his pains, And Curse his want of Gratitude and (Brains,

But I know not whether the Monarch of France had long Ears like his Brother Midas, or some little Familiar whisper'd it in his Ear, but what I thought cou'd never be detected, was publickly discour. fed at Court. Perceiving this, I refolv'd on a Voyage to Rome, and the rather. because I thought the Romish Religion most commodious for a Woman of Inclinations, and that it would illustrate my History to abjure the Opinion of Luther at the Feet of the Pope; tho' I had as little believ'd and follow'd the Doctrine of the Reform'd, as I have fince the Abfurdities of the Roman Church. Italy feem'd to me a Paradise, and I thought my past Troublesfully recompene'd, when I found my felf in that famous City, which has been the Mistress of this World, without Subjects to controul me, faucy chattering French Men to revile me, andamongst a mixture of Strangers, which made all my Actions pass unregarded. 'Twas

'Tw Sain Plac and Can true othe Bilb pos' Reig reno gins forme the] Rom praé Reaf to pi comb the bega told judg fuch

the

fully

ever

guif

well

W,

nd

ns.

ch

bet

b'r

l'd

ur.
v'd

er,

ion cli-

my

her

lit-

e of

ur-

m'd

past

und

has

out

tter-

id a-hich ded.

was

Twas enough for me to be efteem'd a Saint, that I was turn'd Papist in a place where Debauchery is tolerated; and you'll find me, perhaps, one day Canoniz'd by the Roman Clergy. true, I was not fo rigorous to them as others, for the Pope, Cardinals, Legats, Bishops, Abbots, Priests and Monks, compos'd my Court, where Licention ness Reign'd most agreeably. Not that I had renounc'd the Company of young Virgins, for I was intimate enough with some of them, to have it said, I was of the Humour of Sapho; and as I liv'd at Rome, fo I thought my felf oblig'd to practice their Manners. But the chief Reason of my Writing, is to desire you to protect me against those ignorant Coxcombs, who endeavour to put me among the number of the foolish Virgins, for I began and finish'd my Course, as I have told you, and will now leave you, to judge if there can be any probability in fuch a scandalous Story. My good Friend the Pope, to whom I had been wonderfully Civil, folemnly fwore, that whenever I left this World, I shou'd not languish in Purgatory, tho' he knew very well I shou'd go to another Place. But as it was the promise of a Tricking Jesuit, so I did not much credit it, nor was much surprized to see my self turn'd into a sty among a company of Boars and old Lascivious Goats, a sort of Animals I had formerly been well acquainted with at my Palace in Rome, and who came then grunting and leaping to embrace me. I cannot in this place hear of the poor Gentleman whom I Murder'd, I ask'd one of my He Companions concerning him, who knows no more of him than I do; therefore Iverily believe he's among the Martyrs-

beg by fee fi

put y
the L
use o

tures
Darts
frailt

feffo

THE

THE

wit,

uch

Sty

asci-

my hen ie. I

sk'd

ning an I ong

HE

ANSWER

OF A

Young VESTAL

TO THE

QUEEN.

OOD Heavens! Madam, how pi-Tously did your Majesty begin your Letter! and what pleasure did I take to fee fuch hopeful dispositions to Virtue! But what was that inchanting Vice that put you out of the good Road? Was it the Devil? If fo, why did you not make use of Holy Water? For we, poor Greatures, oppose no other Buckler against the Darts of Satan, when he conjures up the frailty of the Flesh to disturb us. But I beg your pardon, you were then a Lutheran, and Holy Water has no efficacy but only for true Catholicks. My Confessor has so often preach'd Charity to me, me, that I cannot but bewail the Fate of the Poor Gentleman you lov'd so dearly and Treated fo Barbarously. Oh, my dear St. Francis! What fort of Love was that! And how unfortunate are those precious souls that have Parts of pleasing you! One may very well perceive, by that piece of Barbarity, you neither be. liev'd Purgatory, or fear'd Hell; and wou'd not have been guilty of fuch an Action for all your excellent Qualities and Grandeur. I hear you talk'd of some times, and in fuch a manner, that it makes me often figh, pant, and pull down my Veil; and I feel a terrible Fit coming upon me by Reading your Confession.

Madam, I much rejoyce to hear, You'll take a Stone up in your ear;
For I'm a frail transgressor too,
And love the sport as well as you.
But then I choose to do the Work Within the Pale of Holy Kirk:
For absolution cures the Scars, Contracted in Venereal Wars, And saves our Sex a world of Prayers.
Had you this Ghostly counsel taken,
You might till now have sav'dyourBacon.
Tis

Tis fa Who f Then

Do, M None With Who

But ence i delier. ended what more expre certai follow obtair tion burth in you the W fee a Queen eof arly

my Was

fing |

by

be.

ndI

an ties

me

tit

Fit

-110

con.

Tis

Tis fafe intriguing with a Flamen, Who fanctifies their Work with Amen, Then who would trust ungodly Lay-

Do, Madam, as you please, but I None but the Priest-hood will imploy. With them I'll live with them I'll dye. Who like the Pelian Spear are sure, With the same ease they wound to cure.

But 'tis easy to judge your Conscience is as large as the Sleeve of a . Cor- A French delier, since you began in the Spirit, and Proverb ended in the Flesh. Notwithstanding science. what I have merrily own'd in Rhime, more to entertain your Majesty, than express my true Sentiments, there are certain Hours when I could willingly follow your Example; and if you wou'd obtain from the Holy Father a Dispensation of my Vows, which now grow burthensom to me, I wou'd break a Lance in your Quarrel: This I'm sure of, that the World will think it less strange to fee a Nun renounce her Convent, than a Queen her Crown.

0 2

FRANCIS

FRANCIS RABLAIS

TOTHE

Physicians of PARIS.

IS in vain for your Flatterers to cry you up for able Doctors, for you will never arrive at my knowledge; and I am asham'd every hour to hear such Affes are admitted into the College. Do not believe 'tis a sensible Vanity that induces me to fay this, but the perfect knowledge I have of my own worth: and tho' I was defign'd for a more lazy Profession, yet that does not in the least diminish my Merit. You know I was born at Chinon, and that my Parents, hoping I should one day make a precious Saint, put me in my foolish Infancy into a Convent of Cordeliers : But that greafie Habit, in a little time, scem'd to me as heavy and uneafy as the Armour of a Gyant; so that by intercession made to Fope Clement the leventh, I was permitted to change my Gray Frock for a Black; fol quitted the Equipage of St. Francis, for that of S of in had little thof get l took that Comi tura ble 1 Bella me whe the a coul prese Thir who was than pleaf in m

Bull

from

was

thei

a Co

as I

of St. Benedict, and that I was as weary of in a short time as of the other. As I had learnt a great deal of Craft, and but little Religion, during my Noviciate in those good Schools, so I found a way to get loose from that Cloyster for ever, and took to the study of Hippocrates. Besides that I had a fubtle and clear Genius, my Comrades discover'd in me an acute natural Raillery, which made me acceptable to the best Companions. Cardinal Bellay who made me his Phylician, took me to Rome with him in that Quality. where the Sanctity of the Triple Crown, the ador'd Slipper, and all opening Key, could not hinder me from jesting in the presence of his Holiness. 'Twas Paul the Third, before call'd Alexander Fernese, who then fill'd the Apostolick Chair, and was more remarkable for his Lewdness than Piety. I had the good fortune to please him with the inclination he found in me to Lewdness, and he gave me a Bull of Absolution for my Apostacy, free from all Fees and Duties; which I think was a gracious Reward for a Foreign Atheistical Buffoon. After I had compil'd a Catalogue of his Vices, to make use of as I should find an opportunity, the Cardinas

s to

for ge;

ich

Do

in-

a

h;

zy

aft

as

ts,

ous

ito

fie

25

a

to

ed

oI

at

of

dinal my Patron return'd to Paris, and I with him, where he immediately gratified me with a Canonship of St. Maur, and the Benefice of Meudon. Having all I could defire, I liv'd luxuriously; and the Love of Satyr pleasing me much more than the Service of God, after I had wrote several things, without success, for the Learned, I composed the History of Gar. gantua and Pantagruel, for the Ignorant: Things which some call a Cock and a Bull, and others, the Product of a lively ima. gination. I know most Menunderstand them as little as they do Arabick; and as it is not to our present purpose, so do not I intend to explain that stuff to them, but will now, fince 'tis more a Propos, give you fome advice concerning the Malady of your blustering Manarch. The Residence I made at the Court of France, in the Reign of Francis the First, makes me more bold in judging of the Nature of those Distempers. You conceal the virulency of Lewis the Four. teenth's Disease, because you dare not examine into the bottom of the Cause; and are more modest in proposing Reme. dies, than he has been in contracting the Distemper. Yet every one talks according ding t alway

tremb quity, make

eafily fronte will fo

free in here, begins in len in len like, l other

Æscula by a some

Turper War, at thi Compa

Maint proof

him i fellow to a

purg found

can-

Francis Rablais to the Physicians of Paris.

aris,

nd I

rati-

and

Illia

the

ore

rote

the gar.

int;

Bull,

ma-

and das

do

Fto

e a

ing

ch.

t of

rft,

the

on-

ur.

100

fe;

ne.

the

-10

ing

ding to his Intercit and the News-monzers always keep a blank to fet down the manner of his death. If he does not tremble he must be thorow-pac'd in Iniguity, for he has feveral reckonings to make up with Heaven, which are not fo easily adjusted; and as he has often affronted the Majesty of Several Popes, he will scarce obtain a Pasport to go Scotfree into the other World. We are told here, by some of his good Friends, he begins to putrifie, and has Ulcers a Yard in length, where Vermin, very Soldier like, Intrench themselves. There is no other Remedy for this, according to old Æsculapius, but to make him a new man by a severe penitential Pilgrimage into some of the Provinces of Mercury and Turpentine. If he still fears the danger of War, let him go in Disguise; and if at this Age, he cannot be without a She Companion, let him take his old Friend Maintenon along with him; She is Poisonproof, and may, to fave Charges, ferve him in three Capacities, viz. as a Bedfellow, Nurse, and Guide; keep him also to a strict Diet; scrape his Bones, and purge him thorowly, and all may be found again, but his Conscience. You

Francis Rablais to the Physicians of Paris. cannot imagine, how merrily we Gentle. men of the Faculty live at Pluto's Court: I am Secretary to the same Paul the Third who pardon'd me gratis the violation of my Vows, my Irreverence for the Church, and my want of Respect for him; Scaramouche is his Gentleman Ush. er, Arlequin his Page, and Scarron his Poet Laureat. Don't suppose I was such a Blockhead as to Kifshis Sweaty Toe, when I visited him in the Vatican; he had nothing from me but fuch an Hypocritical Hug, as your Monks give each other at the ridiculous Ceremony of High Mass. This old Goat still keeps his amorous In. clinations, and I who have so often made others blush, am often asham'd to hear his Ribaldry. He'd certainly make love to Proserpine, but our Sultan wou'd not be pleas'd with his Courtship, and befides, his Seraglio is as well Guarded as the Grand Segnior's; otherwise we might have a Litter of fine Puppies betwixt them. Little Hump shoulder'd Luxemburgh, late Mareschal of France, is the Captain of her Guards, and fo damnably Jealous that he will not fuffer any to come near her; at which Pluto is very well pleas'd, and does not mistrust him,

Franc thinl in L But fcorr turn now Impi read dami Year nest his I are c his I this for 1 thof Rea hone and Asf Blift but who for 1

you

rou

Root

Wo

think-

words

Francis Rablais to the Physicians of Paris. thinking it impossible for any body to be in Love with fuch a Lump of Deformity. But to return to our friend Paul, he fcorns to copy after the Devil, who turn'd Hermit when he was old; and I am now making another Collection of his Impieties and Amours, which will be ready to come out with a Gazetie Nostradamus has been Composing since the Year 1600. That fly Conjurer is so earnest upon the matter, that he lifts not up his Head, tho' Pluto's Black-Guard Boys are continually burning Brimstone under his Nose. However, I do not know but this Mountain may bring forth a Mouse; for to speak freely I put as little Faith in those Prophets, who like Sots loose their Reason in the Abyss of Futurity, as the honest Whigs of England do in the Oaths and Treaties of your swaggering Master. As for you, Brother Doctor, Cut, Scarify, Blister and Glyster, since 'tisyour profession but take this along with you, that they who do the least Mischief, pals with me for the ablest Men. But I wou'd Advise you not to fuffer any longer those barbarous Names of Affassins, Poisoners, Closestool-mongers, Factors of Death, &c. the World gives you. I have had high aris.

tle.

irt:

the

ola-

the

for

Jfh-

his

uch

hen

110-tical

r at lass.

In-

lade

near

ove

not

bed as

ight

Wixt

cem-

the

ably

y to

very

him, inkwords with Moliere on your Account, and I expect that fine Rhiming Fellow Boileau will give him a wipe over the Nose in one of his Satyrs. For tho's have made bold to talk freely with you, yet I do not mean all the World should take the same Liberty.

THE

ANSWER of Mr. Fagon,

First Physician to Lewis the 14th.

TO

FRANCIS RABLAIS.

Vou're a very pretty Gentleman, Friend Rablais, to boast of your self so much, and value the rest of your Fraternity so little. Do not you know that I am of the Tribe of Juda, and perhaps related to some of the Kings of Israel? Had you heard me preach in a Synagogue, you'd soon be convinc'd whether I am an illiterate Fellow, or no, Is it such an Honour to be of your College?

Colleg tage by ye Rake Mami Coffer You Great more was i only Backother affifte For n Broke Billet cause noura cern, the fir fpeak Confi

which

Scarre

tation

will f

apolit

us fer

nţ,

W

he

1 u, ld

n, ur

uc

W

1-

of 12

le-

10,

11

0)

College? Or wou'd it be any advantage to be like you? You have been, by your own Confession, a most horrid Rake-hell; and I wou'd not for all the Mammon of Unrighteousness in my King's Coffers, transgress one Point of the Law. You ought not to be aftonish'd at my Greatness, for I concern my self with more than one Trade, and no Man ever was in fuch Favour, and grew fo Rich, by only applying warm Injections to the If you enjoy'd Prebend, and Back-fide. other Benefices, you must, I know, have affisted Cardinal Bellay in his Amours: For my part, I boast of having been a Broker, Sollicitor, and under the Rose, Billet-doux-carrier, and Door-Keeper, because all employments at Court are Honourable, especially in that great concern, of S---y. Do not think you were the first that thought of the Remedy you speak of; we have had several learned Confultations about it, but know not which way to mention it, for Madam Scarron, who is very tender of her Reputation, and Reigns Sovereignly at Court, will fay we accuse her of bringing the Neapolitan Distemper to Versailles, and have us sent to the Galleys, or Hang'd for our good damus.

good Advice. I have often reflected on the Scandalous bantering Stuff of those they call Wits, have faid, and do fay of us; and wish with all my heart, the first Brimstone they take for the Itch, and Mercury for the Pox, may Poyson 'em; but for us to stir in't, wou'd bring 'em all about our Ears; and we know the consequence of that from a Neighbour.

* England. ing * Country, where they have mum. D. B-re. bled a poor ! Physician, and one that can Versity also, almost as severely as a Troop of Hungry Wolves would a fat

Ass. However, we thank you for your Zeal; but at the same time advise you not to make a Quarrel for so small a Bufiness; and I, in a particular manner, Kiss your Hand, and desire you'l give my Service to Nostradamus. I cannot beat it out of my head, but that he has Stanzat. put me into his " Centuries, and that an of Nostra- ingenious Man might discover me there. I own'tis looking for a Needle in a Bottle of Hay; but you know I sprung up like a Mushroom, and that he foretels nothing but Prodigies

THE

Duto

T De yo his Fe he wil his wa this L vou in when in my vou. Maids Wome of the me wi form' Fear now l

To a

Confi

fult y tell y

THE

Dutchess of FONTANGE

ofe first

and

em; em the

our-um-

hat

as a fat

our

you

Bu-

ner,

ive

not

has tan

ere.

Bot-

up

no-

TO THE

Cumean Sibyll.

T Desir'd Mercury to call en passant, at your Cave; and as he has Wings at his Feet, and Complaifance in Heart, fo he will, I don't doubt, go a little out of his way to oblige me, by delivering you this Letter; I have from my infancy had you in my Mind, and heard my Nurse, when I lay squawling in shitten Clouts in my Cradle, tell frightful Stories of As foon as I began to prattle, my Maids taught me to call all old wrinkled Women, wither'd Sibylls; and the Idea of the Den you were confin'd in, fill'd me with Fear. But fince I have been inform'd of the truth of your History, that Fear is chang'd into Veneration, and I now look upon your Cell as a facred Place. To assure you of my Respect, and the Confidence I repose in you, I will confult you about some future Events, and tell you one part of my Griefs. I am nobly born, handsom, and young enough to inspire and receive the softest Love, The French King, who had spoil'd the Shape, and wore out the Charms of feveral Mistresses, long before I appeard at his Court, had a mind to do the same by me. Being naturally Proud and Wan. ton, and tempted by the fine Compliments of a great and vigorous Prince, and Title of Dutchess, (a Temptation none of us Women can resist) I soon yielded to his Defires; which so mortify'd the haughty Montespane, that she with a Ragoo al-amode d'espagne dispatch'd me out of the World, before I could get a true taste of Greatness, or the Pleasures of a Royal Bed. Alas! What a mighty deference there is between you and me; your Years are innumerable, you are still mention'd in History, your Voice still remains, and you enjoy the Divine Faculty of Prediction; but I was Murder'd in my Bloom, when ripe and juicy as the lufcious Grape, and that ungrateful Perjur'd Man, who rifl'd my Virgin Treasures, has not fo much as thought or spoke of me fince. He doats on nothing but Old Age, and cou'd you appear in something more Solid than Air, I do not doubt but he'd he'd 1 his be would and in tough tenon. been fcore treate heigh warm both really in the fus'd one o to Fra with t ger tl hearc rant the R

Love

meer not h

faid 1

turn

tenon

Love

ugh

ove.

the

fe-

ard

e by lan-

ıpli-

and

f us

De-

hty

al-a-

the

e of

oyal

ence

ears

on'd

ins,

of

my

luf-

ur'd

has

me

Age,

ning

but

he'd he'd make his Addresses to you, I believe his being born with Teeth, presag'd he would always be a Tyrant to his People, and in his latter days the Cully of fuch a tough piece of Carrion as Mrs. Main-Morbleu! Have I barbaroufly been facrific'd, and must a Miss of Threescore and Fifteen live unpunish'd, and be treated better than I was in the greatest height of that Prince's Passion, and warmth of my desires, when capable both of receiving and giving Joy? It really diffracts me! And I conjure you, in the name of Apollo, who never refus'd you any thing, to let me know by one of your Oracles I shall never return to France again. You came hither, I know, with the brave Eneas, (but stay'd no longer than you lik'd the place) and I have heard some People fay, That Knight Errant diverted himself extreamly upon the Road, and made a great deal of hot Love to you; but I take that to be a meer Story, because Virgil, who wou'd not have let flip fo pleafant a Passage, has faid nothing of it. However, could I return but for a short time, to dislodge Maintenon, and take a Frisk with my former Lover, if he be not too Old for that Busnefs, ness; or were I but your shadow, provided I liv'd, I shou'd be pretty well pleas'd: for 'tis a Melancholy thing to think that the Fates should spin such a long Thread for an old Lascivious Ape, who never was to be compar'd with me; and that there should remain no more of poor Fontange, than an unfortunate Name, over which oblivion will in a little time Triumph. At the Writing of this, in came a Courier from Versailes, who brings us word, that Lewis the Great has undertook fuch a piece of Work, that the Weight and Confequence makes him fick of the World; That Mistress Maintenon has wore out his Teeth; that Legions of Vermin devour him, and that we may fuddenly expect him in these Dominions: Which, if true, will be some satisfaction to me; and tho' he be Toothless, Wormeaten and Rotten, I will grant him the fame Liberty he often took with me on a Couch at the Trianon, to get him again under my Empire, that I may at Leilure revenge my felf for his forgetfulness.

* Mainte

I.

Oh! wou'd not it provoke a Maid, By softest Vows and Oaths betray'd, Her Her And Ther To b

But V And Had I show Not to

But fe

Bu

was of ence; shou'd variet rest of my de been l give r lation Her Virgin Treasures to resign, And give up Honour's dearest shrine? Then, when her Charms have been enjoy'd; To be next moment lay'd aside?

OVi-

as'd;

nink

ong who and

1000

me,

ime

, in

ings

derthe

fick

enon

is of may

ons:

tion

rm-

the

e on

gain is fure s.

d,

d, Her 2

But why do I lament in vain,
And of my destiny complain?
Had I been wise as those before me, I should have made the World adore me;
Not to one Lover's Arms confin'd, But search'd and try'd all Human kind.

But I believe this foolish Constancy, was only owing to my want of Experience; and if I had liv'd a little longer, I shou'd have had the curiosity to try the variety of Humane performance, like the rest of my Neighbours. You have been my dear demy Goddess, in Love, and have been belov'd, therefore, I beseech you, give me some healing Advice or Consolation, as my Case requires.

P

THE

$67:073.

THE

CUMEAN SIBYLL'S

ANSWER

TOTHE

Dutchess of FONTANGE.

S it possible that so charming a Beauty shou'd think of such an Old Decrepit Creature as I am! I was very defirous to talk with Mercury about you, but he flow away like a Bird. It extreamly troubles me, Dear Child, that I'm oblig'd in answer to your Letter, to tell youthere is no hopes of your returning to Versailles; for you must consider, that when I conducted Æneas, I was then living, and that 'tis impossible for any under a Hercules to fetch you from whence you are; and where shall we find one now? The bra vest Boufflers in France is but a Link-by in comparison to him. Your Lover, fi M. Main Lady, is so fast link'd to his Old Duegna

Tail your that Flow Dose grow living a fit C but t not w finy, tir'd v Beaux tis a becau herTr willing not W fend not lor ecomi heigh

ieve, ome i f Æn hat co

er pu ne can nd as

Tail, that he thinks no more of you; and your Complaints are infignificant. * She fpan. that hurried you out of the World in the Flower of your Youth, with a favourable Dose of Poyson, is now neglected, and grown fo monstrousFat and Lecherous, by living lazily in a Nunnery, that she's not a fit Companion for any Creature that has but two Legs to support it. You know not what you do, when you envy my Destiny, for I am sometimes so teaz'd and tir'd with answering the Virtuoso's and Beaux, that it turns my very brain. Iown tis a fad thing to Die at 18, in the height of one's Greatness and Pleasures, because Nature always thinks she pays her Tribute to Death before-hand. Iwou'd willingly divert you a little, but I know not which way, unless this little History send you, which a Traveller gave me not long fince, and which has Novelty to ecommend it felf, will do it : Do not beieve, good Lady, the Scandalous Story ome ignorant Rhiming Puppy has made f Eneas and me; he was not so brisk as hat comes to; and I can assure you, neer put the Question to me. Ask Dido, he can tell you more of him than I can; nd as modest as Virgil describes her, yet

uty

epit

ous

t he

mly

lig'd

here

illes:

COT

that iles to

; and

e bra

nk-bo

r, fair

egnal

Tail

the was forced to take this Trojan Prince by the Throat to make him perform the Duty of a Gallant; by this you may judge of his Constitution: Besides, had he been never so amorously inclin'd, yet not knowing my Inclinations, he might think his Courtship wou'd displease me, and so disoblige Apollo, for whose assistance he then had occasion. Therefore laugh at all those idle Ralleries of impertinent People, and turn your Eyes and Thoughts on the following Dialogue.

Furetie

ain yo

Ab

y to fe with w hough nany i
and Le o kifs canno
out of r

The

ince I I Scari Vhat's

ng nei hing know

The Mitred H OG:

nce

nay

yet ght

me, list-

ore per-

and

The

A

DIALOGUE

BETWEEN

Abbot Furetiere and Scarron.

Furetiere. H! have I found you at last, old Friend? Tho' I was cerain you were here, and desir'd earnesty to see you; yet being Gouty, and tir'd vith walking, I began to have no more houghts of searching after you. nany troublesom Journies I have made, nd Leagues I have Travell'd, and all o kiss your Hands, tho' I am a Virtuofo, cannot tell: For in truth, I am quite ut of my Element; and confounded ever ince I have lost fight of Sun and Moon. Scarron. Who are you, and please ye? What's your Name? For the Dead havng neither Beard nor Bonner, nor any hing else to distinguish them by, I know not exactly, what, or who you are: werb in

French,

for a fat

Large

Monk

or Abbot.

s Hog.

are; but by your Language and Mien, suppose you some Mungril of the French Academy.

rick.

Furetiere. Well guessd; I am call'd Monsieur L'Able Furetiere, * alias Porc de bon Dieu, who has long, but in vain, been gaping and scraping at Versailes for a Miter, that I may wallow in Peace and Plenty like a Hog: But alass, what Cochon is a left-handed Planet was I born under French for A Debauch with Stummed Wine, fetting an old Pox, which lay dorment in my Bones, into a Ferment, foon carried me off, almost in the height of my Defires, and when I bid fairest for the Bishop.

> . Scarron. I am forry for your Missortune; but am at the same time, heartily glad to see you, Monsieur L'Able. You will not, perhaps, meet with all these Conveniences here, you enjoy'dat Paris; but in Recompence, you will meet with much honester dealing. For my part, I must own my self infinitely happy; for now, I am neither troubled with Lawyers, Physicians Apothecaries, Collectors of Taxes, Priests nor Wife, the Plague and Torment of Men's Days, when on Earth. But how have you had

betu

had y the Co Fur

Ihave very 7 in the loadec Dram

Icou'c ing in

Scar

not me for 'ti the To your their l is not frious now c when the C you?

Fur quisiti to hea

Sca the n of he and la had your Health fince you have been in the Country.

ach

l'd

de

en

for ace

tiat

er?

ing

my

me

res, hop-

arti-

Able.

all

dat will

For

itely ibled

aries,

e, the

had

Furetiere. Thanks to our Master Pluto, I have not yet felt any Cold. I was fo very Tender and Chill, for Six Months in the Year, at Paris, that tho' I was loaded with Ermins, and always had a Dram of the Best Nantes in my Pocket, I cou'd scarce keep my Blood from Freezing in my Veins.

Scarron. That's an Affliction you will not meet with here, take my word for't; for 'tis fomething hotter, than under the Torrid Zone; and the nicest Wits of your Academy, need not fear spoiling their Brains, by catching Cold here. for is not long fince I met with the Illustrious Balzac, who does not complain now of the Cold in his Head, as he did when he liv'd on the pleasant Banks of the Charante. But, what News have you?

Furetiere. I don't doubt, by your Inquisitiveness, but you are very desirous, to hear some News of your Wife.

Scarron. May Pox and Itch devour the nasty Jade! I know but too much Days, of her by Mareschal d'Albert formerly; you and lately, by my likeness, Monsieur Lux-emburgh;

embourgh; yes, I know she's a Dutchess; that she's one of the Privy Council; and she serves Lewis the XIV, in the same Capacity as Livia did Augustus. But why did not the Prostitute make her poor deform'd Husband a Duke? I shou'd not have been the first Duke, and Peer of France, that had been a Cuckold.

Furetiere. By your Discourse, Mr. Scar. ron, one wou'd think you had lost your Senses and Memory: But you cannot surely have forgot how, instead of Laurel, she adorn'd your Learned Brow with Horns, before she was taken notice of at Court? Indeed, how cou'da Pretty, Witty, Buxome Young Woman, forbear making such an insirm, desorm'd Afop as you a Cuckold?

scarron. I shou'd not have much valu'd that, because, I had Brethren enough to herd with, if the Damn'd Whorehad but got my Pension Augmented; but the confounded Jade, instead of that, gave me the cursed'st Garrison to maintain, that ever poor Husband was mortisted with: To appease which, I was forc'd to have recourse to Unguentum contra Pediculous inguinales, &c. But prithee let's discourse of something else, for the Thoughts of

of the

wart

four and her the lis vo ther S don for Feat lant poer it al byf lant eng ciet ticu wel cha Faci Car

(d) hess;

; and

e Ca.

y did

de-

not

er of

Scar.

your

nnot

Lau-

row

no-

i'da

man,

rm'd

lu'd

ugh

had

the

ave

that ith:

ave

lous

dif-

hts of of the Dutchess of Maintenon, will disturb my Brain, and easily put me into a Fever; which is dangerous in this warm Climate.

Furetiere. I'll tell you but three or four words more of this famous Dutchess, and conclude. First, that she has kick'd her Patroness, Madam Montespan, out of the Royal Bed: And secondly, that she is very great with the Pious Jesuit, Father la Chaise, the Monarch's Confessor.

Scarron. Oh! oh! By my Troth, I don't wonder at the Lascivious Harlot, for closing with him! As there is no Feast like the Miser's, so there is no Gallantry like those Monks. When those Hypocrites undertake that Business, they do it all like Heroes. But you have faid all by saying he is a Jesuit; since those Gallants have been in Reputation, they have engrossed all good Whoring to their Society, especially in France, and more particularly at Paris, where they have so well behav'd themselves, that they have chang'd an Antient, Authentick Proverb;

Jacobin en (c) Chaire, Cordelier en (b) Chœur, (a) Pulpit. Carme en (c) Cusine, & Augustine en Quire (d) Bordel, for now they say, Jesuit en (c) Kitchin

(d) Bordel, for now they say, Jesuit en (c) Kitchin Bordel, (d) Bawdy-Bordel, &c. But so much for those Gen. tlemen. Pray what are you doing now in the French Academy?

Furetiere. There are as many Follies committed there, as in any Society in the Universe; judge of the whole by this one Example. That Company was never fo highly honour'd as it is at prefent, by the particular Care that great Monarch takes of it; for which he is repaid in Flattering Panegyricks. theless, these insipid, florid Gentlemen Scold and Scratch like fo many Fish-wo. men in an Ale-house. The other day the great Charpentier fell into fuch a Passion about a Trifle, that he reproach'd the Learned Taleman of being the Son of a broken Apothecary at Rochell, to which Taleman with as much heat reply'd, Charpentier was the Son of a poor hedge Aledraper at Paris. From this Billing sgate. Language they came to Blows. Charpentier threw Nicot's Dictionary at his Adversaries Head, and Taleman threw Morery's at Charpenter's. We all wish'd heartily we cou'd have recall'd you from the Dead, to write the various Accidents of this Battel, in your Comical and Satyric Style.

Scar-

betu

Sc

they

nary

othe

'em.

Cox

clare

be fe

have

for y diffe

me,

that 1uit

only

is no

mac

Wit

Wit

Wit

An

Wi

An

W

An

n-

W

es

in 19

e-

e-

at

n

Scarron. Ha, ha, ha, had I been there they shou'd have beat the Academy Dictionary and Morery's too in pieces about each others Ears, before I wou'd have parted 'em. But I hope those two sputtering Coxcombs did each other Justice; I declare, whoever hindred it, deserv'd to be severely fin'd. Pray how did you behave your self during this Combat?

for you must know, there has been such a difference between those Gentlemen and me, concerning a Dictionary I publish'd, that it came at last to a contentious Lawsuit; but what was said on either side, only made the World Laugh at both, and is not half so diverting as the Epigram you made upon an old Lady that went to Law with you: I think I still remember it --- Thou nauseous everlasting Sow, With Phiz of Bear, and Shape of Cow, With Eyes that in their Sockets twinkle, And Forehead plow'd with many a wrin-(kle.

With Nose that runs like Common-shore, And Breath that Murders at Twelvescore: What! thou'rt resolv'd to give me War, And trounce me at the Noisse Bar,

Tho

Tho'it reduces thee to eat Thy Smock for want of cleanlier Meat: Agreed, Old Beldam! keep thy word, Twill foon reduce thee to eat T---d.

Scarron. May that be the Fate of Tale. man, Charpentier, and the rest of those Reformers of the Alphabet, and, in a more especial manner, of that Thieving Flattering Rogue * Dispreaux, who has call'd with made a faithless Poltron, a Mars; and a us Boileau. Superanuated, Lascivious Adulteres, 2 Saint. So much for that ---- But give me some little account now of your Clergy, I mean the Great, Plump Rogues, the Hogs with Mitres on their Heads, and Crosters on their Shoulders, those Janizaries of Antichrist.

> Furetiere. I know your meaning: ---Never was Nick-name given with more Justice to any Society of Men. In Normandy, and those parts, they call all the minor Clergy, as the Fat Monks, Canons, Abbots, &c. who are not Miter'd, Jesus Christ's Porkers; which distinction is not very fantastical, if we allow the other But, no more of those Gen-Expression.

tlemen, 'tis dangerous.

commonly

Scor-

betu

Sca

fo me Worl

in at and e Still-

call'c

'tis 1

Pray

cury

is m ven f

fuch

fuch

ever

not

Nev

fhio

ofte

fuch

Or

und

fucl

you

not

An

ł

S

F

t:

le.

se

a

as

a

2

re

r.

s,

s,

le

s,

us

ot

1-

1-

Scarron. Prithee, dear Abbot, be not so mealy mouth'd; when I was in the World, the greatest pleasure I had, was in attacking those Gentlemen's Vices, and exposing them to the Hereticks, that Still-born Generation of Vipers, as they call'd'em, therefore let us be free now; 'tis the only enjoyment we can have. Pray, what says your Monthly Mercury of those Gentlemen, whom the Earth is more oblig'd for Bodies, than Heaven for Souls?

Furetiere. Never fuller of who made fuch a Man a Cuckold, and who Pox'd fuch a Woman, as now; neither, were ever the Women half so Impudent; no not in the Reigns of Caligula and Nero. Never was Debauchery so much in Fashion; nor never were the Whores so often cover'd with Purple.

Scarron. Is there not in your Herd, fuch a Thing, as a tame, gentle Weather? Or what Virgil calls Dux Gregis? You understand me?

Furetiere. AWeather! Oh, fy, fy! Not fuch a Creature among 'em, I can assure you. The most Christian King, wou'd not suffer such an impersect, scandalous Animal, so much as to shew his Head in his Seraglio. 'Tis as easy to find there a pretty Woman Chast, or Hair in the palm of your hand; as an emasculated Beast amongst the Mitred Hogs: For the Dux Gregis, Virgil speaks of, we have One at the head of our Prelates, who has all the Qualities requisite for so great an Honour, tho' he has neither Beard nor Horns: And shou'd I name him, you'd be of my Opinion.

scarron. Wou'd I recollect my Memo. ry, and their Virtues, I cou'd guess within two or three; but pray, save me that labour.

Furetiere. Do you not remember a Fa. mous Song you made in praise of a Sleek, wanton Goat. Creque fait & defend L'Archeveque de Rouen.

Scarron. O, Dear! O, Dear! The Right Reverend Francis Harlay, Arch-bishop of Paris! My most Renowned

Friend! A Worthy Chief!

Furetiere. The very same; and 'tisa precious Jewel, both for Body and Soul. A Hedgebog has not more bristles than this Prelate has Mistresses; and there's not a Stallion in France that Leaps oftener.

Scar-

eur I

at P

Mai

be f

Hor

and

wha

merl

Neig of h

fome Lufe

But

Curi the v

at pi

Chr

give

hear Cour

who

Live

whil

tery.

Mon

one

So

F

he

ed

10

Ive

ho

eat

ord

m,

10-ess

me

Fa-

fa

ef.

he

ch-

ned

is a oul.

han

re's

oft-

cara

Scarron. You rejoyce my Heart, Monsieur Furetiere. He was, I remember, always at Paris, when Archbishop of Rouen. No Man sitter for that Employment. To be free, if Paris be the Hell of Hackney Horses, tis the Paradice of Whore-Masters and Hackney Whores. I can guess at what he does now, by what he did formerly. Several Ladies also, of our Neighbouring Countries, are Witnesses of his Prowess; but more especially, some of the sair English Ladies; the Luscious Morsels of a Lustful Monarch.
But on to the Rest.

Furetiere. I am willing to satisfy your Curiosity Mr. Scarron; but to run thro' the whole Herd, wou'd be too tedious at present, tho' they all deserv'd to be Chronicled: So I will only en passant, give you the History of those you have heard Preach, both at Paris, and the Court, with wonderful Applause; and who, for their Modesty and Regular Lives, had the Reputation of Saints, whilst they were only Fathers of Oratory.

Scarron. Take your own Method, Monsieur L'Abbe; but let me tell you one thing, by the way: This Place is call'd call'd the Wits Corner, but by some late Guests, because of the Smoak and Liquot, the Wits Coffee house. Now you know the Wits of all Countries Laugh at the Cler. gy in their Plays and Poems; and that the Clergy to be revenged of them, and keep up their own Reputation with the Ignorant, call them Atheists; therefore you may freely give a true description of them. All here are their Enemies; and a Priest wou'd as soon venture his Carcass in Sweden as in this Place; he dreads a Poet, as much as a Dog does a Sow. gelder.

Furetiere. Still a merry Man, Mr. Scar. ron. But to return to our Miter'd Hogs; do you remember Father le Bone, and Father Mascavon. The first is now Bishop of Perigueux, and the other Bishop of Agen.

Scarron. How! Are these two samons Preachers, those Scourgers of Pride and Immorality, got into the Herd of the Miter'd Hogs? By my Trooth, I always took them for credulous humble Weathers, Believers of what they Preach'd; tho' I know most priests seldom believe what they profess.

Fure-

beti

Ful

can fe

Man,

throu

plice,

Purity

taigne

now f

Consci

tenand

fcienc

Coun

of the

lowin

Virtu

for 1

thou

tom;

your

come

Hogs

Fath

10 br

there

but h

been Hon

Fu

Sca

late

Juor,

v the

Cler.

it the

keep

gno.

you

n of

and

Careads

Sow-

car-

gs;

ind

Bi-

10p

ous

and

the

lys

ea-

d;

ve

19.

Furetiere. Well, Mr. Scarron, tho' you can see as far through a Mill-stone as any Man, yet I find you are not infallible.

Scarron. Faith, a Man may see as far through a Mill-stone, as a Priest's Surplice, tho' 'tis reckon'd the Emblem of Purity. But, Monsieur L'Abbe, what Montaigne said formerly of the Women, I now say of the Priests: Ils envogen leur Conscience, au Bordel, & tiennent leur Contenance en regle: They send their Conscience to the Stews, and keep their Countenance within Rule.

Furetiere. 'Tis even as true of one, as of the other, Mr. Scarron; and my following discourse will verifie it. What Virtue there is in a Mitre, I know not, for I cou'd never obtain one; I was thought too good a Christian in the bottom; but before I bad adieu to Paris, your innocent, believing Apostles were become two as rampant and fine Coated Hogs as any of the Herd. The Reverend Father le Bone, Bishop of Berigueux, has so bravely plaid the County Boar, that there's not a pretty Nun in his Diocess but has been with Pig by him; as I have been credibly inform'd by Persons of Honour.

Scar-

Scarron. Oh, the excellent Apostle! I remember a Story of him when he was Bishop of Agde, which will not be unpleasant to you, if you can bear with a Pun, and a Poet's making merry with several Languages, a thing he can no more avoid than Flattery. This worthy Prelate not meeting with that plenty at Agde, his voluptuousness required, made his Monarch this Compliment: Sir, je suis ne gueux, j'ay vetu gueux, bnais s'il plait a votre Majeste, je voux PERI GUEUX.

Reward, for a very filthy Pun; I have faid Forty pleasanter things to the King, and never cou'd get beyond Monsieur l'Abbe; which makes me believe there is a critical Minute for Wit as well as Love: An excellent Roman Poet was sensible of it, when he faid,

Hora Libellorum decima est, Eupheme, (meorum, Temporat Ambrosias cum tua cura Dapes, Et lonus æthereo laxatur Nectare Cæsar.

There's a Latin Ouotation for you to

There's a Latin Quotation for you, to shew you I understand it; and that I have been an Author as well as you.

Scar-

you' and Poet Ridicyet them community

he d

nuts

F

Si

wan fee l Card him Grat Chal late,

> dezv as th

fo c Who

Bea

! 1

Vas

un-

ha

fe-

ore

re-

de,

his

ne

210-ole

ve

g, ur

15

e:

of

ne,

m,

es,

ar.

1:

7-

Scarron. Believe me, Monsievr l'Abbe, you'll fare much the better for it here; and tho' those Gentlemen made us poor Poets pass for Scoundrels and Impious Ridiculers of Piety in the other World, yet we have much the whip hand of them in these Quarters, therefore take comfort. Tell me, pray, how the pious Julius Mascaron behaves himself at Agen, where he meets with greater Plenty than he did at Thute.

Furetiere. Oh! The Acorns and Chefnuts of Agen have made him so plump and wanton, 'twould rejoyce your heart to see him. All the Females of the Town Caress him, and strive which shall yield him most Delight; and he out of Zeal and Gratitude, and to preserve Peace and Charity among them, like a Holy Prelate, has given to each her hour of Rendezvous, which they keep as regularly as the Clock strikes.

Scarron. Very well! There's nothing fo commendable as a good Method in Whoring.

Furetiere. But his Favourite is a pretty gentle Nun, with whom he often goes to Beauregard; there tete a tete, or rather me aa ne, under the shady Limes, do they

Q 2

both

both Act that which will one day procure a Third. There are Forty other better Stories of these two Prelates; for they value not what common Report says, they are above it. But if you will listen to the Exploits of the Bishop of Lacu, now Cardinal d'Estree, I will shew you what a Miter'd Hog is capable of.

Scarron. As I am acquainted with the strength of his Genius, so do I not doubt of the greatness of his Performances. You have now named a Man that would make a Parish Bull jealous!

Furetiere. The History I shall give you, will justify your opinion of him. Know then that the Cardinal de Estree, being passionately in Love with the Marchioness d' Cauvres, who was supposed to have granted to the Duke de Seaux, the liberty of Rifling her Placket, was refolv'd to put in for his Snack. To compass this, he acquainted his Nephew, the Marquiss de Cauveres, with the Scandalous Familiarity that was between the Duke and his Wife. Upon which their Parents met at Marefchal d'Estree's, where it was concluded to fend the young Adultress into a Convent; but the old Mareschal, made wiser by long Experience, was against it. In good g000 than the 1 been there the ! not ther our l fon t the I Mot then Mar you fider a M bene ence ing fupp

which

been

trea

lour

cour

my than

take

re

er

ey

79, en

W

at

ne

br

u

e

It

e.

0

n

good faith, taid he, You are more nice than wife: had not our Mothers play'd the same wanton trick, not one of us had been here. I know very well what I fay, there's not a handfom Nose, nor Leg in the Company, but has been stole; and not a farthing matter from whom, whither Prince or Coachman, it has mended our Breed; therefore we have more reafon to praise those, who discreetly follow the Examples of their Grandmothers and Mothers, than Banish 'em, and so render them fruitless. Do not suppose, when I Married my Grandson de Cauvres, to young Mademoiselle de Lionne, that I confider'd her Riches, or that her Father was a Minister of State; such Thoughts are beneath a Man of my Age and Experience. My great hopes were, that she being Young and Handsome, wou'd still support the Grandeur of our Family, which, as you all very well know, has been made more considerable by the Intreagues of the Women, than by the Valour of the Men. I'm fure I never difcourag'd what I now maintain; and why my Grandson should be more squeemish than I, or his Forefathers have been, I take it to be unreasonable: Therefore, Q3 fince blam'd for having tasted those Pleasures which Nature allows, and which are customary in our Family, I declare my self her Protector. Yet I wou'd not have this be the talk of the Court; I wou'd not have it pass my Threshold; because the World might say of one of us, as of a fine, curious piece of Clock work, that a great many excellent Workmen had a hand in.

Scarron. In this generous and considerate Speech, do I plainly discover the Inclinations of the famous Gabriele d'Estree, Harry the Fourth's Mistres: But I amin trouble for the poor Marchioness; I know a Convent must be insupportable to a Woman that has tasted the Pleasures of a Licenticus Court.

Furetiere. The Cardinal was against publishing his Niece's Wantonness, as well as the Mareschal; and took upon him the care of reprimanding her, and bringing her into the path of Virtue: To which the Marquiss de Cœuvres readily consented, not imagining he deliver'd the pretty Lamb to the ravenous Wolf. This being agreed on, the Lustful Prelate went immediately to his Niece; I come, Madam, said ble p been could you, catio and a I kno fever

be

faidh

doon a pied defer you thall > ces l if you > > that exce a Pla

> > will

Dei Bre cus

Mr

my

ly

es

u-elf

is

ot

nc

a

a

e-

n-

е,

in

W

)-

6-

as

10 ng

ch

ď,

y

ng

n:

m, id

faidhe, from doing you a very considerable piece of Service: All our Family has been in Confultation against you, and could think of no milder Punishment for you, than a Convent, with all its Mortifications, viz. Praying, Fasting, Whipping, and abstaining from the Masculine kind, &c. I know, dear Niece, this was as unjust as fevere: But, in short, it had been your doom, had I not been your Friend. Such apiece of Service as this, beautiful Niece, deserves a suitable return; and I believe you too generous to be ungrateful: but I shall think this, and all the other Services I can render you, highly recompene'd, if you'll but permit me to fee you often and embrace you.

Scarron. A very pious Speech! I hope that which is to follow will answer this excellent beginning. Now do I imagine a Place formally besieg'd: The next news will be of opening the Trenches.

Furetiere. We proceed very regularly, Mr. Scarron: The Place makes a noble Defence; and does not surrender till a Breach is made. To be thus unjustly accus'd, said the Marchioness, is a very great Missortune; and tho' I will not disown my obligation to you, yet you must permit me to fay, that your Proceeding de. stroys that very Obligation: If you will not have any Kegard to my Virtue, and the Fidelity I owe to my Husband, you ought, nevertheless, to remember your Character, and how nearly we are Related. But I know the meaning of this; you believe the fcandalous and malicious Story that has been rais'd of me, and de. fign to make your advantage of it. What can be more injurous than this attempt! Tho' you thought me a Whore, had you but thought me still Virtuous enough to abhor your Beaftly, Incestuous Propofition, I shou'd yet have had some Reason to esteem you -----

2.4 mi

Scarron. Poor Prelate! I gad, I pity thee! Thou hast receiv'd such a Bruise in this Repulse, that I cannot think thou'lt have the Courage to return to the Attack ?

rage of a Mitred Hog. The Prelate, who by his Resistance, was become more Amorous, resolved to watch so narrowly his Niece's Conduct, that he would oblige her to do That, out of Fear, which all his Rhetorick and Protestations of Love beti Love fhort Affai Seaus ne, a Daug well took I wil of th Husl had chion wou the. ique me t Gho and this !

The finds

when

in Bo

le-

ill

nd

ou

ur

la-

is;

us

le-

nat

ot!

ou

gh

00.

on

ty

in.

the

are

ou-

vho

ore

wly

ould nich of

ove

Love cou'd not tempt her to. To be short, he manag'd so well this important Affair, that he surpriz'd the Duke de Seaux in Bed, between Madam de Lionne, and the Marchionejs de Cœuvres her Daughter: And to magnify Charity, as well as other Vertues in this matter, he took Monsieur de Lionne along with him. I will leave you to imagine the Confusion of these two Ladies; the first, to see her Husband, and the other, the Man she had fo vigoroufly Repuls'd. The Marchioness thinking wifely, her Compliance wou'd yet conceal her Intrigue; taking the Cardinal by the Hand, and gently squeezing it, said, If you will promise me to appeale my Father, and by your Ghostly Authority, make my Mother and him good Friends again, and keep this Frollick from my Husband, you shall, when ever you please, find me grateful, and fensible of your Affection.

Scarron. What said Mr. de Lionne? The surprise of a poor Cuckold, who finds a handsom, brawny young Fellow in Bed with his Wife and Daughter, surprise of the passes of the surprise of the su passes my Imagination!

Furetiere.

Furetiere. If, like Action, he had been immediately Metamorphised into a Stag, he could not have been more surpris'd.

Scarron. How did the Prelate behave himself, after this Charitable brave Exploit? The Breach is now made; There has been a Parley; The Preliminaries are agreed on; nothing now is wanting but taking Possession of the Place.

Furetiere. You move very Soldier like. Mr. Scarron. The Prelate being refolv'd to perform all the Articles of Treaty, like a Man of Honour; First, Preach'd on Charity, and then Forgiveness of Crimes, then on Humane Prudence, Policy, the Reputation of their Family, and quoted fome of the old Mareschal's Remarks; which, altogether, so prevail'd on the poor Cuckold, that he confented to put his Horns in his Pocket, and forgive his Daughter: Then did the Prelate, under the Pious Pretence of Correcting his faulty Niece, lead her with a feeming austere Gravity into his Chamber, where he fummon'd her to the performance of Articles on her part; which, on a Couch, were reciprocally exchanged; she not daring to refuse it, for fear he shou'd acof Macerity Cons

bet

acqu

with

·Sc

Fu obtai be fi her c wou' that her, lent dinal ace. cause refide the Ca vingly ntrig out of o the an Inc

n her

March

Cardi

acquaint her Husband with her Intrigue with the Duke de Seaux.

ad

to 11-

re

Zx-

ere ies

ng,

ke,

v'd

ty,

on

nes,

the

ted

ks;

the

put

his

nder

his

g au-

here

ice of

ouch,

not

hou'd

ac-

Scarron. Oh, brave Hog! Worthy Prelate! Pious Cardinal! What a fine way of Mortification is this! Well, for Sincerity, Humility, Charity, Sobriety, &c. Commend me to a Prelate!

Furetiere. The Cardinal, tho' he had obtain'd his Desires, yet could not but be sensible that Fear, not Love, made her consent; therefore, doubting she wou'd return to her first Amours, or hat he shou'd have but little share of her, so contriv'd it, that her Husband ent her to a House he had in the Cardinal's Diocess, and not far from his Palace. This had a very good Effect; because the Cardinal, for the Love of her, resided always at his Diocess. Thus did the Cardinal, and his Niece, live very lovingly for two or three Years; but the intrigues of the Court calling the Prelate out of the Kingdom, Ambition stept into the place of Love, and put an end to in Incestuous Commerce, to which the Marchioness had first consented, purely in her own Defence.

Scarron. I find there are Hogs with Cardinal Caps as well as Mitres. But

I

I believe, they are not so numerous. That Dignity, perhaps, is a kind of cuth to their Licentiousness.

Furetiere. You mistake the matter, Mr. Scarron, Inclination never changes, the only reason is, there are more Bishop then Cardinals; and most of them reside at Rome, at glorious Rome, which is but one intire Stews; Sodom was not, what Rome is now. Have you forgot the famous Cardinal Bonzi? He is as absolute in Mont. pellier, as the Grand Seignior in his Seray. lio; he needs but becken to the Damele has a mind to enjoy. The brave Cardina de Bouillion, notwithstanding his Court Intrigues, is as well known in all the Bawdy-houses of Paris, as a young de bauch'd Musqueteer, or Garde du Corps, The Cardinat de Furstenberg too, was a wicked as his Purse would allow him, before I left the Town.

Scarron. I verily believe it, Monsten l'Abbe. But pray give me leave to reckon your Dignities upon my Fingers, that I may not forget them. First, there is your Porkers of Jesus Christ; then your Miter'd Hogs, and lastly your Purple Hogs. 'Tis wondrous pretty! Pray, how must we distinguish the Pope, who is Chief of this this Hoberd?

SwinePriestl.
Swinethere

betwe

worfe Fourte St. Penis Am

herefore, tory, he Int

Well,

Scar s he a by for Fur

The Anather, the Ti

Scar nour a he Pri Court in Car

greere

s:

Ct,

S;

ops

Ide

out lat

ous

nt.

18.

be

nal

urt

e.

ps.

25 eur

ec-

hat e is

OM

logs.

nust

this

this Herd? Must we call him the Swineberd? Some of them, 'tis true, were Swine-berds before they took the Order of Priesthood, as Sixtus Quintus, who was Swine-berd to the Village of Montaste. But there is another thing that puzzles me worse than all this: You know Lewis the Fourteenth calls him the Eldest Son of St. Peter. Lewis the Great then, for all his Ambition, is the Son of a Swine-berd? Well, I know not how to settle this point; therefore pray continue your History.

Furetiere. I'll make an end of my Hitory, if you are not already glutted with he Infamy of the foremention'd Prelates; with that of the Arch-bishop of Rheims.

Scarron. How, Monsieur l'Abbe, how! she a Hog too? I have heard him call'd, by some of our new Guests, a Horse.

Furetiere. You are in the right of that: The Mareschal de la Feuillade was his Godather, and one Day Honour'd him with the Title of Coach-Horse.

Scarron. A Horse, is a degree of Honour above a Hog ---- Has la Feuillade the Privelege of distributing Titles at the Court of France? Has he more Wit than in Cardinal Mazerin's Days, who always greeted him in these words, Monsieur de la

Feuil-

Feuillade, All your Brains would lye in a Nut-shell.

Furetiere. 'Tis true, there is no more Substance in his Brains, than in whipe Cream; and as that fills up the Desert, and serves to cool and refresh the Stomach after a plentiful Dinner; so does he serve to unbend and divert the Mind, after solid Conversation and Business. To prove this, I will tell you how he made the King Laugh very heartily, concerning the Archbishop of Rheims.

when she has not the Fool her Husband to divert her, will have her Monkey; so must the Great Statesman have his Bussoon. He is the same to the Politician, as a Glister is to the Man that's Costive. But, go on with your Story.

Furetiere. He being one Day with the King, looking out at a Window of Verfailles, that faces the great Road to Paris, and observing the Passengers, the King, at last, discover'd a Coach with more, as he thought, than Six Horses; and turning to la Feuillade, praising the Equipage, ask'd him if it was not the Archbishop of Rheim's Livery: Yes, Sir, said la Fevillade. I can discover but seven Horses, reply'd ply'd de, the tend that he resolved for the

has r great La Fe the Ki Furning;

not fa
Brute,
omnes
fairs of

rope , i from l from l you w

Scar Read t Horfes then n cessor

ply'd the King: Oh! Sir, said la Fevillade, the Eighth is in the Coach. But I pretend to degrade this Archbishop, and prove, that he's but a Mitred Hog, as well as the rest of his Brethren.

Scarron. Ah! Dear Monsieur L'Abbe, for the Love of Monsieur le Tellier, who has render'd his King and Country such great Service, take not from the Honour La Feuillade confer'd on him, and with the King's Approbation.

re

pt

rt,

0.

es

id,

S.

he

n-

7:

nd

Y;

is

ti-

t's

7.

he

er-

ris

vg,

, 29

rn.

ge,

of

vil-

re-

ly'd

Furetiere. Plead not so earnestly for him; but hear me with patience. I do not say, but the Archbishop of Rheims is a Brute, a very Animal, a Coach Horse, per omnes Casus; but yet he pursues the Affairs of Love, with as much Zeal, and as little Conscience, as any Prelate in Europe, therefore must not be distinguished from his Brethren. Besides, if you take from him his lawful Title of Miter'd Hog, you will hinder his Preferment.

Scarron. Oh! By no means. I have Read that Caligula honour'd one of his Horses with the Title of Senator; why then may not the Pope, who is the Successor of that Emperour, call into his Senate your Coach-Horse?

Furetiere. With all my Heart. Never. theless, I'll call him if you please, Mi. ter'd Hog, as I did the Bishop of Lagn before he was Cardinal d'Estree. Now to matter of Fact: The Dutchess d'Au. mont having furpriz'd one of her Cham. ber-Maids, in a very indecent posture, with the Marquiss de Villequier her Son. in-Law, turn'd her out of her Service. The poor Wench, distracted to find her felf separated from her Lover, told him, out of pure Revenge, that the Archhistop of Rheims lay with the Dutchess, every time the Duke went to Versailles. How! My Uncle! Ah! I cannot believe it; thou fay'st this out of Malice.

Scarron. Oh, fy! Oh fy! The Archbishop of Rheims Debauch the Dutchess of Aumont, his Brother-in-Law's Wife! Do not you plainly perceive this Jades Malice? If the Dutchess had but suffer'd her Intrigue with the Marquis, she wou'd not have open'd her Mouth? Oh, horrible! Oh, horrible!

Furetiere. As much as you feem to wonder now, and abhor the Thoughts of fuch doings; you were not formerly fo very Nice, nor Incredulous

Scar-

i' Ab as y pray F that mof belie her Duke conv knov to ft as it noor gone Roo ber, up w Hand quiss

Sc or fo felf I good

more

ship.

Fi Were Scarron. Be not Angry, good Monsieur i' Abbe; I do believe as bad of a Priest, as you can desire to have me; therefore, pray continue.

ver.

Mi-

low

Auam-

are,

onice.

her

im,

hop

ry

w! it;

bi-

Do

la-

r'd

he

)h,

to

of

fo

Furetiere. By what follows, you'll find that the Spirit of Revenge discover'd a most luscious Intrigue. Since you will not believe what I say, reply'd the Wench to her Gallant, I will, the next time the Duke goes to Versailles, make your Eyes convince you. The Dutchess you must know, had imprudently given her leave to stay three or four days in her House; as it happen'd the Duke went that Afternoon to Court; who was no fooner gone, and the Marquiss plac'd in a Dark Room leading to the Dutchess's Bed-chamber, but by comes the Archbishop, Muffl'd up with a Cloak and a Dark Lanthorn in Hand: This convinc'd the Young Marquiss; and was enough to convince a more incredulous Man than your Worship.

Scarron. It was perhaps some Phantome, or some amorous Devil, who to do him-self Honour, had taken the Archbishop's goodly Form, and sanctified Mien.

Furetiere. Still excusing the Priests! you were not such an Advocate of theirs in the other World: Witness your Answer to your Parish Priest, some few hours before you pack'd up for this Place.

R

the

Scarron. I have since drank a swinging draught of Lethe's forgetful Stream; Iremember nothing of it: You wou'd, perhaps, scandalize me.

Furetiere. It was thus, Sir, The grave Hypocrite administring the last Idolatrous Ceremonies, ask'd, if you knew what you receiv'd; to which you made this short Answer: The Body of your God carry'd by an Ass.

Scarron. 'Tis true, 'tis true, Monsieur l' Abbe; Pray, who can endure to be dissurb'd by an impertinent Coxcomb, when he's going to take along Voyage? But go on; I'll not speak one Word more in their behalf.

Furetiere. The Marquiss convinc'd by what he had seen, went the next Moning to Versailles, and told all the young Nobility of his Acquaintance, what had pass'd; which by being buzz'd about, in Four and twenty Hours became the talk of all the Court.

Scarron. Oh, brave Archbishop of Rheims! was no Body worthy being made a Cuckold by you, but your Brother-in-Law?

Fure-

ron, fifte there the

infa vou Pra

the bein d' A Cre to her fou don her

Ga it i

cer

itl

he

ver

be.

ing

re-

er-

ve

us

JEI

nis

11-ur

li-

en

0 ir

y

n-

ıg

ad

in k

s!

a

n-

Furetiere. Again mistaken, Mr. Scarron, for the Charitable Archbishop has assisted his Nephew too, as well as his Brother-in-Law; and intends to go round the Family.

Scarron. The Devil! This is the most insatiable Hog I ever heard of! He devours both the Hen and her Chickens. Pray, excuse me, Monsieur l'Abbe; I cannot but think you wrong him now.

Furetiere. You may judge of that by thefollowing Relation. The Archbishop being passionately in Love with Madam d' Aumont his Niece, and the Marquis de Crequi's Wife, was refolv'd, the better to infinuate himself with her, to make her jealous of her Husband, which he found no difficult matter to do. This done, he went to vifit her, and finding her Melancholy, faid, Madam, I know no reason you have to be so much concern'd at your Husband's Infidelity, fince it lies in your Power to be Reveng'd? If he has a Mistriss, why don't you get a Gallant? I know no Injustice in it; and it is the only recompending Counfel I can give you.

Scarron. Ah! Marchioness, have at ye! I find the Hog grows rampant ---- Go on, good Sir,: This is like a brave Metropolitan.

Furetiere. The young Marchioness did not listen to this Proposition; but on the contrary, was furpris'd to find her Uncle, an Archbishop make a motion, which had The been inclin'd to follow, he ought to have given her more virtuous Advice. Perceiving her Aversion to his Proposition, he suspected she might suppose he only faid it to try her Inclinations, therefore he was refolv'd to declare his Mind in more intelligible Terms; which he did in fo Amorous a Style, that the Marchioness plainly perceiv'd the Archbishop intended to have a share in the Revenge. But the young Lady, tho' she wou'd not have made any scruple of it, had it not been for his Character, was infinitely concern'd at it.

Scarron. Notwithstanding all this, do I see the Purple Victorious, and the poor Victim prostrate.

Furetiere. As the Archbishop made her frequent Presents, and she expected great Advantages at his Death, so she did not think it Prudence to mortify him too much;

muci made to b

ter (he p and

So

as w don' Prop by Wiv who offer who is a constraint of the triber of the triber

Ma

teo

much; this fill'd him with Hopes, and made him more amorous: Therefore, to blind the Husband, and have a better Opportunity of Lying with his Wife, he propos'd taking them into his Palace, and defraying all their Charges.

Scarron. Money is the Sinew of Love as well as War. The Poor Marquiss, I don't doubt, was blinded with this fine Proposal. More Men are made Cuckolds by their own Follies, than by their Wives.

0-

d

le

d

0

Furetiere. So it prov'd by our Cuckold, who was fo transported at the beauteous Offer of the Archbishop, supposing it an Uncle's Kindness, not a Lover's, that he, every where boafted of it: That is to fay, he thought himself oblig'd to his Uncle, for Lying with his Wife at that Price. The Mareschal de Crequi his Father, had quite another Opinion of that matter; and was affronted at the excessive Liberalties of the Archbishop, knowing that the most Devout and Zealous of their Tribe were Adulterers, Incestuous and Sodomites. He complain'd of it to the Marquis Louvois, who told him, Coveteousness was the Reason of his Com-The Mareschal not fatisfy'd with plaint. this this answer, went to the King, who immediately Commanded the Archbishop to retire into his Diocess. The disconsolate Archbishop, whilst all was preparing for his Journey, went to Visit his Niece, and with Tears, desir'd her ever to Remember, that it was for the Love of her he was Banish'd.

Scarron. Cou'd the Afflictions of the Living affect me, I shou'd be mightily concern'd for the Grief of this poor Prelate, who was oblig'd to leave so dear, so pretty a Niece; a Niece that afforded him so much Pleasure and Delight, Have you not lest behind you, other Miter'd Hogs, whose Lives and Conversations are worthy your Remembrance? Those you have already been so kind to relate, have been a Banquet to me; and I heartily wish I may always meet with such Entertainment.

I am extreamly pleas'd they have Diverted you; and that you may promise your self such another Entertainment, nay, Twenty such, be assured, that there is not a Bishop, Archbishop, or Cardinal, that is not as very a Hog, as either the Archbishop of Rheims, or Cardinal d'Estree, except

cept barre

betu

felf a in Fit Lepr

two bisho

and a ving wort

fome those Live

rubb to g

Thro V of A

and keep you

of f

l'Al

cept the Bishop of Escar, who lives in a barren Soil, and can scarce afford himself a Belly-full of Chesnuts above once in Fifteen Days. Poverty is a kind of Leprosie; not a fair sleek Female will come near him. The reason why I entertain you with the Histories of these two Prelates, rather than of the Archbishop of Paris, the Bishop of Meaux, the Bishop of Beauvais, the Bishop of Valence, and all the other Bishops, is, because having heard the famous Actions of those worthy Metropolitans, faithfully related fome few Days before my Departure, those Ideas are the most Present and Lively. But in Time, and with a little rubbing up my Memory, I may be able to give you the Lives of all the Miter'd Hogs. Besides, as we have now settled Three Couriers weekly, from this Place to Versailles, because of the Importance of Affairs now on Foot, I expect now and then a Packet; so I don't doubt of keeping my word, and often diverting you with Stories of the like nature, and of fresher Date.

Scarron. 'Tis very obliging, Monsieur l'Abbe: But your last Paragraph has put an odd Whim into my Noddle.

R 4 This

r

t

The Mitred Hog: A Dialogue

This Place, as I told you before, is now call'd the Wits Coffee house; none but Authors are sent hither. What think you if we shou'd join our Heads together, and digest all your stories and Intelligence into Form; If we shou'd compile a Book of them, we cou'd make it very diverting, having able Men both for Verse and Prose, whose very Names wou'd give it the Reputation of a faithful History; because the Dead, neither hoping nor fearing any Thing from the Living, cannot be suspected of Flattery and Partiality, as they justly were when in the World.

Furetiere. I protest, a noble Thought! The Lives of the Roman Prelates, will make a most Curious History! We have a famous History of the Roman Emperors; and why shou'd we not then have another of the Roman Prelates, since they as justly deserve to be transmitted to Posterity?

BEAU

B

Broti

C

Dea

De at i

for rer

Si

BEAU NORTON

TO HIS

Brothers at HYPOLLITO'S

IN

COVENT-GARDEN.

By Captain ATLOFF.

Dearly Beloved Brothers of the Orange-Butter-Box.

Would foon be satisfied what mighty Changes we suffer by Death; and that there is no two things at more distance from one another, than to Be, and not to Be. You know how Roman like, I took Pett, and dar'd to die; for Time had bejaded me a little, and to renounce the Tyranny of the Fickle Goddels, I was oblig'd to renounce your Light. Since my arrival at the Grim Tartarian Territories, I have receiv'd the usual

Compliments of the Place; and tho' the most accurate Courtiers that ever were bred at Versailles, and all the Wits of the most Gallant Courts in the Universe, are here in whole Shoals, yet to my great Wonder and Amazement, not one of them faid a gentile thing to me: But with a strange familiar Air, that favour'd much of our Bear-garden Friendship, some a Hundred or two hall'd me by the Ears. and puffing out thick Clouds of flaming Sulphur, cry'd all with a hoarfe and difmal Voice, Well, Daily, this was kindly done of thee, to take the Pas avance of Destiny; and shew the World, that no Man need be Miserable, but who is afraid to die: I was (amongst Friends) as much out of Countenance at this fawcy Proceeding, as when our old Friends, Shore and La Rocha, refus'd to lend me five paultry Guineas, after I had equip'd them with more than one Thousand a piece. I wondred at the roughness of their accueil, and they burst out a Laughing at the impertinency of my Astonish-Well, Gentlemen, give me leave to tell you, that if I had but suspected a quarter part of this inhumane and ungentleman-like Reception, I wou'd have fufuspe and l perio than into havir Vani into conce rits; not b nable ble F they to ha fore muc belo Thin the ! to m men Dar difp and

respe migl

Cha

fuspended the Honours of my Self-facrifice, and have chosen rather to wait the faral period of Life in a more contracted Orbe, than thus fuddenly have plung'd my felf into fo stringing a Disappointment. having allotted me my Portion for my Vanity and Foppery, and I had been put into possession of my Shop, you cannot conceive how heavy it lay upon my Spirits; but suffer it I must; and if it had not been the odiousest and most abominable, most nauseous, and most execrable Function I cou'd have labour'd under, they wou'd not have been fo merciful as to have enjoyn'd it me. 'Twas long before I cou'd obtain leave to infinuate thus much to you; for they are no ways here below inclin'd to grant any the minutest Thing imaginable, that may contribute to the benefit of Mankind. Jo. Haines came to me, (and his Breath had as much augmented its stench, as Light is different from Darkness; In a word, there was as great a disproportion for the worse, as between us and you) and with a display'd pair of Chaps, told me, I must not have any Correspondency with the Upper Regions, for it might tend to the dispeopling the Acherontic Territories; and that I was a Bubble, to think they had not as much of Self-Interest there below, as any Merchant, Statesman, Lawyer, or Nobleman in all the Dominions above. But feeing my, and your old Acquaintance (Gentlemen) I took heart a little and held my Nose; and after some usual Ceremonies (to which he made but a Scurvy return) I told him, Look you Mr. Haines, you know, as well as I, that those Powder'd Members of the vain Fraternity are all of them incorrigible; prefent smart and future fear affects them not; they are out of the reach of good Advice; Reason was never their Talent; for if they were ever in Election to have a thought, as it wou'd be the first, so wou'd it be the fatallest too: Cou'd any Glass but shew them to themselves as really they are, they wou'd all despair like me, and die like me. A fly young Whelp of the second Class of Pluto's Foot-Men, said, Well, Mr. Haines, there may be much in what he fays, he came last from thence, therefore let him make an end of his Epistle, it may turn to better Account than we are aware of. I thank'd the Gentleman for his Civility, and wou'd have administred a Half-Crown; but hard ry N wha

but '

that

laid

and

first

my .

my .

diou

you

are

fello

That

Wor

as I

fmal

have

cate

far,

but there

Cha

ten,

Rev that

Dep

but you know (my Worthy Brothers) that the last Twelve Shillings I had, was laid out in Three Glasses of Ratifiat and a Bottle of Esfence; with which, I first Comb'd out my Wigg, then clean'd my Shoes, and then Oyl'd the Locks of my Pistols, and so set out for this tedious and lugubrous Journey: And that you may fee, that Pluto's Skip-kennels are not fo infolent as yours are, the fellow told me, with a malicious Smile, That if the Powder'd Gentry of th' other World were so very dispicable Animals, as I represented them, he wou'd take a fmall Toure with me, and then I might have fomething material to communicate to them. We had not walk'd fo far, as from the Chocolat-house to the Rose, but in a narrow, obscure, obscene Ally, there hung out a piece of a Broken Chamber-Pot, upon which was Written, in Sulphurious Characters, Fleshly Relief for the Sons of Adam. I had hardly made an end of Reading this Merry Motto, but the Door open'd, and what shou'd my Eyes behold, but a Reverend Lady of Illustrious Charms, that gave us too visible Proofs of the Depredations of Time: I recollected her

y

in er

ď

nd

n;

her Phiz, as Engineers tell by the very Ruins, whether the Fabric, were Doric or Ionic, &c. and who shou'd this be, but the celebrated fair Rosamond; her present Occupation was to be Runner to this Baw. dy Coffee-House. Queen Elenor, her mortal Enemy, sells Sprats, and has her Stall in Pluto's Stable-Yard. In my Perigrination, I met several Things unexpected, and therefore furprifing; I shall not give you the trouble of every particular dark Passage we went through, but in general Terms, relate the most memorable Things that occur'd, during a very confiderable walk that we had together. Taking a folitary Walk on the Gloomy Banks of Acheron, I met a finical Fellow Powder'd from Top to Toe, his Hands in his Pocket, a-la-Mode de Paris, humming a New Minuet; and who shou'dit be, but Gondamour, that famous Spaniard. Hellen of Greece, cry'd Kitching-Stuff; and Roxana, had a little Basket of Tripe and Trotters; Agamemnon Sold Bak'd Ox Cheek, hot, hot; Hannibal fells Spanish Nuts, Come Crack it away: The so famous Hector of Troy, is a Headdresser; the Decii keeps a Coblers Stall in the Corner of the Forum; and the Horatii

Hor Crie balu this a B Que fals and ing; Pom Mar at th now key, fwal it wa mits of f Lux folv' doub is no half well lew a fides

but

fcore

need

Horatii a Chandlers Shop; Sardanapalus Cries Lilly-White-Vinegar, and Heliogabalus Bakers Fritters in the Via Appia of this Metropolis; Lucius Emilius Paulus is a Bayliff's Follower, and the famous Queen Tomyris, Proportions out the Offals for Cerberus; Tarquin Sweeps his Den, and Romulus is a Turnspit in Pluto's Kitching; Artaxerxes is an under Scullion, and Pompey the Magnificent, a Rag-Man. Mark Anthony, that disputed his Mistress at the Price of the whole Universe, goes now about with dancing Dogs, a Monkey, and a Rope; Cleopatra, that cou'd fwallow a Province at one Draught, when it was to drink her Lovers Health, fubmits now to the humble Employment of feeding Proserpine's Piggs. Luxurious Roman, who was once so diffolv'd in Ease, as that a very Rose Leaf doubled unto him, prevented his rest, is now Labouring at the Anvil with a half hundred Hammer. Oliver Cromwell is a Rat Catcher, and my Lord Bellew a Chimney Sweeper: There was, befides these, a List of People nearer Hand; but you may eafily guess upon what score they are left out of the List. We needed not have gone so far back in the Records

y ŋ.

It

a-

g

of

bld

lls

he ad-

tall

the

atii

Records of Persons and Things, to have met instances of Barbarity, Luxury, A. varice, Lust of Dominion, as well as of Sensuality; Malversations of Government in Sovereigns and Subjects; Pub. lick Justice avoided; Private Fewds fo. mented; every thing Sacrific'd to a Col. bert, Maintenon, or a Louvoi. There is some Body Hallows most damnably on th'other fide of Styx, and lest I lose this Oppor. tunity, I shall only relate some Memorable things to you: Therefore, pray pardon me, that I cannot dilate upon every particular. In short then, Alexander the Great, is Bully to a Guinea-Dropper; and Cardinal Mazarine keeps a Nine Holes. Mary of Medicis Foots Stockings; and Katharine Queen of Swedeland cries Two Bunches a Penny Card-Matches, Two Bunches a Penny. Henry the Fourth of France carries. A Rary Show; and Mahomet Musles. Seneca keeps a Fencing-School; and Julius Cafar, a Two-Penny Ordinary. Xenophon, that Great Philosopher, cries Cucumbers to Pickle; and Cato is the perfecteft Sir Courth of the whole Plutonian Kingdom. lieu cries Topping Bunno; and the late Pope, Any thing to Day. Lewis the Thirteenth tee phu mo mu ter alas Plea grac Hyp than Que Alm Van de f This for i to fa of r of n

are n

the (

Tem

of N

of

1-

)-

).

1-

le

·

y

er

)-

a

ed-

ne

;

a

at e; of

ite

ir-1th

teenth is a Corn-Cutter; Gustavus Adolphus cries Sparagrass; with a Thousand more particulars of this Nature. You must allow the Scenes to be mightily alter'd from their former Stations; but, alas! Sir, this Change we fuffer, and as Pleasure is the reward of Virtue, so Disgrace and Infamy is of Cruelty, Pride and Hypocrify. What can be more furprising, than to see the Renowned Penthesilea, Queen of the Amazons, crying, New Almanacks! and Darius, Ginger-bread! Van Tromp cries Ballads; and Admiral de Ruyter, Long and Strong Thred Laces. This disproportion is their Punishment: for it must be Auxious to the last degree, to fall so low, even beyond a possibility of rifing again. That is the Advantage of moving in an Humble Sphere; they are not capable of those Enormities that the Great Ones can hardly avoid; for Temptation will generally have the better of Mankind. I rest Yours, in hast.

FROM

S

FROM

Sir Bartholomew----

TO THE

Worshipful Serjeant S----

By the same.

HE Friendship that was between us formerly, equally obliges me to give you a Relation of my Travels, and affures me of its Welcome. Since my Perigrination from your Factious Regions, I have pass'd over various and stupendious Lakes; the Roads are somewhat dark indeed, but the continu'd Exhalations of those amazing Streams, make the Traveller able to pass, without running foul upon one another. But 'tis equally remarkable, considering the length and darkness of the Passage, that no Person was ever cast away on this River Styx, as I am credibly inform'd by the Ferry-man, who has ply'd here, time out of Mind. The Fogs are pretty rife in this Country, and full as insufferable as ever they were among you: I unfortunately forgot my Lozenge-Box, and have much impair'd my Lungs; but they they Rheu test, the I Place Parts there bigge comi tertai in Co in all of the Iimn there of Ser Sove who, has a Mile River stern ty in the la no fo those heard nour

Frien

has v

they assure me, that these Defluxions or Rheums never kill. 'Tis prodigious, I protest, Brother, to see how soon we learn the Language, or rather Jargon of the Place! How fast they come in from all Parts of the Habitable World! And yet there is but one Boat neither, and that no bigger then above Bridge-Wherry. At my coming a-shore, I was very familiarly Entertain'd, and directed to an Appartment in Cocytus: But there was not one corner in all my passage, but I met some or other of the wrangling Fraternity of Westminster. I immediately suggested to my self, that there might be (peradventure) a Call of Serjeants by his Majesty Pluto, who is Soveraign of these Gloomy Regions; and who, besides his general Residence here, has a most magnificent Palace about 20 Miles off, at Erebus, on the fide of the River Phlegiton. He is one of a somewhat stern Aspect, not easie of Access; haughty in his Deportment, and barbarous to the last degree in his Nature. There is no fort of People he fets fo much by, as those of our Profession, tho' I have not heard of any Lawyer that had the Honour to be in his Cellar as yet. Our old Friend and Fellow-Toper Judge D----has very good bufiness here, upon my word,

f

r

n

le

a-

y

re

n-

u:

ey

word, as likely to be preferr'd as Vacancies happen; for 'tis always Term Time in this Kingdom throughout; and besides, when he had his Quietus fent him by the Hands of Sir Thin Chaps mors, you and I remember very well, that he had not the best Reputation for a Man of Parts. In the Crowd of our Pains-taking Brethren in the Litigious School, I remark'd an innumerable quantity that I was not quite an utter stranger to their Faces: More particularly, Mr. Fil--- Who, you know, did not want for Sense, Wit, Law and good Manners; and yet had to profound a Genius, that he cou'd dispatch more Business, and more Wine in one Night's time, than Bob Weedon wou'd have wish'd for a Patrimony: He very humanly accosted me, and after a Million of mutual Civilities, he forc'd me to accept of my Mornings Draught with him. At night, you know, I never refuse my Bottle; but for Morning Tippling, it was always my Aversion, my Abomination, my Hatred, my Nole me tangere: Besides, the difmal Prospect of the Place, gave me many shrode Suspicions that those Taverns were not furnish'd with the best Accommodations, neither for Man's Meat, or Horse Meat either; not that I had the Vanity Var but hav had Civ mig men was kno Pra con ver the and con ver of t wo (b Wi No ma dre Co de de H

M

YO

m-

in

es,

he

nd

10t

ts.

re-

10t

es:

ou

W

ch

ne i'd

ry

on

ac-

m.

ny

as

n,

es,

me Ta-

est

at,

ne

ty

Vanity to take my Coach with me neither. but 'tis to use an old Proverb, that as yet I have not blotted out of my Memory. I had hardly difengag'd my felf from his Civilities, but Mr. Nicholas Hard---mighty gravely admonish'd me of his former familiarity, and with an Air, that was no ways Contumelious, defir'd to know how F---- Preach'd, and Burg----Pray'd; whether the Grave Doctor W---continu'd his Pious Endeavouas, to Convert the Martyr'd Men of his Parish from the crying and hainous Sin of Ebriety; and yet, at the same Instant, almost, to contrive Plaufible Ways and Means of perverting the Modest and Chast Propensities of their respective Wives; and while they wou'd not quietly let their Husbands be (by accident of good Company, or good Wine) Beafts, for but a few Transitory Nocturnal Hours, cou'd yet strive to make them so beyond a possibility of Redress; for among Friends (Brother) What Collateral Security can an Honest, Prudent, Wary, Wise, Good, Upright, Understanding, Cautions, Indulgent, Loving Husband take, when that same godly Man in Black, twirls his primitive Bandstrings, and with the other Hand, has your dear Spouse, your Help Mate, the Wife

Wife of your Bosom, the Partner of your Bed, by the Conscience, and somewhat else that begins with the same Letter? 'Twas not want of leifure (for alas and alack) we have supernumerary Hours here; but pretended Curiosity (the last thing that dies with us but Hypocrifie) made me cut short the Harangue that this precise Attorney seem'd by his demureness to expect from me: So, in short, I told him, that his Fellow Companions at Six-a-Clock Prayers had not forgot him; and by what I cou'd understand from those that were last with me, the Pew-keeper lamented his Lois extreamly; nay, was inconfolable: For now he was forc'd to use a Pailful of Water, extraordinary once a Week more in the Church than formerly; because he had gotten to such a perfection in Hypocrify, that what his Knees did not rub clean, his Eyes always wash'd clean: But for his Father's Comfort, fince he was got clear of his Super-Tartarian concerns, Money was fallen, and his dearest Darling Sin of all, Extortion, was not a little under the Hatches: But that he might not be quite cast down, there was some seeds of it left still, that wou'd always keep old Charon well employ'd. I had hardly blest my self for having got rid of him, but

fav Elo tio Pla an is ' La

bu

Ind We Ca all La

> of Cr cr te

m Ba fu m

Po te he th

fo I

T a

t

but a merry Fellow (not to fay impertinent and fawcy to one of my Capacity, Volubility and Eloquence; Character, Conduct and Reputation) pull'd me by the Coif; but as in strange Places'tis prudence to pass by small Affronts and indignities, because want of Acquaintance is worse than want of Knowledge; and the Law, you know Brother, is not fo expensive, as it is captious in the Main; not but that our Industry does help it mightily to be the one, if we find it to be the other. Now who shou'd this Cattif be, but Harry C-ffthe Attorney; and all his mighty Business was to know how his Landress did; and if the Maid got the better of her in the Legacy, he gave her for her last Consolations. Before I could recollect the Secret History of his Amours, I was very courteously address'd by Mr. Common Serjeant C--p, who likewife, in a florid Stile, requested me to inform him, if any of his Modern Bawds, that so punctually attended him, had fuffer'd any prejudice by his absence: He was mightily in doubt of their fuccess, because Experience had taught him, that Paupers in matters of Law proceed but heavily; however he could but wish them well, because, that tho' they were bad Clients, he had always found them good Procurators --- My Lady Tisiphone made a sumptuous Entertainment, and the Countess of Clotho Danc'd smartly; the King of Spain refented mightily that fo many English were there, and had almost bred a Quarrel; but Don Sebastian King of Portugal, made up the Matter, by the declining the Spanish Faction, and said, it was highly unjust just that the English should be maletreated in their Universal Interest, because he was a Fool, and the Cardinal that made his Will, a Knave, and the King of France a Tyrant. But the Catastrophe of this Fit of the Spleen of the Supercilious Spaniard was Comical enough; for in the Crowd that was come together upon the Notice of this Heart-burning, who shou'd stumble upon one another, but Godfrey Woodw--- the Attorney, who you may remember (Brother) was committed, for faying to a certain Lord Cha- That he was his first Maker; tho' the Truth of the Matter was, their Intimacy at Play, made him prefume to beg the small favour of his Lordship, to pass an unjust Decree in favour of his Client. Well, Sir, faid the Attorney to his Lordship, now you are without your Mace, I must tell you, that had you not invited me to Supper the same day you fent me to the Fleet. I should have taken the freedom to have let you known, that in this King's Dominions we are all Equal: I left 'em hard at All-fours for a Quart of Acheron, where they bite their Nails like mad, and divert others with their Pattion and Concern: - But the Postillion is mounting, and I must defer the rest of my Adventures to the next Opportunity.

of sols to hill rt, et is sir r